JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Judges are appointed by the Crown. The Supreme Court, sitting in Oslo, deals with both civil and criminal cases.

Attorney-General: BJÖRN HAUG.

Supreme Court, Oslo: Pres. ROLV RYSSDAL.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Bergen: Pres. HANS FR. MARTINUSSEN.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Oslo: Pres. JENS FAGERENG.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Skien: Pres. KRISTEN SYVERTSEN.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Tromsø: Pres. JON FJALSTAD.

CIVIL

In each municipality there is a Conciliation Court (Forliksråd) consisting of three members elected by the municipal council for four years. As a rule, no case may be taken to a court of justice without mediation having been attempted by a Conciliation Court. In addition to mediation, the Conciliation Court has a judicial capacity and is intended to settle minor cases in a simple manner without great expense to the parties involved.

The ordinary lower courts are the District and Town Courts (Herredsrett, Byrett), which decide all cases not adjudicated upon by the Conciliation Court, and they also act as courts of appeal from judgments given in the Conciliation Court. The cases are adjudicated by a judge or magistrate, who sits either alone or with two lay judges.

Judgments delivered in the District and Town Courts may be taken, on appeal, to the Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett or "Lagmann's" Courts) or to the Supreme Court (Høyesterett). In the Courts of Appeal cases are judged by three qualified judges, but if requested by one of the parties, lay judges may be summoned.

The Supreme Court sits in Oslo and decides cases in the last instance. Five judges here participate in judging an appeal case.

CRIMINAL

The criminal courts are: Examining Courts (Forhørsretten), the District and Town Courts, Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett) and the Supreme Court. In the Examining Courts the professional judge presides alone, but in the District and Town Courts two lay judges also sit. The more serious criminal cases must be brought directly before the "Lagmann's" Court. Cases originating in the lower courts may be retried by the Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett) when the question of guilt is at issue; otherwise they are appealed directly to the Supreme Court. The "Lagmann's" Court is presided over by three legally qualified judges, who judge the case with the assistance of a jury of ten jurymen. For the accused to be pronounced guilty, at least seven jurymen must vote that he is so.

The Supreme Court (Høyesterett) is the Court of Final Appeal. In criminal cases the competence of the Court is, however, limited to questions concerning the application of the law, the nature of the penalty, and procedural errors of the lower court.

Capital punishment has been abolished, except for certain military and treasonable offences in time of war.

OMBUDSMAN

Since the office was introduced by law in 1963, an Ombudsman has been elected by the Storting every four years. The Ombudsman provides a free service to all citizens to "try and ensure against the public administration committing any injustice to the individual citizen" and "that civil servants and others employed in the state administration do not make mistakes or fail in their duties". His field of activity does not cover private legal affairs, and he does not have the right to reverse an official decision. In practice, however, his pronouncements are normally complied with.

RELIGION

The Evangelical Lutheran Church is the established Church of Norway and is endowed by the State. The King is the head of the Church and nominates its clergy. There are 10 dioceses, 90 archdeaconries and some 600 clerical districts.

The salary and pensions of clergy are fixed by law, and clergymen are economically independent of the members of their congregation.

The Evangelical Lutheran State Church: Bishops: KAARE STOEYLEN, Oslo; ALEX JOHNSON, Hamar; PER LÖNNING, Borg; DAGFINN HAUGE, Tunsberg; ERLING UTNEM, Agder; OLAV HAGESAETHER, Stavanger; PER JUWKAM, Björgvin; T. GODAL, Nidaros; BJARNE O. WEIDER, Sør-Hålogaland; KRISTEN KYRRE BREMER, Nord-Hålogaland.

The United Methodist Church: Northern Europe Area, which includes Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden; f. 1856; 35,000 mems.; see Sweden.

The Norwegian Baptist Union: f. 1860; 6,523 mems.; Gen.-Sec. KÅRE LAUVENG, Hausmannsgt. 22, Oslo 1.

The Lutheran Free Church of Norway: f. 1877; 19,160 mems.; Head and Chair. of Synod Rev. LEIF NILSEN, Sornesv. 19, 6000 Ålesund; Sec. EIGIL ALHEIM, Synod Office, Josefines gt. 5, Oslo 3.

The Roman Catholic Church: 11,000 members; Diocese of Oslo (est. 1953): Bishop Rt. Rev. J. W. GRAN, Akersveien 5, Oslo 1; Vicariate Apostolic of Central Norway (est. 1953): Bishop Rt. Rev. JOHANNES RÜTH, Prinsengate 2 a 2, Trondheim; Vicariate Apostolic of North Norway (est. 1955): Bishop Rt. Rev. JOHANNES WEMMER, Storgaten 94, Tromsø.

THE PRESS

The principle of press freedom is safeguarded in the Norwegian Constitution. There is no law specifically dealing with the Press; newspapermen are subject like any other citizen to the penal and other laws. Editors bear wide responsibility in law for the content of their papers, especially regarding such matters as libel. Although a journalist is legally entitled to conceal his source he may be required to disclose this information under penalty of imprisonment; but such instances are rare.

A three-member Council of Conduct gives judgements in cases of complaint against a paper or of disputes between papers. It has no powers of enforcement but its judgements are highly respected. The Press Association has a Code of Ethics aimed at maintaining the standards and reputation of the profession.

Norway has 156 newspapers with a total circulation of 1,884,200. Of these 77 are dailies accounting for some 1,553,100 copies. A few very large papers are responsible for the bulk of this circulation; the average daily sells some 5,000 copies. The non-dailies mostly appear three times a week, averaging 3,000 copies.

The Eastern region is the scene of most press activity. Oslo has eight dailies (total circulation 815,000 in 1974) which are especially influential throughout this area, and four of these—Aftenposten, Verdens Gang, Dagbladet and Arbeiderbladet—have a national readership. Nevertheless, in Norway's chief cities the large local dailies easily lead in their own districts. There are no Sunday newspapers but on Saturday the dailies usually have an extra large edition.

Daily and non-daily newspapers are characterized by a high proportion of serious and informative matter such as cultural, historical and economic articles, for the newspaper profession in Norway has traditionally felt its mission to be partly educational.

There are almost 2,000 periodicals with an estimated total circulation of two million copies. Women's magazines are particularly popular and make up over a quarter of this circulation figure.

There are no major publishing chains; newspapers are mainly privately owned. Most of the big papers are owned by corporations whose shares are held by individuals and political parties. The Labour Party and the Norwegian Federation of Trade Unions (LO) own and subsidize the Labour press. Certain papers with Conservative sympathies such as Morgenbladet are subsidized by the Conservative holding company, Libertos, but many Conservative papers insist on being financially independent. The chief organs of the parties are Aftenposten (Conservative), Dagbladet (Liberal), Nationen (Centre) and Arbeiderbladet (Labour).

A number of medium-sized papers which have been experiencing economic difficulties receive financial help from private individuals, parties and other organizations. Some papers economize by engaging in a form of co-operation by which two papers sometimes with different political views, share the news copy while carrying different headings, editorials and sometimes one or two different pages. A State loan fund was set up in 1972 to ease newspapers' credit problems.

In 1974 the most popular newspapers were, in order of circulation, Aftenposten (Oslo), Verdens Gang (Oslo), Dagbladet (Oslo), Bergens Tidende, Adresseavisen (Trondheim), Arbeiderbladet (Oslo) and Stavanger Aftenblad.

The privately owned Conservative Aftenposten leads in prestige, followed by Arbeiderbladet, having a high standard of political coverage. The leading popular papers are Verdens Gang and Dagbladet. Outside the capital one should note among the serious papers Stavanger Aftenblad and Bergens Tidende.

POLAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Situated in Eastern Europe the Polish People's Republic is bounded to the north by the Baltic Sea, to the west by the German Democratic Republic, to the south by Czechoslovakia and to the east by the U.S.S.R. The climate is temperate. Most of the population is Roman Catholic but there are 13 other religious denominations, the largest being the Polish Autocephalous Orthodox Church. The language is Polish. The national flag (proportions 8 by 5) has two horizontal bands of white and red. The capital is Warsaw.

Recent History

A people's democracy was set up after the defeat of the German forces in 1944. Under the Potsdam Agreement signed by the major Allied powers in 1945, the former German territories along the line of the rivers Oder and Neisse and now forming one-third of Poland's total area, came under Polish sovereignty. Józef Cyrankiewicz led a Communist-dominated government elected in 1947, with Władysław Gomułka as deputy premier. As the control of the Communists increased and allegiance to the Soviet Union strengthened, Gomułka was dismissed. The Government's strict control eased slightly with the death of Stalin, but no significant change was felt until 1956, when "bread riots", started by the industrial workers of Poznań, brought a political crisis which resulted in Gomułka's return to office. Soviet intervention was resisted by the new leaders and a period of liberalization followed in which control of the army was given to Poles, the secret police lost much of its power, political prisoners were rehabilitated, the collectivization of agriculture was stopped, censorship was eased and freedom of movement was restored. This period of relaxation was followed by a tightening of control, although Poland remained more liberal than most other members of the Communist bloc.

In December 1970 "bread riots" again broke out in three Baltic towns, sparked off by a sudden increase in food prices and by a feeling of dissatisfaction with economic affairs generally. The situation led to the resignation of several leading members of the Government, including Gomułka, who was succeeded as First Secretary of the Workers' Party by Edward Gierek. The latter strengthened his position in 1971 with several government reshuffles, and by giving priority to raising living standards and involving the working class in economic management. As a result of elections held in March 1972, most of Gomułka's former supporters were removed from the Government and from the Sejm. Subsequently the Government has continued to pay careful attention to the economic needs of the population and to adopt a tolerant line on religious and cultural issues.

The steady improvement in foreign relations reached a peak in September 1972 when, following the signing of a treaty with Federal Germany in December 1970 and its subsequent ratification by the Bonn parliament, diplomatic relations were established between the two countries.

Earlier in the same year, the Vatican had normalized relations by recognizing Poland's post-war frontiers.

Government

The supreme legislative organ is the Sejm (Parliament), a unicameral body elected by all citizens of 18 years and over for a four-year term. From its number the Sejm elects the members and President of the Council of State. Supreme executive power lies with the Council of Ministers, who are appointed or recalled by the Sejm. The Council of Ministers is responsible for its activities to the Sejm and to the Council of State between sessions of parliament. The Supreme Chamber of Control exercises state control. It is responsible to the Sejm and the Council of State, but remains independent of the government whose activities it supervises.

Defence

Poland is a member of the Eastern European Mutual Aid Treaty (the Warsaw Pact). Military service lasts for two years in the army and air force, and for three years in the navy. The strength of the armed forces in 1974 was 303,000: army 220,000, navy 25,000, air force 58,000. There are also 73,000 security and border troops. The defence budget for 1974 totalled 45,200m. zlotys.

Economic Affairs

Poland is one of the world's leading agricultural nations. Although co-operative and state farms exist, 53.5 per cent of agricultural land remains in private hands. Livestock production is important, and meat and meat products such as ham, bacon, sausage, etc. make significant contributions to Polish exports. The principal crops are rye, wheat, oats, sugar beet and potatoes. Polish farming provides about 8 per cent of European agricultural production.

Nevertheless, Poland now finds itself in a phase of intensive industrialization based on socialist principles. Over 70 per cent of the country's population now earns its living in industry and non-agricultural activities, and industrial growth is among the ten fastest in the world. Poland is one of the world's richest countries in copper and sulphur deposits, and there are also deposits of natural gas. Coal output was 156.6 million tons in 1973, of which 35.9 million tons were exported. Poland ranks among the world's ten leading shipbuilding nations and is the fourth largest exporter of ships. Other important industries are textiles, engineering, steel, cement, chemicals and foodstuffs. The main exports are coal, ships, steel and clothing.

Many of the targets of the 1966-70 Five-Year Plan were not achieved. This Plan aimed to increase industrial production by more than 40 per cent, raise the standard of living, modernize economic structure and expand foreign trade. The 1971-75 Five-Year Plan, drawn up during the latter part of 1970, aims at concentrating industrial effort on increasing exports and satisfying the home market. With management of the economy more in the hands of the working class, industrial production was planned to increase by nearly 50 per cent over the five-period, while real incomes were to rise by 18 per cent. These targets have already been exceeded. Total agricultural production rose from 305,476 million zlotys in 1970 to 440,615 million in 1973; industrial production increased from 1,167,866 million zlotys to 1,580,812 million over the same period. National income increased by 32.9 per cent in the first three years of the plan which envisaged a 40 per cent increase over the five-year period. Food prices have been frozen since 1970, and are planned to remain so at least until the end of 1975.

Poland is a member of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA), and a contracting party to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). About 60 per cent of Poland's foreign trade is with Eastern Europe and about 30 per cent with the Soviet Union.

Transport and Communications

Transport is by rail, road, inland waterway and air. There are nearly 27,000 km. of railways, 4,700 km. of which are electrified. There are about 90,000 km. of main roads in Poland and 4,573 km. of navigable waterways. The Polish airline LOT maintains internal and international services to the Middle East and throughout Europe and U.S.A. There are three large ports on the Baltic coast at Gdynia, Gdańsk and Szczecin. A merchant fleet of 289 ships in 1973 with a displacement of nearly 1,709,100 gross tons runs services to Great Britain, the Middle East, South America, the Far East, Scandinavia, North America and Australia.

Social Welfare

The Polish social welfare system is controlled by the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare. Locally the system is administered by the Health and Social Welfare Departments of the Presidiums of the People's Councils. Medical care is provided free for all workers and rural population. There is a special system of dispensaries for infants, women and school children, as well as an all-embracing industrial health service. Health services for pregnant women have improved; women in Poland receive maternity leave with full pay, free time for nursing, and free medical care. Social relief benefits are available to all who are in need. These benefits take the form of either cash payments, goods or services. Cash payments are made to invalids, old people without retirement pay, or any person who is unable to provide for himself. Benefits in kind are supplied to the needy; these take the form of food, clothing, fuel, medicine, dressings, etc. The Polish Red Cross organizes and carries out the care of the sick at home and general home assistance to those who are incapacitated through ill-health, etc. Alimony is assured by law to single mothers who are unable to enforce payment of alimonies due to them. Pensions are organized and managed by the Union of Pensioners, Invalids and Retired Persons. Special houses for social relief are a basic part of the Polish social welfare system. These include homes for pensioners and the aged, homes for blind people, for the mentally deficient, and for those suffering from chronic disease.

Education

Education is free and compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 14 years. Before the age of 7, children may attend creches (złobki) and kindergartens (przedszkola); however, there are not enough of this type of school to meet the demand. Basic schooling begins at 7 years of age when a child enters the eight-year school (szkola podstawowa). Curricula are uniform throughout Poland and prepared with a view to continuity between each level. There is a small number of private schools run under state supervision. On completing his compulsory education at the eight-year school the child is free to go to work. Secondary education is free to candidates successful in the entrance examination and more than 90 per cent of pupils continue their studies. Of these, 79 per cent go to vocational and technical schools (technika zawodowa), or to basic vocational schools (zasadnicze szkoły). The latter kind, organized by both the government and by work establishments, provide three-year courses consisting of three days theoretical and three days practical training per week, and in addition some general education is given. Those leaving the basic vocational school generally go straight into industry, agriculture, etc. Vocational technical schools provide five-year courses of general education and vocational training together, and can lead to qualifications for entering higher educational establishments. The remaining 25 per cent of children who leave the eight-year school to continue with their education enter general secondary schools (liceum ogólnokształcące), where four-year courses lead to college or university entrance. Here, as in vocational technical schools, the student may receive his leaving certificate (Matura). There are 88 higher educational establishments in Poland, including ten universities and 18 technical universities. Current expenditure from the government budget on education for 1973 was expected to be about 40,876 million zlotys.

Tourism

The Polish Tourist Society is responsible for tourism and itself maintains about 250 tourist hotels and hostels throughout the country. Poland is rich in historic cities such as Wrocław, Cracow and Warsaw. There are 30 health and climatic resorts while the mountains, forests and rivers provide splendid scenery and excellent facilities for sporting holidays. Poland was visited by 6,912,400 foreign tourists in 1973. Tourists enjoy a favourable exchange rate of about 80 zlotys to £1.

Sport

Sport in Poland is directed by the Central Committee of Physical Culture and Tourism and the Polish Sports' Federation, and every sport discipline has its own union. In 1973 these unions had a total membership of 3,548,108. The most popular sports are football, boxing, and cycling.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (Labour Day), May 9th (Victory Day), May 29th (Corpus Christi), July 22nd (Polish National Day), November 1st (All Saints' Day), December 25th and 26th (Christmas).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), April 19th (Easter).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 groszy = 1 zloty.

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 7.80 zlotys;

U.S. $1 = 3.35 zlotys.

THE CONSTITUTION

Political Structure

Article 1—(1) The Polish People's Republic is a State of People's Democracy.

(2) In the Polish People's Republic, the power belongs to the working people of town and country.

Article 2—(1) The working people rule the State through their representatives elected to the Sejm (Parliament) of the Polish People's Republic and to the People's Councils on the basis of universal, equal and direct suffrage by secret ballot.

(2) The people's representatives in the Sejm of the Polish People's Republic, and in the People's Councils, are responsible to their constituents and may be recalled by them.

Article 3—The Polish People's Republic:

(1) safeguards the achievements of the Polish working people of town and country and protects their power and freedom against forces hostile to the people;

(2) secures the development and continuous growth of the productive forces of the country by industrialization and through elimination of economic, technical and cultural backwardness;

(3) organizes a planned economy based on enterprises constituting social property;

(4) limits, ousts and abolishes those classes of society which live by exploiting the workers and peasants;

(5) ensures a continual rise in the welfare, health and cultural level of the people;

(6) secures an all-round development of national culture.

Article 4—(1) The laws of the Polish People's Republic express the interests and the will of the working people.

(2) Strict adherence to the laws of the Polish People's Republic is the fundamental duty of every organ of the State and of every citizen.

(3) The functioning of all organs of State power and administration is based on the rule of law.

Article 5—All organs of State power and administration are supported in their work by the conscious and active co-operation of the people, and they are bound:

(1) to account to the nation for their work;

(2) to examine carefully and take into consideration, in accordance with existing legislation, reasonable proposals, complaints and wishes of the citizens;

(3) to explain to the working people the chief aims and guiding principles of the policy of the people's authority in the diverse fields of State, economic and cultural activity.

Article 6—The armed forces of the Polish People's Republic safeguard the sovereignty and independence of the Polish nation and its security and peace.

Social and Economic Structure

Article 7—(1) The Polish People's Republic, on the basis of socialised means of production, trade, communications and credit, develops the economic and cultural life of the country in accordance with the National Economic Plan, and, in particular, through the expansion of Socialist State industry, which is the decisive factor in the transformation of social and economic relations.

(2) The State has the monopoly of foreign trade.

(3) The principal aim of the planned economic policy of the Polish People's Republic is the constant development of the productive forces of the country, the continuous raising of the standard of living of the working people and the consolidation of the power, defence strength and independence of the country.

Article 8—The national wealth—that is, the mineral deposits, waters, State forests, mines, roads, rail, water and air transport, means of communication, banks, State industrial establishments, State farms and State machinery centres, State commercial enterprises and communal enterprises and utilities—is subject to the special care and protection of the State and of all citizens.

Article 9—(1) The Polish People's Republic strengthens in a planned way the economic union between town and country, founded on brotherly co-operation between workers and peasants.

(2) For this purpose, the Polish People's Republic secures a continuous increase in the production of State industry, serving to meet the all-round needs of the rural population both as producers and consumers; at the same time planning the constant growth of production of agricultural commodities, supplying industry with raw materials and the urban population with foodstuffs.

Article 10—(1) The Polish People's Republic protects the individual farms of working peasants and assists them in order to protect them against capitalist exploitation, to increase production, raise the technical level of agriculture, and improve their welfare.

(2) The Polish People's Republic gives special support and all-round aid to co-operative farms set up, on the principle of voluntary membership, as forms of collective economy. By applying methods of efficient collective cultivation and mechanised work, collective farming enables the working peasants to reach a turning point in production and contributes to the complete elimination of exploitation in the countryside and to a rapid and considerable rise in its welfare and culture.

(3) The main forms of State support and help for co-operative farms are State machine stations which make possible the application of modern techniques, and State credits on easy terms.

Article 11—The Polish People's Republic promotes the development of different forms of the co-operative movement in town and country and gives it every help in the fulfilment of its tasks. It also extends special care and protection to co-operative property as constituting public property.

Article 12—The Polish People's Republic recognises and protects, on the basis of existing legislation, individual property and the right to inherit land, buildings and other means of production belonging to peasants, craftsmen and persons engaged in domestic handicrafts.

Article 13—The Polish People's Republic guarantees to citizens full protection of personal property and the right to inherit it.

Article 14—(1) Work is the right and the duty of, and a matter of honour for every citizen. By their work, by the observance of work discipline, by work competition and the perfecting of methods of work, the working people of town and country increase the strength of the country, raise the level of well-being of the nation and hasten the full realisation of the socialist system.

(2) Work champions enjoy the respect of the whole nation.

(3) The Polish People's Republic puts into practice, to an increasing degree, the principle: "From each according to his ability, to each according to his work".

The Supreme Organs of State Authority

Article 15—(1) The supreme organ of State authority is the Sejm of the Polish People's Republic.

(2) The Sejm, which is the highest representative of the will of the working people of town and country, gives form to the sovereign rights of the nation.

(3) The Sejm passes laws and exercises control over the work of other organs of State authority and administration.

Article 16—(1) The Sejm is made up of 460 deputies.

(2) The validity of the election of a Deputy is confirmed by the Sejm.

(3) A Deputy may neither be brought before a Court, nor arrested, without the consent of the Sejm, and when the Sejm is not in session, without the consent of the Council of State.

Article 17—(1) The Sejm meets in sessions. The Council of State convokes a session of the Sejm at least twice a year. Likewise, on a written motion by one-third of the total number of Deputies, the Council of State is bound to convoke a session.

(2) The first session of a newly-elected Sejm must be convoked within a period of one month from the date of the elections.

Article 18—(1) The Sejm elects from among its members a Chairman, Deputy Chairmen, and Committees.

(2) The Chairman or his deputy presides over the debates and supervises the course of the work of the Sejm.

(3) The debates of the Sejm are open to the public. The Sejm may vote the holding of a secret session if this be required in the interests of the State.

(4) The order of work of the Sejm, the kind and number of committees, are defined by rules of procedure adopted by the Sejm.

Article 19—(1) The Sejm adopts the national economic plans for a period of several years.

(2) The Sejm adopts the State budget every year.

Article 20—(1) The right to propose legislation is vested in the Council of State, the Government and the Deputies.

(2) Acts passed by the Sejm are signed by the President and Secretary of the Council of State. Acts are published in the Journal of Laws by order of the President of the Council of State.

Article 21—The Sejm may appoint a Committee to examine a specified matter. The terms of reference and procedure of the Committee are established by the Sejm.

Article 22—The Chairman of the Council of Ministers or individual Ministers are bound to answer, within seven days, a question put by a Deputy.

Article 23—(1) The Sejm is elected for a term of four years.

(2) The decision to hold elections to the Sejm is adopted by the Council of State not later than one month before the expiry of the term of office of the Sejm, the polling day to be fixed on a day free from work within two months after the expiry of the term of office of the Sejm.

Article 24—(1) At its first sitting, the Sejm elects a Council of State composed of the President of the Council of State, four Deputy Presidents, the Secretary of the Council of State, and eleven Members.

(2) The Chairman and Deputy-Chairman may be elected to the Council of State as Deputy Presidents or as Members.

(3) After the expiry of the term of office of the Sejm, the Council of State acts until the election of a Council of State by the newly-elected Sejm.

Article 25—(1) The following functions are vested in the Council of State:

- (i) the ordering of elections to the Sejm;
- (ii) the convocation of sessions of the Sejm;

- (iii) the establishment of universally binding interpretation of laws;
  - (iv) the issuing of decrees with the force of law;

(11) directs the work of the executive and administrative organs of the People's Councils.

Article 33—(1) Ministers direct specified branches of State administration. The powers and duties of Ministers are determined by law.

(2) Ministers issue orders and ordinances in pursuance of laws and for their execution.

(3) The Council of Ministers may rescind an order or ordinance issued by a Minister.

The Local Organs of State Authority

Article 34—(1) The organ of State authority in communes, towns and boroughs of larger towns, counties and voivodships, is the People's Council.

(2) The organ of State authority in a town which does not constitute a county, and the neighbouring commune can be the common People's Council.

(3) The Council of State can define other cases in which the organ of State authority in two units of territorial division is the common People's Council.

(4) The People's Councils are elected by the population for a term of four years.

Article 35—The People's Councils express the will of the working people and develop their creative initiative and activity in order to increase the strength, prosperity and culture of the nation.

Article 36—The People's Councils strengthen the links between the State authority and the working people of town and country, drawing increasing numbers of the working people to participate in governing the State.

Article 37—Within their scope, the People's Councils direct economic, social and cultural activities by linking local requirements with the general tasks of the State.

Article 38—The People's Councils take constant care of the everyday needs and interests of the population, combat any manifestations of an arbitrary or bureaucratic attitude towards citizens, carry out and promote social control over the activities of offices, enterprises, establishments and institutions.

Article 39—The People's Councils are in charge of the maintenance of public order and watch over the observance of the people's rule of law, protect public property, safeguard the rights of citizens and co-operate in strengthening the defences and security of the State.

Article 40—The People's Councils make full use of all local resources and possibilities for all-round economic and cultural development of the area for satisfying to an increasing degree the needs of the population as regards supply and services, as well as for the expansion of institutions and establishments in the field of public services, education, culture, hygiene and sport.

Article 41—The People's Councils adopt local economic plans and local budgets.

Article 42—(1) The heads of organs of administration are: voivodes, mayors of cities and heads of towns, heads of districts, heads of boroughs and heads of rural communes.

(2) Local organs of administration are subordinate to superior organs, and when executing tasks assigned by a People's Council, to the People's Council.

Article 43—The People's Councils appoint commissions for different spheres of their activity. The commissions of People's Councils maintain constant and close links with the population, mobilise it for co-operation in implementing the Council's tasks, exercise public supervision on behalf of the Council and submit proposals to the Council and its organs.

Article 44—(1) A People's Council rescinds the decision of a People's Council at a lower level or of its Presidium, if this decision is in conflict with the law or incompatible with the basic line of the policy of the State.

Article 45—The details of composition as well as terms of reference of and rules of procedure of People's Councils and their organs are established by law.

The Courts and the Public Prosecutor's Office

Article 46—(1) The administration of justice in the Polish People's Republic is carried out by the Supreme Court, Voivodship Courts, District Courts, and Special Courts.

(2) The structure and competence of and procedure in the Courts are laid down by laws.

Article 47—The Courts pronounce judgment in the name of the Polish People's Republic.

Article 48—The Courts are custodians of the structure of the Polish People's Republic, they protect the achievements of the Polish working people, safeguard the people's rule of law, public property and the rights of citizens, and punish offenders.

Article 49—Except in cases specified by law, people's assessors take part in the hearing of cases and the pronouncement of judgment.

Article 50—(1) Judges and people's assessors are elected. (2) The procedure of electing and the term of office of judges and assessors of Voivodship and District Courts are established by law.

(3) The procedure of appointment of judges of special Courts is established by law.

Article 51—(1) The Supreme Court is the highest judicial organ and supervises the activity of all other Courts.

(2) The scope and procedure of exercising supervision by the Supreme Court is established by law.

(3) The Supreme Court is elected by the Council of State for a term of five years.

Article 52—Judges are independent and subject only to the law.

Article 53—(1) Cases in all courts of the Polish People's Republic are heard in public. The law may specify exceptions to this principle.

(2) The accused is guaranteed the right to a defence counsel, either of his own choice or appointed by the Court.

Article 54—(1) The Chief Public Prosecutor of the Polish People's Republic safeguards the people's rule of law, watches over the protection of public property and ensures that the rights of citizens be respected.

(2) In particular, the Chief Public Prosecutor supervises the prosecution of offences endangering the system, security and independence of the Polish People's Republic.

(3) The scope of the Chief Public Prosecutor is established by law.

Article 55—(1) The Chief Public Prosecutor of the Polish People's Republic is appointed and recalled by the Council of State.

(2) The mode of appointing and of recalling Public Prosecutors, subordinate to the Chief Public Prosecutor, as well as the principles of organisation and procedure of organs of the Public Prosecutor's Office are established by law.

(3) The Chief Public Prosecutor accounts to the Council of State for the activity of the Public Prosecutor's Office.

Article 56—The organs of the Public Prosecutor's Office are subordinate to the Chief Public Prosecutor of the Polish People's Republic and in the execution of their duties are independent of local organs.

Fundamental Rights and Duties of Citizens

Article 57—The Polish People's Republic, by consolidating and multiplying the gains of the working people, strengthens and extends the rights and liberties of citizens.

Article 58—(1) Citizens of the Polish People's Republic have the right to work: that is, the right to employment paid in accordance with the quantity and quality of work done.

(2) The right to work is ensured by the social ownership of the basic means of production; the development of a social and co-operative agricultural system, free from exploitation by the planned growth of productive forces; by the elimination of sources of economic crises; and by the abolition of unemployment.

Article 59—(1) Citizens of the Polish People's Republic have the right to rest and leisure.

(2) The right to rest and leisure is assured to manual and professional workers by the reduction of working hours by law, by an eight-hour working day, by statutory free days and by annual holidays with pay.

(3) The organization of workers' holiday schemes and the development of tourism, health resorts, sports facilities, houses of culture, clubs, recreation rooms, parks and other leisure time facilities, create possibilities for healthy and cultural relaxation for an increasing number of working people of town and country.

Article 60—(1) Citizens of the Polish People's Republic have the right to health protection and to aid in the event of sickness or unfitness for work.

(2) This right is being put into effect on an increasing scale through:

- (i) the development of social insurance for manual and office workers to cover sickness, old age and incapacity for work; the development of various forms of national assistance, and the development of the State-organized protection of the health of the population, the expansion of sanitary services and the raising of the health standards in town and country, and improvement of safety conditions.

Article 61—(1) Citizens of the Polish People's Republic have the right to education.

(2) This right is ensured on an increasing scale by:

- (i) universal, free and compulsory primary schools;
- (ii) a constant development of secondary schools providing general or vocational education and of universities;
- (iii) the help of the State in raising the skill of citizens employed in industrial establishments and other places of employment in town and country;
- (iv) a scheme of State grants and scholarships, the development of hostels, boarding schools and students' hostels as well as other forms of material aid for the children of workers, working peasants and professional workers.

Article 62—(1) Citizens of the Polish People's Republic have the right to benefit from cultural achievements and the right to participate in the development of national culture.

(2) The right is ensured on an increasing scale by developing and making accessible to the working people of town and country, books and press, radio, cinemas, theatres, museums and exhibitions, houses of culture, clubs, and recreation rooms, by a universal fostering and promoting of the cultural creative activity of the people and by the development of creative talents.

Article 63—The Polish People's Republic fosters the all-round development of science, based on the achievements of the most advanced thought of mankind and of progressive thought in Poland—of science in the service of the nation.

Article 64—The Polish People's Republic takes care of the development of the Arts and Letters which express the needs and aspirations of the nation and which are in accord with the best progressive traditions of Polish creative thought.

Article 65—The Polish People's Republic extends special protection to the creative intelligentsia—to those working in the fields of science, education, literature and art, as well as to pioneers of technical progress, to rationalizers and inventors.

Article 66—(1) Women in the Polish People's Republic have equal rights with men in all fields of public, political, economic, social and cultural life.

(2) The equality of the rights of women is guaranteed by:

- (i) equal rights with men to work and pay according to the principle, "equal pay for equal work", the right to rest and leisure, to social insurance, to education, to honours and decorations, to hold public posts;

(ii) mother-and-child care, protection of expectant mothers, paid holidays during the period before and after confinement, the development of a network of maternity homes, crèches and kindergartens, the extension of a network of establishments for services and for communal feeding.

Article 67—Marriage and the family are under the care and protection of the Polish People's Republic.

Article 68—The Polish People's Republic pays especially careful attention to the education of youth and guarantees the widest possibilities for development.

Article 69—(1) Citizens of the Polish People's Republic, irrespective of nationality, race or religion, enjoy equal rights in all fields of public, political, economic, social and cultural life. Infringement of this principle by any direct or indirect granting of privileges or restriction of rights on account of nationality, race or religion, is subject to punishment.

(2) The spreading of hatred or contempt, the provocation of disputes, or the humiliation of man on account of national, racial or religious differences, are forbidden.

Article 70—(1) The Polish People's Republic guarantees freedom of conscience and religion to its citizens. The Church and other religious bodies may freely exercise their religious functions. It is forbidden to prevent citizens from taking part in religious activities or rites. It is also forbidden to coerce anybody to participate in religious activities or rites.

(2) The Church is separated from the State. The principles of the relationship between Church and State as well as the legal and patrimonial position of religious bodies are determined by laws.

(3) The abuse of freedom of conscience and religion for purposes endangering the interests of the Polish People's Republic is punishable.

Article 71—(1) The Polish People's Republic guarantees its citizens freedom of speech, of the press, of meetings and assemblies, of processions and demonstrations.

(2) The granting to working people and their organisations of the use of printing shops, stocks of paper, public buildings and halls, means of communication, the radio, and other indispensable material means, serves to put this freedom into effect.

Article 72—(1) In order to promote the political, social, economic and cultural activity of the working people of town and country, the Polish People's Republic guarantees to its citizens the right to unite in public organizations.

(2) Political organizations, trade unions, associations of working peasants, co-operative associations, youth, women's, sports and defence organizations, cultural, technical and scientific associations, as well as other social organizations of the working people, unite the citizens for active participation in political, social, economic and cultural life.

(3) The setting up of and participation in associations whose aims or activities are directed against the political and social structure or against the legal order of the Polish People's Republic are forbidden.

Article 73—(1) Citizens have the right to approach all organs of the State with complaints and grievances.

(2) Complaints and grievances of citizens shall be examined and settled in a speedy and just manner. Those guilty of protraction or of displaying a soulless and bureaucratic attitude towards the complaints and grievances of citizens will be held responsible.

Article 74—(1) The Polish People's Republic guarantees to its citizens the inviolability of the person. The citizen may be deprived of his freedom only in cases specified by the law. A detained person shall be set free unless within forty-eight hours from the moment of his detention a warrant of arrest issued by the Court or Public Prosecutor has been handed to him.

(2) The law protects the inviolability of the home and the privacy of correspondence. Search of the home is permissible only in cases specified by law.

(3) Property may be confiscated only in cases determined by law, by virtue of a final judgment by the Court.

Article 75—The Polish People's Republic grants asylum to citizens of foreign countries persecuted for defending the interests of the working people, for struggling for social progress, for activity in defence of peace, for fighting for national liberation or for scientific activity.

Article 76—It is the duty of citizens of the Polish People's Republic to abide by the provisions of the Constitution and laws, to maintain socialist labour discipline, to respect the rules of social intercourse and to discharge conscientiously their duties towards the State.

Article 77—(1) It is the duty of every citizen of the Polish People's Republic to safeguard and to strengthen social property, which is the unshakable foundation of the development of the State and the source of the wealth and might of the country.

(2) Persons who commit sabotage or economic subversion or who otherwise encroach on social property, are punished with all the severity of the law.

Article 78—(1) To defend the country is the most sacred duty of every citizen.

(2) Military service is an honourable patriotic duty of citizens of the Polish People's Republic.

Article 79—(1) Vigilance against the enemies of the nation and the diligent guarding of State secrets is the duty of every citizen of the Polish People's Republic.

(2) High treason—espionage, subverting the armed forces, desertion to the enemy—is punished with the severity of the law as the gravest of crimes.

Principles of Electoral Law

Article 80—Elections to the Sejm and to People's Councils are universal, equal, direct, and carried out by secret ballot.

Article 81—Every citizen who has reached the age of eighteen, irrespective of sex, nationality and race, religion, education, length of residence, social origin, profession, or property, has the right to vote.

Article 82—Every citizen, who has reached the age of eighteen, is eligible to be elected to People's Councils, and every citizen who has reached the age of twenty-one is eligible to be elected to the Sejm.

Article 83—Women have electoral rights on equal terms with men.

Article 84—Citizens serving in the Army have electoral rights on equal terms with civilians.

Article 85—Persons of unsound mind as well as persons deprived of public rights by a decision of the Court do not have electoral rights.

Article 86—Candidates to the Sejm and candidates to the People's Councils are nominated by political and social organisations uniting citizens in town and country.

Article 87—It is the duty of Deputies to the Sejm and of members of People's Councils to report to the electors on their work and on the activity of the body to which they have been elected.

Article 88—The procedure for nomination of candidates and for holding elections as well as the procedure for the recall of Deputies to the Sejm and of members of People's Councils are established by law.

Coat-of-Arms, Colours and Capital of the Polish People's Republic

Article 89—(1) The coat-of-arms of the Polish People's Republic is a white eagle on a red field.

(2) The colours of the Polish People's Republic are white and red.

(3) The details are established by law.

Article 90—The capital of the Polish People's Republic is Warsaw, the city embodying the heroic traditions of the Polish nation.

Procedure for Amending the Constitution

Article 91—The Constitution may be amended only by a law passed by the Sejm of the Polish People's Republic by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the votes, not less than half the total number of Deputies being present.

Article 28 has been twice amended (1954 and 1957).

In November 1973 the Sejm introduced an amendment to the Constitution concerning a new role for, and organization of, people's councils. The people's councils will be responsible for decisions of primary significance for the local population. They will control the activity of all local administrative and economic bodies in their region. Voivodes, city presidents and district, town and village community heads will be the top authorities in the respective local government bodies.

THE PRESS

The Polish Press is probably the most distinctive in Eastern Europe. It was nationalized in 1946 along with the other communications media and remains under strict government control. The majority of newspapers and magazines are published by the Communist Party (Polish United Workers' Party).

Freedom of the Press is guaranteed by the 1952 constitution, yet is subject to general control by administrative bodies. The government dictates general policy on what appears in Polish newspapers, and they must still follow the Party line. However, Poland has long been one of the more nationalistic of the Communist Bloc countries, and this spirit is still evident in the Press. As long ago as 1954, the problem of the country's development became an important theme in the Polish Press: More and more editors have expressed Poland's national awareness of the currents of European thought. It has resulted in the Polish Press becoming slightly more objective than its East European counterparts, more representative of public opinion, and more aware of a responsibility to its readership. This national awareness has produced a Press with a far more individual character than elsewhere in Eastern Europe. Poland has always had close affinities with the West, and a considerable Western influence is evident in its newspapers and periodicals. Trybuna Ludu (circ. 820,000), the Party daily, has published display advertisements since 1957 and in some papers they now take up to 20 per cent of the total space. Express Wieczorny (circ. 500,000) and Życie Warszawy (circ. 318,000) have a particularly Western appearance. Perspektywy (circ. 270,000), a weekly magazine, is similar.

In 1973 there were 44 daily newspapers in Poland with a total circulation of 7.8 million. Trybuna Ludu is the most influential daily newspaper. There are well over two thousand periodicals having a combined circulation of 28.9 million copies.

The Polish Press Agency (PAP) receives news from foreign agencies, both from Tass and Western agencies.

The Central Photo Agency (CAF) provides a picture service for the whole of the Press in Poland. The Polish Interpress Agency specializes in information for foreign publishers and journalists.

There are 23 trade unions, each of a general type covering administrative and industrial workers in a particular branch of industry, with an aggregate of over ten million members. United under the Central Council of Trade Unions, the unions play an important part in the development of a socialist economy and of the culture and education of the working people and in the management of factories and other establishments. Trade Union representatives exert direct influence on the system of wages and on income tax rates. Working conditions are supervised and inspected regularly by labour inspectors from the Central Labour Inspection Office and, in addition, a social labour inspector is appointed by each trade union works' council. Disputes are regulated by an Arbitration Commission composed of representatives of the trade unions and of the administration, as well as by Labour Courts, attended by trade union representatives. The industrial health service is under the control of the unions which run health centres and sanatoria for their members. Sociological research is also carried out by the unions and the results used in decisions of policy on wages, housing and general welfare.

The trade unions provide cultural facilities on a large scale in the form of houses of culture, clubs, recreation rooms, and libraries; they support drama and musical enterprises, and help further members' education by running evening courses, trade courses and workers' universities. The Working People's Holiday Fund is directly controlled by the unions which arrange holidays for members and their families at a cost proportional to their earnings.

There is close co-operation between the Polish Trade Unions and those in other countries as well as with the World Federation of Trade Unions and international bodies such as UNESCO.

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Portuguese Republic lies on the Atlantic side of the Iberian peninsula, bordered by Spain to the north and east. The climate is mild and temperate with an annual mean temperature of 16°C (61°F). In the interior the weather is drier and hotter. The language is Portuguese. Roman Catholicism is the religion of the majority of the people. The national flag (proportions 3 by 2) carries two vertical bands of green and red, the green occupying two-fifths of the total area, with the state coat of arms superimposed. The capital is Lisbon.

Recent History

The regime of the Estado Novo (New State) began in 1926, giving considerable stability to the country, at the expense of certain freedoms. Portugal was admitted to the United Nations only in 1955 in the face of suspicion of fascism and hostility towards her colonialist policies.

In 1968, Dr. António Salazar, Prime Minister since 1932, was succeeded by Dr. Marcello Caetano. The new Government pursued a policy of cautious expansion, while maintaining the corporative basis of government. In August 1971 constitutional amendments concerning the press, religious freedom and the status of the overseas provinces were voted by Parliament. The overseas provinces were granted greater autonomy in their internal affairs in 1972, Angola and Mozambique acquiring the status of statehood.

On April 25th, 1974, Gen. António de Spínola came to power in a bloodless coup d'état initiated by the Movimento das Forças Armadas (MFA, Armed Forces Movement), a group of young army officers. He became President on May 15th and promised liberal reforms, a civil government and free democratic elections. In July Brig. Vasco dos Santos Gonçalves replaced Prof. Adelina da Palma Carlos as Prime Minister. Gen. Spínola resigned in September following a split between left and right-wing factions in the MFA, and was replaced by Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes.

Elections for a constituent assembly are to be held in April 1975, in which all democratic parties can participate. The new government has laid down certain rules and limitations: political strikes are now illegal, some control is being exercised on the press and the right of assembly is limited. Leaders of formerly prohibited left-wing parties have returned and, for the first time, the Communist Party is represented in the Cabinet.

In September 1974 Portugal acknowledged the independence of Guinea-Bissau. Negotiations between the government and nationalists from other African provinces resulted in the promise of independence for these territories in 1975.

Government

Following the coup d'état in April 1974, the 1933 Constitution was suspended and both the National Assembly and the Corporative Chamber were dissolved. The executive power is exercised by the Head of State appointed by the Junta de Salvação Nacional, and the Council of Ministers. The Head of State has the power to appoint the Prime Minister and the Ministers, who are proposed by the Prime Minister. The Constituent Assembly to be elected in April 1975 will draw up a new constitution.

Defence

Military service is compulsory and lasts for between twenty-four and forty-eight months. Portugal is a member of NATO. Total strength of the Armed Forces is 204,000, of which about 137,000 were in Portuguese Africa. Defence expenditure in 1974 was 24,000 million escudos—about 38 per cent of total expenditure. The defence budget for 1975 is 19,000 million escudos (25 per cent of the total budget) and the aim is to reduce defence expenditure progressively.

Economic Affairs

Portugal was traditionally an agricultural country exporting wines, wood products and textiles but in recent years agricultural production has fallen, due to an inefficient farming system, lack of mechanization and drought. The Government plans to end the feudal tenant farming system, raise living standards in rural areas and encourage former soldiers and young people to enter rural areas which are at present seriously underpopulated. The Government is encouraging industrial diversification, especially into heavy industry. Ship-building has expanded greatly since 1964.

The Sines development area south of Lisbon continues to expand, with a port, oil refineries, petro-chemical, fertilizer and steel plants, ship-building and repairing yards and a variety of medium and light industries. The textile sector is a key export industry providing almost one-third of export earnings in 1973.

The coup d'état of April 1974 disrupted the economic life of Portugal. The relaxation of traditional controls resulted in demands for higher wages, and industrial production suffered as a result of strikes. In 1974 average wage increases were 25 per cent and inflation reached 35 per cent. After the coup all prices were frozen; price controls and a freeze on certain products were imposed later. The return of some 50,000 soldiers from the overseas provinces put a strain on resources.

The stock market has been closed since April 1974 and at the end of the year there were no signs of its being reopened. The three major banks have been nationalized but this does not seem to be a general government policy.

In July 1972 Portugal signed a special Trade Agreement with the EEC. An important concession gained by Portugal was an extended transitional period for the reduction of tariffs on imported industrial goods. This period lasts till 1980 on all industrial goods and till 1985 on a small number of other goods.

Transport and Communication

There are 43,426 km. of roads in Portugal. Railways cover 3,669 kilometres and are mostly operated by the State. There is a merchant marine with a displacement of some 978,000 tons. Regular air services connect Lisbon with European, American and African capitals. Present plans envisage the construction of a new international airport at Setubal and 358 kilometres of motorway by 1981. Work began in October 1973 on the building of 493 km. of toll motorways throughout the country. An agreement has been signed with Spain on the building of an international bridge over the river Erges.

Social Welfare

A State Social Welfare Fund was established in 1964 but present Government policy is to establish a National Health Service, introduce a minimum salary, distribute wealth more evenly, improve insurance schemes, increase benefits to those in need and to improve the standard of living of the population as a whole.

Education

Education is free and compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14, and consists of four years of primary school followed by two years of continuation classes. Compulsory schooling at the age of six has been virtually guaranteed by the Government. Secondary education, consisting of State liceus (high schools) and technical schools, as well as private colleges, is voluntary and fees are charged. State fees are low and scholarships are provided. There are five universities and one technical university; courses are of five to seven years. Much has been done in the past decade to reduce illiteracy, including the setting up of adult schools providing intensive elementary courses.

Under an education reform announced in January 1971, the school-leaving age was raised to 14, making eight years compulsory school attendance. University entrance examinations were abolished and a final school examination established. Basic education for all, at the age of eight, is an aim the Government wishes to see fulfilled by 1979. To help accomplish this, 15 per cent of the State Budget was allotted to education in 1974. The establishment of new universities and several polytechnics has been announced.

Tourism

Portugal is popular with visitors because of its mild and clement weather. Apart from Lisbon and the Algarve on the mainland, Madeira and the Azores are much favoured as winter resorts. In 1973 4,079,712 tourists visited Portugal, Madeira and the Azores.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Portugal: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malta, Monaco, the Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, the United Kingdom, the U.S.A.

Sport

Association football is Portugal's principal sport.

Public Holidays

1975: May 29th (Corpus Christi), June 10th (Camões Day), June 13th (St. Anthony—Lisbon only), June 24th (St. John—Oporto only), August 15th (Assumption), October 5th (Proclamation of the Republic), November 1st (All Saints' Day), December 1st (Restoration of Independence), December 8th (Immaculate Conception), December 25th (Christmas Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), March 2nd (Shrove Tuesday), April 16th (Good Friday), April 18th (Easter Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 centavos = 1 Portuguese escudo.

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 57.60 escudos;

U.S. $1 = 24.78 escudos.

THE CONSTITUTION

Since the coup of April 1974 by the Armed Forces Movement (MFA) the constitutional rules in force are based on the Programme of this Movement. The constitution of 1933 is transitorily in force where it does not oppose the principles of the Programme.

Until a new constitution is promulgated power will be exerted by the Constituent Assembly, the President of the Republic, the Junta of National Salvation, the Council of State, the Provisional Government and the Law Courts.

ARMED FORCES

The Armed Forces are independent of the Provisional Government. The Chief of General Staff has similar rank to the Prime Minister, coming next to him in the hierarchy of public functions. The Supreme Council for National Defence is presided over by the President of the Republic. The Prime Minister, the Chief of General Staff, the Ministers for National Defence, Foreign Affairs, Finance, Economy and Interterritorial Co-ordination and the Chiefs of Staff of the three branches of the Armed Forces are also members of the Supreme Council of National Defence.

The Armed Forces will ultimately be confined to external defence.

AND CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

The Constituent Assembly will be elected by universal, direct and secret suffrage to formulate a new constitution.

It will be dissolved when the Constitution has been approved or after the extension period for the approval of this Constitution has elapsed, in which case, a new Constituent Assembly shall be elected.

THE PRESIDENT

The President of the Republic is chosen by the Junta of National Salvation from its members. His duties are:

- to see that the constitutional rules and the other laws are fulfilled;
- to preside over the Junta of National Salvation and the Council of State;
- to appoint the members of the Provisional Government from Portuguese citizens who are representatives of political groups and currents or independent but who identify themselves with the Programme of the MFA;
- to summon the Council of State;
- to summon and preside over the Cabinet Council;
- to fix, in accordance with the electoral law, the date of the elections of the deputies of the Constituent Assembly;
- to summon the Constituent Assembly and to open its session;
- to extend, if necessary, the session of the Constituent Assembly for ninety days;
- to represent the Nation and to direct the external police of the State, to establish agreements and to negotiate international treaties, directly or through representatives, and to ratify treaties;
- to be supreme commander of the armed forces;
- to grant pardons and to commute penalties;
- to enact the state of siege after hearing the Council of State, suspending all or some of the constitutional guarantees in one or more areas of the national territories, in case of effective or impending aggression by foreign forces, or in the case of public security and order being disturbed or threatened; to promulgate and have published the constitutional laws and the resolutions of the Council of State, as well as the decree-laws and the regulating decrees, and to sign the relative decree.

The acts of the President of the Republic must be countersigned by the Prime Minister or by the Minister or Ministers concerned, except for the appointment of the Prime Minister, nomination of members of the Council of State, resignation of his office, promulgation of constitutional laws and of deliberations of the Council of State.

THE JUNTA OF NATIONAL SALVATION

The Junta of National Salvation is composed of seven military officers commissioned by the MFA. The President and the Vice-President of the Junta are chosen by the Junta itself. The President of the Republic is chosen from its members. The Junta is to continue until a President and Legislative Assembly have been elected when it will be dissolved.

THE COUNCIL OF STATE

The Council of State is constituted by:
the members of the Junta of National Salvation;
seven representatives of the armed forces;
seven citizens of recognized merit (designated by the President).

The duties of the Council of State are:
to exercise the constituent powers until the election of the Constituent Assembly; to sanction the decrees of the Provisional Government concerning:
the election of the Constituent Assembly;
the definition of the general outlines for economic, social and financial policy;
the use of freedom of thought, of education, of meeting, of association, and of creed and religious practice;
the organization of national defence;
the definition of the general regime for the government of the overseas provinces; to supervise the fulfilment of the constitutional rules and of the ordinary laws;
to authorize the President to declare war and to establish peace;
to pronounce on the physical incapability of the President of the Republic; to express an opinion on the declaration of the state of siege;
to designate, within fifteen days, the new members of the Junta of National Salvation in case one or more of its members cease their functions;
to pronounce on the placement of any Councillor of State representing the armed forces in situations which prevent the free exercise of his functions; to pronounce on all the emergencies that are grave for the life of the nation and on all other matters of national interest whenever the President thinks it fit.

The decrees that must be sanctioned by the Council of State may not be promulgated by the President without the granting of such sanction. The constitutional rules emanating from the Council of the State are enacted as constitutional laws and promulgated by the President do not need to be countersigned.

THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT

The Provisional Government is composed of individuals representative of political groups and currents and of independent personalities who are identified with the Programme of the MFA. It is constituted by the Prime Minister, the Ministers without portfolio (up to the limit of four) and by the Ministers of the following posts: National Defence, Interterritorial Co-ordination, Internal Administration, Justice, Finance, Economy, Foreign Affairs, Social Equipment and Environment, Education and Culture, Labour, Social Affairs and Social Communication, and also by the Secretaries and Under-Secretaries of State.

The Prime Minister is appointed by the President of the Republic; the remaining members are appointed by the President by proposal of the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister is responsible to the President for the general policy of the government; the ministers are politically responsible to the Prime Minister by their acts.

(a) Internal policy:

- to guarantee the future effective exercise of the political freedom of the citizens;
- to guarantee the freedom of meeting and of association;
- to guarantee the freedom of thought expression;
- to promulgate a new law for the press, radio, television, theatre and cinema;
- to assure the independence and dignity of the Judicial Power;
- to establish the basis of a new economic policy.

(b) External policy:

- to follow the principles of independence and equality amongst States, of non interference in the internal affairs of other countries and to defend peace, extending and diversifying international relations;
- to respect the international obligations arising from the treaties in force.

The specified duties of the Provisional Government are:
to direct the general policy of the nation;
to countersign the acts of the President of the Republic;
to establish decree-laws and to approve the international treaties or agreements; to draw up the decrees, regulations and instructions for the good execution of the laws;
to superintend the whole public administration;
to draw up the electoral law.

The duties of the Prime Minister are:

- to summon and preside over the meetings of the Cabinet Council, without prejudice to the faculty recognized to the President of the Republic under constitutional law;
- to co-ordinate and control the execution of the policy by the Cabinet Council;
- to guarantee the collegium principle;
- to represent the Government before the other organs of sovereignty.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Jurisdictional functions are exerted only by the Law Courts integrated in the Judicial Power, with the exception of the military Law Courts.

THE PRESS

After the coup d'état of April 1974 censorship of the press was abolished. However, press freedom is subject to certain restrictions as defined in a new law designed to guarantee the liberty to express ideas announced in the programme of the MFA. The new law provides for suspension and fines for those who endanger the peace of the nation. A press council has been established.

The principal Lisbon morning newspapers are Diário de Notícias, partly government-owned and with the largest circulation, and O Século, which is wholly government-owned. The main evening newspapers, all with high circulations, are Diário de Lisboa, A Capital and Diário Popular, the first two having a reputation for being somewhat more liberal in outlook. Another evening newspaper, the Socialist A República has a small circulation due to distribution difficulties. All Lisbon dailies have national circulations. The principal Oporto daily, with a wide circulation, is Jornal de Notícias.

Amongst the magazines and reviews, women's magazines and sports newspapers have large circulations. Vida Mundial is an important weekly news magazine in the style of "Newsweek". The social and political magazines Seara Nova and O Tempo e o Modo are often critical of the political and social situation, but because of their somewhat limited appeal as intellectual magazines, their circulation is relatively small.

ROMANIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Socialist Republic of Romania lies in south-east Europe between 43° and 48° north latitude and 20° and 29° east longitude. It is bounded to the north and north-east by the U.S.S.R., to the north-west by Hungary, to the south-west by Yugoslavia and to the south by Bulgaria. The south-east coast is washed by the Black Sea. It has a climate of hot summers and cold winters with a moderate rainfall. The average summer temperature is 70°F (21°C) and the winter average 28°F (-2°C). The language is Romanian, a member of the Romance group. Most Romanians are members of the Romanian Orthodox Church. The national flag (proportions 5 by 3) consists of three vertical stripes, blue, yellow and red, the middle stripe bearing the state emblem. The capital is Bucharest.

Recent History

A government of Communists, Social Democrats and members of the Ploughmen's Front, under the leadership of Dr. Petru Groza, was constituted following a coup towards the end of the Second World War, and after elections in 1946 Communists held most of the important posts. A People's Republic was declared in December 1947 and King Michael was forced to abdicate. In 1948 the Republic's first constitution was adopted, and in the same year the nationalization of the main industrial and financial institutions was begun. There followed numerous political arrests, during which full control was gained by the Communist People's Democratic Front. In 1952, following a purge in the Communist Party, a new constitution closer to the Soviet model was adopted. Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej was the most important figure in the Government from that time until his death in 1965. He was succeeded as First Secretary by Nicolae Ceaușescu. A new constitution of 1965 made Romania a Socialist Republic. In March 1974 Ceaușescu became Romania's first President.

Romania joined COMECON in 1949, and the Warsaw Pact and the United Nations in 1955. For nearly twenty years the country remained under the influence of the Soviet Union. The year 1963, however, saw the adoption of a more independent foreign policy including the development of friendly relations with the People's Republic of China and Western countries. This policy has generally been regarded with disapproval by the other Eastern bloc countries, and Romania's leaders have been at pains to emphasize the country's autonomy.

Government

The 1965 constitution vests supreme executive, legislative and judicial authority in the Grand National Assembly. The State Council, elected by the Assembly from among its members, is the permanent executive body and is subordinated to the Assembly. State administration is the responsibility of the Council of Ministers. The President, who is elected by the Assembly, presides over the two Councils and can fulfil the functions of the Assembly when it is not in session.

Defence

Romania is a member of the Warsaw Pact. Military service is compulsory and lasts for 16 months in the army and air force, and two years in the navy. Total regular forces are estimated at 171,000, comprising army 141,000, navy 9,000 and air force 21,000. There are 10,000 paramilitary forces, including border troops, and a militia of about 500,000. The defence budget for 1974 totalled 8,585 million lei.

Economic Affairs

Formerly based on agriculture, forestry and oil, the Romanian economy has experienced radical changes since the Second World War, and it is now dominated by industry. At least 50 per cent of national investment since the war has been in industry, and in 1970 it accounted for about 60 per cent of the national income. All of industry, mines, banks, telecommunications, transport and external trade enterprises have been nationalized. The most important industries are mainly heavy: oil and natural gas, mining and metallurgy, mechanical engineering, chemicals and timber processing. All branches of light industry account for about 30 per cent of total industrial output. Principal exports include oil products, timber, machinery and equipment, mineral raw materials, metals and chemical products. Agriculture still plays an important part in the Romanian economy, utilizing about 60 per cent of the land area. Cereals and fruit make large contributions to the export trade. As a result of the development of plantations and vineyards, Romania is now one of the principal grape-producing countries in the world. Other important products are wheat, maize, rye, sunflower seed, sugar beet, potatoes, plums, apples and eggs. In addition, the food industry contributes about 15 per cent of Romania's exports.

The majority of the targets of the fourth Five-Year Plan (1966-70) were exceeded. The national income grew by 45 per cent at an average annual rate of 7.7 per cent. This was largely due to the increase in industrial production which, at 11.7 per cent a year, now has the highest growth rate in Europe. Electricity production doubled during the period. Real wages, however, rose by only 20 per cent instead of the 25 per cent planned, and the target was reduced to 20 per cent under the fifth Five-Year Plan (1971-75) which once more emphasized expansion of industry in preference to consumption. Heavy industry was planned to grow at an annual rate of between 11.7 and 13 per cent, while a growth rate of 9.5 to 11 per cent was envisaged for the production of consumer goods. The national income was planned to increase at a rate of 10 to 11 per cent a year.

The sixth Five-Year Plan (1976-80) is again being directed towards increased industrial expansion and development of foreign trade. The national income is planned to grow by 9 to 10 per cent a year, and real wages by 15 to 20 per cent over the five-year period. It is envisaged that industrial output will increase by 9 to 10 per cent a year, and agricultural output by 4.6 to 6 per cent a year.

In 1974, 50 per cent of Romania's foreign trade was with socialist countries, 21 per cent of it with the Soviet Union. However, since the early 1960s, Romania has developed important trade relations with Western countries, having agreements with France, the U.K., the U.S.A., Federal Germany, Italy and other countries. Romania became a contracting party to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) in November 1971, and was accepted into the EEC's generalized preference scheme for developing countries on January 1st, 1974. Romania also joined the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank in December 1972.

Transport and Communications

There are about 11,000 km. of State railways and 76,304 kilometres of national roads of which 11,976 kilometres have been modernized. The state airline, TAROM, provides daily flights between the capital and chief towns, and international services to Europe, America and Asia. Navigation on the Danube is open to shipping of all nations. The joint Romanian-Yugoslav Iron Gates power and navigation system on the Danube was completed in 1972. The chief ports, Constanța (on the Black Sea), Galați, Brăila and Giurgiu (on the Danube) have been modernized.

Social Welfare

Romania has a comprehensive state insurance scheme, premiums being paid by enterprises and institutions employing the wage-earners. In 1973 over 8,433 million lei were appropriated to public health protection, representing about 5 per cent of the state budget. Maternity allowances absorbed 600 million lei of this total. There were 186,220 hospital beds and 32,809 doctors. In addition, funds are allotted to sickness benefits, children's allowances, pensions, and the provision of health resorts for children and workers.

Education

The present system of education in Romania is comparatively new and more changes in this system are likely in the future. Education is free and compulsory for ten years between the ages of 6 and 16 years. Before this age children may attend crèches (creșe), and kindergartens (grădinițe de copii). Between the ages of 6 and 16 years children attend the general educational school (școala de bază de cultură generală de zece ani). Compulsory education ends with the ten-year school, but the majority of pupils continue with their studies in secondary schools. Provided they pass the appropriate examination this period begins after the first eight years of general education.

The general secondary school (liceu), for which a candidate is required to take an entrance examination, provides students with a specialized education suitable for entering college or university. There are also specialized secondary schools, where the emphasis is laid upon industrial, agricultural and teacher training, and art schools, which correspond to secondary schools but cover several years of general education. Vocational secondary schools (școli profesionale de ucenici) train pupils for a particular industry or for agriculture, etc. A general syllabus is not provided in this type of school. In 1973-74 there were more than 3.3 million pupils enrolled in 15,668 general and specialized secondary schools. There are 187 higher educational institutes in Romania, including seven universities and six technological universities. 143,600 students are receiving higher education.

Tourism

The Carpathian mountains, the Danube delta and the Black Sea resorts (Mamaia, Eforie, Mangalia and others) are the principal attractions. International tourism is promoted by the National Travel Office (ONT), and between 1966 and 1970, 3,000 million lei were invested in the tourist industry. Tourism from Western Europe and America has been greatly encouraged, and advantageous exchange rates are offered. About 3,000,000 foreign tourists were estimated to have visited Romania in 1973.

In 1967, as part of the International Tourist Year, Romania abolished visas for all tourists travelling through the National Travel Office. Special exchange rates of 12 lei to $1 and 28.13 lei to £1 are available for foreign visitors. Since November 1974 visitors have been required to change a minimum of U.S. $10 a day into Romanian currency.

Sport

The main sports are rugby and association football, handball, basketball, tennis, table tennis, swimming, rowing, fishing and hunting. Skiing, ice-hockey and skating are popular in winter.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (International Labour Day), May 9th (Independence Day), August 23rd (National Day), December 30th (Republic Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 24th (Union Day).

Weights and Measures

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 bani = 1 leu.

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 11.65 lei;

U.S. $1 = 4.974 lei.

THE CONSTITUTION

(Adopted in August 1965)

The Socialist Republic of Romania

Article 1. Romania is a socialist republic.

The Socialist Republic of Romania is a sovereign, independent and unitary state of the working people of the towns and villages. Its territory is inalienable and indivisible.

Article 2. The whole power in the Socialist Republic of Romania belongs to the people, free and masters of their destiny.

People's power is based on the worker-peasant alliance. In close union, the working class—the leading class of society—the peasantry, the intelligentsia and the other categories of working people, regardless of nationality, build the socialist system, creating the conditions for the transition to communism.

Article 3. In the Socialist Republic of Romania, the leading political force of the whole of society is the Romanian Communist Party.

Article 4. The sovereign holder of power, the people exercise this power through the Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils, bodies elected by universal, equal, direct and secret vote.

The Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils are the basis of the whole system of state bodies.

The Grand National Assembly is the supreme body of state power, under whose conduct and control all the other state bodies carry on their activities.

Article 5. The national economy of Romania is a socialist economy, based on the socialist ownership of the means of production.

In the Socialist Republic of Romania, man's exploitation by man has been abolished for ever and the socialist principle of distribution according to the quantity and quality of work is implemented.

Work is a duty of honour for each citizen of the country.

Article 6. Socialist ownership of the means of production is either state property—goods belonging to the whole people, or co-operative property—goods belonging to each co-operative organization.

Article 7. The wealth of the subsoil, whatever its nature, the mines, the state land, the forests, waters, sources of natural power, the factories and mills, the banks, the state farms, the machine-and-tractor stations, the means of communication, the state means of transport and telecommunication, the state buildings and dwellings, the material basis of state socio-cultural institutions belong to the whole people and are state property.

Article 8. Foreign trade is a state monopoly.

Article 9. The land of the agricultural production co-operatives, the animals, implements, installations and buildings belonging to them are co-operative property.

The plot of land which, according to the rules of the agricultural production co-operatives, is being used by the family household of the co-operative farmers, is co-operative property.

The dwelling and the ancillary farm buildings, the land on which they stand and, according to the rules of the agricultural production co-operatives, the productive livestock and small agricultural dead stock are the personal property of the co-operative farmers.

The tools, machines, installations and constructions of the handicraft co-operatives and of the consumer co-operatives are co-operative property.

Article 10. The agricultural production co-operatives, a socialist form of agricultural organization, secure the conditions for the intensive cultivation of the land and the application of advanced science and contribute, by increasing output, to the development of the national economy, to the continuous raising of the living standard of the peasantry and of the whole people.

The state gives support to the agricultural production co-operatives and protects their property. The state also gives support to the other co-operative organizations and protects their property.

Article 11. In the conditions of co-operativized agriculture, the state guarantees to the peasants who cannot associate themselves in agricultural production co-operatives, ownership of the land which they themselves and their families are working, of the implements they use with this purpose, as well as ownership of the animals they use for work and for production.

The handicraftsmen are also guaranteed ownership of their own workshops.

Article 12. Land and buildings can be expropriated only for work of public interest and on payment of an equitable compensation.

Article 13. In the Socialist Republic of Romania the whole state activity has as its purpose the development of the socialist system and the prosperity of the socialist nation, the continuous growth of the people's living standard and cultural level, the ensurance of the freedom and dignity of man, the many-sided affirmation of the human personality.

For this purpose, the Romanian socialist state:

- organizes, plans and conducts the national economy;
- defends the socialist property;
- guarantees the full exercise of citizen rights, assures socialist legality and defends the rule of law;
- develops education at all levels, ensures the conditions for the development of science, the arts and culture, carries out public health protection;
- ensures defence of the country and organizes its armed forces;
- organizes relations with other states.

Article 14. The Socialist Republic of Romania maintains and develops relations of friendship and fraternal co-operation with the socialist countries in the spirit of socialist internationalism, promotes relations of collaboration with countries having other socio-political systems, and belongs to international organizations with a view to ensuring peace and understanding among peoples.

The foreign relations of the Socialist Republic of Romania are based on the principles of the observance of national sovereignty and independence, equal rights and mutual advantage, and non-interference in internal affairs.

Article 15. The territory of the Socialist Republic of Romania is organized in territorial-administrative units, district, town and village.

The capital of the Socialist Republic of Romania is the municipality of Bucharest, which is organized in town-districts.

The most important towns can be organized as municipalities.

Article 16. Romanian citizenship is acquired and lost according to the law.

The Fundamental Rights and Duties of the Citizens

Article 17. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania, irrespective of nationality, race, sex or religion, have equal rights in all fields of economic, political, juridical, social and cultural life.

The state guarantees the equal rights of the citizens. No restriction of these rights and no difference in their exercise on the grounds of nationality, race, sex or religion are permitted.

Any expression aiming to establish such restrictions, nationalist-chauvinist propaganda, the fanning of racial or national hatred are punished by the law.

Article 18. In the Socialist Republic of Romania, the citizens have the right to work. Each citizen is given the possibility to carry on, according to his training, an activity in the economic, administrative, social or cultural field and is remunerated according to its quantity and quality. For equal work there is equal pay.

The law establishes the measures for the protection and safety of labour as well as special measures for the protection of the work of women and young people.

Article 19. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to leisure.

The right to leisure is guaranteed to those who work by the establishment of the maximum duration of the working day at eight hours, of a weekly rest and of annual paid holidays.

In the sectors of arduous and very arduous work, the working day is reduced to less than eight hours, without any reduction in pay.

Article 20. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to material security in case of old age, sickness or incapacity to work.

The right to material security is implemented for factory and office workers through pensions and sickness benefits paid by the state social insurance system, and for the members of the co-operative organizations or of other public organizations through the forms of insurance organized by these organizations. The state ensures medical assistance through its health units.

Paid maternity leave is guaranteed.

Article 21. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to education.

The right to education is ensured by compulsory general education, by the fact that education at all levels is free and by the system of state scholarships.

Education in the Socialist Republic of Romania is state education.

Article 22. In the Socialist Republic of Romania the co-inhabiting nationalities are ensured the free utilization of their native language as well as books, papers, magazines, theatres and education at all levels in their own language. In districts also inhabited by a population of non-Romanian nationality, all the bodies and institutions use the language of the respective nationality in speech and in writing and appoint officials from its ranks or from the ranks of other citizens who know the language and way of life of the local population.

Article 23. In the Socialist Republic of Romania women have equal rights with men.

The state protects marriage and the family and defends the interests of mother and child.

Article 24. The Socialist Republic of Romania ensures to young people the conditions required for the development of their physical and intellectual aptitudes.

Article 25. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to elect and to be elected to the Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils.

The vote is universal, equal, direct and secret. All citizens who have reached the age of 18 years have the right to vote.

Citizens with the right to vote who have reached the age of 23 years can be elected as deputies to the Grand National Assembly and to the People's Councils.

The right to nominate candidates is ensured to all organizations of the working people: the organizations of the Romanian Communist Party, the trade unions, the co-operatives, the youth and women's organizations, the cultural associations and other mass and public organizations.

The electors have the right to recall their deputy at any time, according to the same procedure under which he has been nominated and elected.

Mentally alienated and mentally defective people have no right to elect and to be elected, as well as persons deprived of these rights during the period laid down by a court of law in its sentence.

Article 26. The most advanced and conscious citizens from the ranks of the workers, peasants, intellectuals and other categories of working people unite in the Romanian Communist Party, the highest form of organization of the working class, its vanguard detachment.

The Romanian Communist Party expresses and loyally serves the aspirations and vital interests of the people, implements the role of leader in all the fields of socialist construction, and directs the activity of the mass and public organizations and of the state bodies.

Article 27. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to associate themselves in trade union, co-operative, youth, women's and socio-cultural organizations, in creative unions, scientific, technical, sports associations and other public organizations.

The state gives support to the activity of the mass and public organizations, creates conditions for the development of the material basis of these organizations and defends their property.

The mass and public organizations ensure the large participation of the mass of the people in the political, economic, social and cultural life of the Socialist Republic of Romania and in the exercise of public control—an expression of the democratic spirit of the socialist system. Through the mass and public organizations the Romanian Communist Party achieves an organized link with the working class, the peasantry, the intelligentsia and the other categories of working people and mobilizes them in the struggle for the completion of the building of socialism.

Article 28. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania are guaranteed freedom of speech, of the Press, of reunion, of meeting and demonstration.

Article 29. The freedom of speech, of the Press, reunion, meeting and demonstration cannot be used for aims hostile to the socialist system and to the interests of the working people.

Any association of a fascist or anti-democratic character is prohibited. Participation in such associations and propaganda of a fascist or anti-democratic character are punished by the law.

Article 30. Freedom of conscience is guaranteed to all citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Anybody is free to share or not to share a religious belief. The freedom of exercising a religious cult is guaranteed. The religious cults are organized and function freely. The way of organization and functioning of the religious cults is regulated by law.

The school is separated from the Church. No religious confession, congregation or community can open or maintain any other teaching establishments than special schools for the training of servants of the Church.

Article 31. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania are guaranteed inviolability of their person.

No person can be detained or arrested if there are no well-grounded proofs or indications that he has committed a deed listed and punished by the law. The organs of inquiry can order the detention of a person for a maximum of 24 hours. No one can be arrested except on the basis of a warrant for arrest issued by a court or the Procurator.

The right to defence is guaranteed throughout the lawsuit.

Article 32. The domicile is inviolable.

No one can enter the dwelling of a person without the latter's consent, except in the cases and conditions specially laid down by the law.

Article 33. The secrecy of correspondence and of telephone conversations is guaranteed.

Article 34. The right to petition is guaranteed. The state bodies have the obligation to resolve the petitions of the citizens concerning personal or public rights and interests.

Article 35. Those harmed in a right of theirs by an illegal act of a state body can ask the competent bodies, in the conditions provided by the law, to annul the act and redress the damage.

Article 36. The right to personal property is protected by the law.

Objects of the right to personal property can be income and savings derived from work, the dwelling house, the household around it and the land on which they stand, as well as the goods of personal use and comfort.

Article 37. The right to inheritance is protected by the law.

Article 38. The Socialist Republic of Romania grants the right of refuge to foreign citizens pursued for their activity in defence of the interests of the working people, for their participation in the fight for national liberation or in defence of peace.

Article 39. Every citizen of the Socialist Republic of Romania is bound to respect the Constitution and the laws, to defend socialist property, to contribute to the strengthening and development of the socialist system.

Article 40. Military service in the ranks of the Armed Forces of the Socialist Republic of Romania is compulsory and is a duty of honour for the citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Article 41. To defend the homeland is the sacred duty of each citizen of the Socialist Republic of Romania. Violation of the military oath, treason to the homeland, desertion to the enemy, prejudice to the defensive capacity of the state are the greatest crimes against the people and are punished by the law with the utmost severity.

The Supreme Bodies of State Power

THE GRAND NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Article 42. The Grand National Assembly, the supreme body of state power, is the sole legislative body of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Article 43. The Grand National Assembly has the following main attributions:

(1) it adopts and amends the Constitution of the Socialist Republic of Romania;

(2) it regulates the electoral system;

(3) it adopts the State Plan of the National Economy, the State Budget and the general final account of the budgetary exercise;

(4) it organizes the Council of Ministers and establishes the norms for the organization and functioning of the ministries and the other state bodies of central administration;

(5) it regulates the organization of courts and the Procurator's Office;

(6) it establishes the norms for the organization and functioning of the people's councils;

(7) it establishes the administrative organization of the territory;

(8) it grants amnesty;

(9) it ratifies and denounces international treaties that imply modification of laws;

(9a) it elects and recalls the President of the Socialist Republic;

(10) it elects and recalls the State Council;

(11) it elects and recalls the Council of Ministers;

(12) it elects and recalls the Supreme Court and the Procurator General;

(13) it exercises general control over the application of the Constitution. It is only the Grand National Assembly that decides on the constitutionality of the laws;

(14) it controls the activity of the President of the Socialist Republic and of the State Council;

(15) it controls the activity of the Council of Ministers, of the ministries and of the other central bodies of state administration;

(16) it hears reports on the activity of the Supreme Court and controls its directive decisions;

(17) it controls the activity of the Procurator's Office;

(18) it exercises general control over the activity of the People's Councils;

(19) it establishes the general line of foreign policy;

(20) it proclaims, in the interest of the country's defence, of public order or state security, the state of emergency in some localities, or throughout the country's territory;

(21) it orders partial or general mobilization;

(22) it declares the state of war. The state of war can be declared only in case of armed aggression directed against the Socialist Republic of Romania or against another state towards which the Socialist Republic of Romania has mutual defence obligations arising from international treaties, if a situation has come about for which the obligation of declaring a state of war has been laid down.

Article 44. The deputies to the Grand National Assembly are elected in constituencies having the same number of inhabitants. The constituencies are established by decrees of the State Council.

One deputy is elected for every constituency.

The Grand National Assembly is made up of 405 deputies.

Article 45. The Grand National Assembly is elected for a term of five years, reckoned from the date the mandate of the previous Grand National Assembly has expired.

The mandate of the Grand National Assembly cannot cease before the term it has been elected for has expired.

In case it finds that there are circumstances which make it impossible to hold elections, the Grand National Assembly can decide to prolong its mandate for the duration of these circumstances.

Article 46. Elections to the Grand National Assembly are held on a non-working day in the last month of every legislature. The date of elections is established at least 60 days before.

The newly-elected Grand National Assembly is convened during the three months following the expiration of the mandate of the previous Grand National Assembly.

Article 47. The Grand National Assembly verifies the legality of the election of every deputy, deciding on the validation or annulment of his election.

In the case of an annulled election, the rights and duties of the deputy cease from the moment of annulment.

Article 48. The Grand National Assembly adopts its statutes of functioning.

Article 49. The Grand National Assembly establishes yearly its budget which is included in the State Budget.

Article 50. The Grand National Assembly elects, for the duration of the legislature, the Bureau of the Grand National Assembly, formed of the Chairman of the Grand National Assembly and four Vice-Chairmen.

Article 51. The Chairman of the Grand National Assembly conducts the proceedings of the sessions of the Grand National Assembly.

The Chairman of the Grand National Assembly can designate any one of the four Vice-Chairmen to fulfil some of his attributions.

Article 52. The Grand National Assembly elects standing commissions from among the deputies.

The standing commissions examine and debate on the draft of laws, draft of decrees, draft of decisions, or other documents which are to be adopted, as well as any other matters, sent to them for study by the Grand National Assembly or the State Council.

In keeping with their competence, the standing commissions also can hear reports—periodically or according to problems—presented by the leaders of any body of the state administration, of the Procurator's Office and of the Supreme Court, on the activities of these bodies, as well as of the chairman of the Executive Committees of the People's Councils, on the activities of these councils, and examine the way the mentioned bodies carry out the policy of the Romanian Communist Party and ensure the application of laws.

The standing commissions draw up reports, opinions, or proposals regarding all the problems mentioned in the paragraphs 2 and 3, which they submit to the Grand National Assembly or to the State Council.

The Grand National Assembly can elect temporary commissions for any problem or field of activity, establishing the authority and mode of activity for each of these commissions.

All the state bodies and officials are obliged to put the requested information and documents at the disposal of the commissions of the Grand National Assembly.

Article 53. In exercising the control of the constitutionality of the laws, the Grand National Assembly elects a Constitutional Commission for the duration of the legislature.

Experts who are not deputies can be elected to the Constitutional Commission; their number must not exceed one-third of the total membership of the Commission.

The Commission presents to the Grand National Assembly reports and opinions at its own initiative, or at the intimation of the bodies provided for by the rules of the Grand National Assembly.

At the request of the Bureau of the Grand National Assembly, the Constitutional Commission draws up and presents reports on the draft of laws as well. At the request of the State Council it also draws up and presents to the latter reports on the draft of decrees containing rules with power of law.

Article 54. The Grand National Assembly works in sessions.

Ordinary sessions of the Grand National Assembly are convened twice a year on the proposal of the Bureau of the Grand National Assembly.

The Grand National Assembly is convened, whenever necessary, in special sessions, at the initiative of the State Council, of the Bureau of the Grand National Assembly or of a least one-third of the total number of deputies. It is convened by decree of the State Council.

Article 55. The Grand National Assembly works only if at least one half plus one of the total number of deputies are present.

Article 56. The Grand National Assembly adopts laws and decisions.

The laws and decisions are adopted by a majority vote of the deputies to the Grand National Assembly.

The Constitution is adopted and amended by the vote of at least two-thirds of the total number of deputies to the Grand National Assembly.

The laws and decisions of the Grand National Assembly are signed by the Chairman or Vice-Chairman of the Grand National Assembly who conducted the meeting.

Article 57. After their adoption by the Grand National Assembly, the laws are published in the Official Bulletin of the Socialist Republic of Romania within a maximum of ten days, signed by the President of the Socialist Republic.

Article 58. Every deputy to the Grand National Assembly has the right to put questions and address interpellations to the Council of Ministers or to any of its members.

Within the framework of the control exercised by the Grand National Assembly, a deputy can put questions and address interpellations to the president of the Supreme Court and to the Procurator General.

The person to whom a question or interpellation has been addressed is obliged to reply orally or in writing within three days, and in any case during the same session.

Article 59. In order to prepare the discussions of the Grand National Assembly or interpellations the deputy has the right to ask for the necessary information from any state body applying for this purpose to the Bureau of the Grand National Assembly.

Article 60. Every deputy is obliged to periodically report to the electorate on his activity and on that of the Grand National Assembly.

Article 61. No deputy to the Grand National Assembly can be detained, arrested or sent for penal trial without the previous consent of the Grand National Assembly during session and of the State Council between sessions.

Only in case of flagrant infraction can a deputy be detained without this consent.

THE STATE COUNCIL

Article 62. The State Council of the Socialist Republic of Romania is the supreme body of state power with a permanent activity; it is subordinated to the Grand National Assembly.

Article 63. The State Council permanently exercises the following main attributions:

- (1) establishes the date of elections to the Grand National Assembly and People's Councils;

Article 64. The State Council exercises, in the interval between the sessions of the Grand National Assembly, the following main attributions:

- (1) it establishes, without being able to change the Constitution, norms with the power of law. The norms with the power of law are tabled, at the first session, for discussion to the Grand National Assembly according to the procedure for the adoption of laws. The State Plan of the Socio-Economic Development, the State Budget as well as the general final account of the budgetary exercise can be adopted by the State Council if the Grand National Assembly cannot meet due to exceptional circumstances;
- (2) it appoints and recalls the Chairman of the Council of Ministers;

(3) it appoints and recalls the Council of Ministers and the Supreme Court when the Grand National Assembly cannot meet because of exceptional circumstances;

(4) it gives the laws in force a general and compulsory interpretation;

(5) it grants amnesty;

(6) it controls the application of laws and decisions of the Grand National Assembly, the activity of the Council of Ministers, of the ministries and of the other central bodies of state administration as well as the activity of the Procurator's Office; it listens to the reports of the Supreme Court and controls its directive decisions; it controls the decisions of the people's councils;

(7) it orders, in case of emergency, partial or general mobilization;

(8) it declares, in case of emergency, the state of war. The state of war can be declared only in the event of armed aggression directed against the Socialist Republic of Romania or against another state towards which the Socialist Republic of Romania has mutual defence obligations, arising from international treaties, if a situation has come about for which the obligation of declaring a state of war has been laid down.

The attributions provided for in this article can also be exercised by the State Council during the sessions of the Grand National Assembly when the economic and social situation requires the urgent adoption of some measures and the Grand National Assembly is not convened in its plenum; the norms with the power of law are tabled for discussion to the Grand National Assembly when the proceedings in plenum are resumed.

Article 65. The State Council is elected by the Grand National Assembly from among its members for the duration of the legislature in its first session. The State Council functions up to the election of the new State Council in the following legislature.

Article 65a. The President of the Socialist Republic of Romania is President of the State Council.

Article 66. The State Council is formed of the President of the State Council, four Vice-Presidents and twenty-two members.

The State Council elects a secretary from among its members.

Article 67. The State Council carries on its activity according to the principle of collective leadership.

Article 68. The State Council issues decrees and adopts decisions.

The decrees and decisions are signed by the President of the Socialist Republic of Romania. The decrees with the power of law are published in the Official Bulletin of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Article 69. The State Council reports to the Grand National Assembly on the exercise of its attributions, as well as on the observance and execution in state activity of the laws and decisions of the Grand National Assembly.

The State Council as a whole and every one of its members are responsible to the Grand National Assembly for the entire activity of the State Council.

The President

Article 69a-69c. The President is head of state and represents the state in internal and international relations. He is elected by the Grand National Assembly for the duration of the legislature in its first session and functions up to the election of the President in the following legislature. On his election he takes an oath swearing to observe the constitution, to uphold the principles of socialism and communism and to promote the general welfare of the people.

Article 75. The Council of Ministers as a whole and every one of its members is responsible to the Grand National Assembly and in the interval between sessions to the State Council. Every member of the Council of Ministers is answerable both for his own activity and for the entire activity of the Council of Ministers.

Article 76. The ministries and the other central bodies of state administration implement the state policy in the branches or fields of activity for which they have been set up.

They manage, guide and control the enterprises, economic organizations and state institutions subordinated to them.

Article 77. The ministers and the heads of the other central bodies of state administration issue, on the basis and in view of applying the laws and the decisions of the Council of Ministers, instructions and orders as well as other acts provided for by law; their acts of a normative character are published in the Official Bulletin of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Article 78. The ministers and the heads of other central bodies of state administration are responsible to the Council of Ministers for the activity of the body which they lead.

The Local Bodies of State Power and the Local Bodies of State Administration

Article 79. The People's Councils are the local bodies of state power in the territorial-administrative districts to which they have been elected.

The People's Councils conduct the local activity, securing the economic, socio-cultural and administrative development of the territorial-administrative units in which they have been elected, the defence of socialist property, the maintaining of public order, socialist legality and the protection of citizen rights.

The People's Councils organize the participation of the citizens in the debate of state and public affairs on a local level.

Article 80. The People's Council exercises the following main attributions:

(1) it adopts the local budget and economic plan, approves the final account of the budgetary exercise;

(2) it elects and recalls its Executive Committee;

(3) it establishes enterprises, economic organizations and state institutions of local interest;

(4) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of its Executive Committee, of the local specialized bodies of the state administration, of the subordinated economic organizations, enterprises and institutions;

(5) it controls the decisions of hierarchically inferior People's Councils.

(6) it elects and recalls, according to the law, the judges, the people's jurors and the Chief Procurator of the district, or of the municipality of Bucharest.

Article 81. The People's Councils are formed of deputies elected by the constituencies, one deputy being elected for each constituency.

The constituencies formed for the election of the deputies to a People's Council have the same number of inhabitants.

The mandate of the People's Council is of four years, reckoned from the date of the end of the mandate of the preceding People's Council.

The new elections are held on one of the non-working days during the last month of the mandate of the People's Council.

Article 82. The People's Councils elect from among the deputies standing commissions which help them in the fulfilment of their tasks.

Article 83. The People's Councils work in sessions; the convocation of sessions is made by the Executive Committee of the People's Council.

Special sessions are called whenever necessary at the suggestion of the Executive Committee or when at least one-third of the total number of deputies require it.

Article 84. The People's Councils work in the presence of at least one half plus one member of the total number of deputies.

Article 85. Each deputy is obliged to periodically present to the electorate reports on his activity and on that of the People's Council to which he has been elected.

Article 86. The People's Councils adopt decisions. A decision is adopted if it receives the vote of the majority of the People's Council deputies.

Decisions of a normative character are communicated to the citizens in the forms provided for by the law.

Article 87. The Executive Committee of the People's Council is the local body of state administration with general competence in the territorial-administrative unit in which the People's Council has been elected.

Article 88. The Executive Committee of the People's Council has the following principal attributions:

(1) it carries out the laws, decrees and decisions of the Council of Ministers and the other acts of the superior bodies;

(2) it applies the decisions of the People's Council which has elected it;

(3) it works out the drafts of the local budget and economic plan;

(4) it carries out the local budget and economic plan, elaborates the report concerning the implementation of the local economic plan, as well as the final account of the budgetary exercise;

(5) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of the local specialized sections of state administration;

(6) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of the subordinate economic organizations, enterprises and institutions.

(7) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of the Executive Committee of the People's Councils which are hierarchically inferior to the People's Council which has elected it.

In the interval between the sessions of the People's Council, the Executive Committee also fulfils its attributions, with the exceptions of those stipulated in Article 80, paragraphs 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6; it submits the decisions adopted for ratification to the People's Council in its first session.

Article 89. The Executive Committee is elected by the People's Council from among its deputies at the first session after the elections for the duration of the mandate of the People's Council.

After the expiry of the mandate of the People's Council the Executive Committee continues to function up to the election of the new Executive Committee.

Article 90. The Executive Committee of the People's Council is formed of a Chairman, Vice-Chairmen, of whom one can be first Vice-Chairman, and a number of members established by the law.

Article 91. In the exercise of its attributions, the Executive Committee of the People's Council issues decisions on the basis of and with a view to the implementation of the law.

Decisions of a normative character are communicated to the citizens in the forms provided for by the law.

Article 92. The Executive Committee carries on its activity according to the principle of collective leadership.

The Executive Committee as a whole and each of its members are responsible to the People's Council which has elected them, as well as to the Executive Committee of the hierarchically superior People's Council, and to the Council of Ministers.

Each member of the Executive Committee is responsible both for his own activity and for the whole activity of the body he belongs to.

Article 93. The People's Councils organize, in accordance with the law, attached to their Executive Committees, local specialized bodies of state administration. The local specialized bodies of the state administration are subordinate to the People's Council and the Executive Committee; they are also subordinate to the hierarchically superior local and central bodies of the state administration.

The Courts

Article 94. In the Socialist Republic of Romania the law is administered by the Supreme Court, district courts, county courts as well as military courts established according to the law.

Article 95. By their judiciary activity, the courts defend the socialist system and the rights of persons, educating the citizens in the spirit of respect for the law.

In applying penal sanctions, the courts aim to reform and re-educate delinquents and to prevent the commission of new infractions.

Article 96. The courts try civil, penal and any other cases in their competence.

In the cases provided for by the law, the courts exercise control over the decisions of administrative or public bodies having a jurisdictional activity.

The courts try the demands of those harmed in their rights by administrative acts and can, in the conditions provided for by the law, also give their views on the legality of these acts.

Article 97. The Supreme Court exercises general control over the judicial activity of all the courts. The way of exercising this control is established by law.

With a view to the uniform application of the laws in judicial activity, the Supreme Court, in its plenum, issues decisions of direction.

Article 98. The Supreme Court is elected by the Grand National Assembly for the duration of the legislature in its first session.

The Supreme Court functions up to the election of the new Supreme Court in the following legislature.

Article 99. The Supreme Court is responsible for its activity to the Grand National Assembly, and between sessions to the State Council.

Article 100. The organization of the courts, their competence and judicial procedure are established by law.

Cases in the first instance at the county courts, the district courts and the military courts are tried with the participation of people's jurors, unless otherwise provided for by law.

Article 101. Judges and people's jurors are elected in accordance with the procedure established by law.

Article 102. In the Socialist Republic of Romania judicial procedure is in the Romanian language and, in the regions and districts inhabited by a population of another nationality than Romanian, the use of the mother tongue of that population is assured.

Parties who do not speak the language in which the trial is held, are given the possibility of becoming acquainted with the files through an interpreter and the right to speak in court and to sum up in the mother tongue.

Article 103. Trials are held in public sessions, unless otherwise provided for by law.

Article 104. In their judicial activity the judges and the people's jurors are independent and only subject to the law.

The Organs of the Procurator's Office

Article 105. The Procurator's Office of the Socialist Republic of Romania exercises the supervision of the activity of the penal prosecution organs, and of the penalty execution organs, and watches over the observance of the law, the defence of the socialist system, of the rights and the legal interests of socialism, as well as of the citizens, in the conditions provided for by law.

Article 106. The Procurator's Office is conducted by the Procurator General. The organs of the Procurator's Office are the Procurator General's Office, the Procurator's district and local offices and the Procurator's military office.

The organs of the Procurator's Office are hierarchically subordinated.

Article 107. The Procurator General is elected by the Grand National Assembly for the duration of the legislature in its first session and functions up to the election of the new Procurator General in the first session of the following legislature.

The procurators are appointed according to the law, with the exception of those specified in Article 90, paragraph 6.

Article 108. The Procurator General is responsible to the Grand National Assembly for the activity of the Procurator's Office, and between sessions to the State Council.

The Insignia of the Socialist Republic of Romania

Article 109. The emblem of the Socialist Republic of Romania represents wooded mountains over which the sun is rising. In the left part of the emblem there is an oil derrick. The emblem is surrounded by a wreath of wheat ears. The emblem is surmounted by a five-pointed star. At the base of the emblem the sheaves are bound with a tricolour ribbon bearing the words "Republica Socialistă România".

Article 110. The State Seal bears the country's emblem, around which are the words "REPUBLICA SOCIALISTĂ ROMÂNIA."

Article 111. The flag of the Socialist Republic of Romania bears the colours red, yellow and blue, placed vertically, with the blue stripe next to the flagstaff. The emblem of the Socialist Republic of Romania is placed in the centre.

Article 112. The Anthem of the Socialist Republic of Romania is approved by the Grand National Assembly.

Final Provisions

Article 113. The present Constitution comes into force on the date of its adoption.

SUPREME COURT

Chairman: EMILIAN NUDESCU.

There is one Supreme Court, whose main functions are: to judge, as an appeal instance, the sentences pronounced by higher tribunals; to judge, as fundamental instance, certain requests; to exercise general control of the judiciary activity carried on by all tribunals. The members of the Supreme Court are professional magistrates elected by the Grand National Assembly during the legislation of the latter.

DISTRICT COURTS

Under the new territorial-administrative divisions of Romania (February 1968) there are 39 district courts and the municipal court of Bucharest (with the status of district court). In all the towns in the country there are country courts subordinate to the district courts, and in Bucharest there are eight sectional courts. The panel of judges consists of professional magistrates and, under certain circumstances of people's jurors.

MILITARY COURTS

Court Martial does not exist. Military courts judge as fundamental and as appeal instances contraventions of the law by servicemen and, in certain circumstances, by civilians. The panel of judges consists of professional magistrates and, under certain circumstances, of people's jurors.

BODY OF ATTORNEYS

Procurator-General: FILIMON ARDELEANU.

The Procurator-General of the Republic and the subordinate attorneys represent the body which surveys the strict observance of the laws of the Republic, in the field of judicial activity as well as in the State administration. The Procurator-General is appointed by the Grand National Assembly and is responsible to it. Between Assembly sessions he is responsible to the State Council.

(For more details on the Judicial system see the Constitution.)

RELIGION

According to Article 30 of the Constitution, religious groups are organized and carry on their activities on an autonomous basis, regulated by law. There are fifteen sects and denominations, more than 80 per cent of believers belonging to the Romanian Orthodox Church.

ROMANIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

THE PRESS

The Romanian press is highly regionalized, with newspapers and periodicals appearing in nearly all of the administrative districts (as listed below). In 1974 there were 433 newspapers with a total circulation of 1,200 million copies annually. Of this total, 59 are newspapers of general information with a total circulation of 1,000 million copies a year, of which 20 are dailies with a total circulation of 800 million a year. Fifty newspapers are published in the languages of co-inhabiting nationalities in Romania, including Hungarian, German, Serbian, Ukrainian and Armenian.

The press sees itself as a potent instrument for the public debate of political, social, economic and educational problems. The most influential publications are the Party organs, the most important of which is Scinteia.

SAN MARINO

The republic of San Marino is situated in central Italy on the slopes of Mount Titano in the Apennines. It was founded in A.D. 301. A treaty of friendship with Italy was first signed on June 28th, 1861, and was last renewed on April 20th, 1953. The national flag (proportions 4 by 3) has two equal horizontal stripes of white and light blue. The state flag has, in addition, the national coat of arms in the centre.

Area: 61 sq. km.

Population: 1953 census: 13,500; 1974 estimate: 19,081; San Marino (capital) 4,423.

Finance: Budget balanced at 14,083,125,742 Italian lire in 1974.

Main Products: Wheat and wine.

Industrial Products: Textiles and clothing, cement, paper, leather, wrought iron and furniture.

Education: 18 elementary schools and a high school.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (Labour Day), May 8th (Ascension Day), June 29th (St. Peter and St. Paul), July 28th (Fall of Fascism), August 14th-16th (The Assumption), September 3rd (St. Marino), October 1st (Entering into Office of new Regent Captains), October 14th (Anniversary of Rovereto), November 1st (All Saints' Day), November 2nd (Commemoration of the Dead), December 8th (The Immaculate Conception), December 24th-26th (Christmas), December 31st (New Year's Eve).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 6th (Epiphany), February 5th (Anniversary of the Liberation of the Republic), March 19th (St. Joseph), March 25th (Anniversary of the Arengo), April 1st (Entering into Office of new Regent Captains), April 16th-19th (Easter).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Legislative Power is vested in a Grand Council of 60 members, elected every five years by popular vote. In the elections held in September 1974 the results were as follows:

	SEATS
Christian Democrats	25
Communist Party	15
Social Democrats	9
Socialists	8
People's Democratic Party	1
Statutory Freedoms Movement	1
Committee for the Defence of the Republic	1

Two members of the Grand Council are appointed to act as Regents every six months. The Regents exercise power in conjunction with the Council of State—Congresso di Stato, which is made up of ten departments. There is no Prime Minister, but GIANLUIGI BERTI, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, is virtual leader of the coalition government.

Defections from the Communist Party in 1957 led to a bloodless revolution after which a coalition of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats came to power. In January 1960 the women of San Marino were given the right to vote.

The Christian Democrat/Social Democrat coalition survived a serious governmental crisis in 1966, but in January 1973 a split between the two parties over economic policy led to the resignation of the Government. In March 1973 a new Government was formed by an alliance between the Christian Democrats and the Socialists. In September 1973 women were given the right to stand for public office.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS

San Marino has diplomatic relations with the following countries: Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, People's Republic of China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, El Salvador, Finland, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Israel, Japan, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Mexico, Monaco, Netherlands, Panama, Senegal, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, U.S.S.R., United Kingdom, U.S.A., Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Judicial Authority is exercised by the Council of Twelve—Consiglio dei XII.

FINANCE

Italian and Vatican City currency are in general use in the Republic, which also issues its own coins and postage stamps.

EXTERNAL TRADE

Principal exports are wine, woollen goods, furniture ceramics and building stone quarried in Mount Titano. San Marino postage stamps, sold to collectors, also constitute a source of income from abroad. In addition some income is derived from an agreement not to sell tobacco, salt or matches which are not Italian-made or subject to Italian taxation. There are about 100 small and medium-sized industrial and artisanal firms in San Marino.

TRADE UNION CONFEDERATIONS

Confederazione Generale Democratica dei Lavoratori Sammarinesi: Piazza del Teatro, San Marino; 1,800 mems.; affiliated to IFCTU.

Confederazione Generale del Lavoro Sammarinese: via Piagge, San Marino; 1,400 mems.; affiliated to F.S.M.

COMMUNICATIONS

San Marino is connected with Rimini and the Adriatic coast by funicular from the capital, San Marino, to Borgo Maggiore, a mile away, and thence by helicopter to Rimini. There is also a bus service, and a new highway down to the coast at Rimini, about 7 km. away. There are no frontier or customs formalities.

TOURISM

Ente Governativo per il Turismo, Sport e Spettacolo (Government Tourism, Sport and Entertainment Board): Palazzo del Turismo, San Marino; Dir. GIOVANNI VITO MARUCCI. There are facilities for shooting, fishing and various other recreations. In 1974 there were 28 hotels and restaurants.

SPAIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Spain, in south-west Europe, forms more than four-fifths of the Iberian peninsula. It is bounded to the north by France and to the west by Portugal. To the east is the Mediterranean and, twenty miles to the south, Africa. The climate is less temperate than in most of western Europe, with hot summers and, in the hilly interior, cold winters. The language is Spanish. Catalan is widely spoken in the north-east, and Basque in the north. Roman Catholicism is the established religion. The national flag (proportions 3 by 2) carries three horizontal bands of red, yellow (half the depth) and red. The state flag carries, in addition, the national coat of arms. The capital is Madrid.

Recent History

Since the victory of the Nationalists in the Spanish Civil War in 1939 the Spanish Government has been led by General Francisco Franco. It has been his Government's policy to pursue a neutral course in international affairs. Since the early 1960s Spain has taken great trouble to improve relations with former Spanish colonies in Latin America and with the Arab states. Trade relations have been established with most of the Communist countries of Europe. In 1972 a five-year trade agreement was signed with the Soviet Union and the first trade agreement with the German Democratic Republic was signed in April 1974. Full diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union have yet to be established. The longstanding dispute with the United Kingdom over the future of Gibraltar continues.

The spectacular growth of the Spanish economy since the late 1950s, helped by foreign exchange earnings from tourism and remittances from workers abroad, was accompanied by the gradual eclipse of the doctrinaire Falangist faction in the government and its replacement by "technocrats" backed by Opus Dei, a Catholic lay organization whose influence in government declined after 1973. Government relations with the Church have become strained in recent years. Negotiations with the Vatican on the revision of the 1953 Concordat have not reached a satisfactory conclusion. In January 1973 the Episcopal Conference approved a document calling for the revocation of the rights and privileges enjoyed by the Church under the Constitution, in return for which the State should renounce the privilege of "presentation" (appointment of bishops). A movement for the abolition of a special prison for clergymen gathered momentum throughout 1973, and tension came to a head in November when judicial proceedings were initiated against two bishops in connection with public statements they had made.

Under a decree issued on June 9th, 1973, General Franco relinquished the post of Presidente del Gobierno (President of the Council of Ministers) to Admiral Luis Carrero Blanco. He retained the titles of Chief of State, Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces and leader of the National Movement. Admiral Carrero Blanco was killed in December 1973, when unrest from both labour and Basque separatist movements was at its height. Responsibility for the assassination was claimed by ETA, the Basque separatist organization. Carlos Arias Navarro became Prime Minister in January 1974 and promised reforms which with increased freedom of the press, an apparent weakening of General Franco's health and position and the effect of the coup d'état in Portugal in April 1974 led to intense left-wing political activity, including the formation of democratic unions. A subsequent reaction by right-wing hard-liners against the new liberalism culminated in the dismissal of a liberal minister and the resignation of another minister and several top-level civil servants.

Government

The Law of Succession drawn up in 1947 and amended in 1966 defines Spain as traditionally a monarchy and states that General Franco will be succeeded by a king. Legislation is initiated by the Council of Ministers and General Franco, as Head of State, has the power of veto. The Council of State, a partly elected, partly nominated body, is the supreme consultative organ advising the Head of State on all matters within his competence. The Cortes, also partly elected and partly nominated, discusses and proposes legislation. In July 1972 General Franco announced that in the event of his death the Council of the Realm would summon the Cortes within eight days and install Prince Juan Carlos de Borbón as king.

Defence

Military service is compulsory in Spain and lasts for 18 months. Total strength of the armed forces was 293,000 in 1974: army 210,000, navy 44,000 (including 8,000 marines), and air force 39,000. The para-military Guardia Civil numbers 65,000 men. The defence pact between the United States and Spain, renewed in 1970, provides a network of air and naval bases under Spanish sovereignty and used by the armed forces of both sides. The 1973 defence budget amounted to 65,700 million pesetas.

Economic Affairs

Spain has traditionally been an agricultural country, her main products being potatoes, sugar beet, citrus and other fruits, cereals and vegetables. However, between 1960 and 1970 the proportion of the working population engaged in agriculture dropped from 41 to 28 per cent, and over the same period industrial goods increased from one-third to three-quarters of total exports.

The Spanish motor industry has expanded dramatically in recent years and in 1974 there was considerable foreign investment in the industry. Spain has also become important in the European chemical industry and in 1973 investment in the industry was 15,000 million pesetas and output in 1974 is estimated at 400,000 million pesetas. Spain itself lacks significant deposits of minerals but there are huge deposits of phosphates in Spanish Sahara. Spain's machine tool industry is also expanding with production valued at 9,067 million pesetas in 1974, 33 per cent of which is exported.

The Spanish shipbuilding industry, based mainly on the north-west coast, is now the third largest in the world and in 1973 constructed 222 ships with an aggregate displacement of more than 1.5 million gross tons.

The Third Development Plan, announced in November 1971, envisages the spending of 865,368 million pesetas over the four-year period 1972-1975. Of this sum, 96,900 million pesetas are being spent on the expansion of education and technical training, 20,160 million pesetas on telephone services, 103,656 million pesetas on farming and fishery modernization and 187,488 million pesetas on transport.

Spain joined the European Airbus project in 1971 and is receiving a 4.5 per cent share of the development and construction work for the aircraft. In 1970 the Spanish Government signed a preferential trade agreement with the EEC after eight years of negotiations. It was later agreed that the commercial provisions of the agreement should not apply to trade between Spain and the United Kingdom during 1973, to give time for a revised agreement to be worked out taking account of the EEC enlargement, with due regard to Spain's anxiety to preserve her traditional market in the United Kingdom for agricultural produce.

Despite measures to control inflation, prices continued to rise steadily in 1974. Emigrants' remittances and income from tourism declined in 1974, putting a strain on reserves. Due to the increased cost of imported oil, which provides 65 per cent of Spain's energy needs, a large trade deficit is forecast for 1974.

Transport and Communications

In 1973 Spain had 13,415 kilometres of railways and the Renfe plan for 1974-77 calls for the electrification of 2,757 kilometres of track at a cost of 18,200 million pesetas. In 1973 there were 142,136 kilometres of roads, including 450 kilometres of motorway. Motorways under construction include the Autopista del Mediterráneo, running from the French border to Valencia, the Bilbao-Behovia motorway (105 kms) and the Seville-Cádiz motorway (93 kms). Iberia, the Spanish national airline, maintains external and internal services.

Social Welfare

National Insurance is compulsory for all employed or self-employed Spaniards. The National Insurance Scheme covers temporary incapacity to work, accident insurance, assistance to dependants, permanent incapacity, widows' pensions, old-age pensions, unemployment. Contributions are paid jointly by the employer (42 per cent) and the employee (8 per cent) according to the employee's income. Social security schemes covered 28.37 million people in 1972.

Education

Education is compulsory and free from the age of 6 to 14. Primary Education lasts four years, after which pupils can continue at primary school to complete their compulsory education, or enter secondary schools. Education in state and other primary schools is now provided free. 4.1 million pupils are estimated to have benefited from this measure. Secondary Education consists of state schools (Institutos Nacionales de Enseñanza Media) or private and denominational schools (Colegios de Enseñanza Secundaria).

Both provide a six-year course leading to the Bachillerato Superior. A further pre-university year with a qualifying examination is required for entry to university or higher technical school.

Higher Education: There are twelve state universities and two independent universities. These are also autonomous universities in Madrid, Barcelona and Bilbao. The degree course leads to a Licenciatura and lasts five years; the doctorate is usually a two-year course by examination and thesis. Higher Technical Studies in engineering and architecture are followed at Escuelas Técnicas de Grado Medio and Escuelas Técnicas de Grado Superior. The new Spanish Educational Reforms will increase educational opportunity at all levels. New universities are to be created and grants will be provided where necessary.

Tourism

Tourism makes an important contribution to the country's economy. Spanish resorts have become increasingly popular with foreigners, 34.6 million visiting Spain in 1973, 6.3 per cent more than in 1972. The Costa Brava, the Costa del Sol, the Balearic Islands and the Canary Islands all attract many visitors. Others tour the old towns of Spain—Seville, Córdoba, Granada, Toledo—and the modern cities of Madrid and Barcelona. Winter sports resorts are being developed in the Pyrenees.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Spain: Algeria, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Denmark, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Luxembourg, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Sierra Leone, Sweden, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, Uganda, United Kingdom, U.S.A., Uruguay; also since 1966: Argentina, Barbados, Brazil, Costa Rica, Cyprus, the Dominican Republic, Fiji, the Gambia, Guatemala, Iran, Liechtenstein, Malta, Monaco, Pakistan, Panama, Philippines, San Marino, South Africa, Tunisia.

Sport

Bullfighting maintains its traditional popularity but football is now the favourite sport in Spain.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (St. Joseph the Worker), May 8th (Ascension Day), May 29th (Corpus Christi), June 29th (SS. Peter and Paul), July 18th (National Day), July 25th (St. James of Compostela), August 15th (Assumption), November 1st (All Saints' Day), December 8th (Immaculate Conception), December 25th (Christmas Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 6th (Epiphany), March 19th (St. Joseph), April 15th (Maundy Thursday), April 16th (Good Friday), April 17th (Holy Saturday).

Weights and Measures

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 céntimos = 1 Spanish peseta.

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 132.00 pesetas;

U.S. $1 = 56.65 pesetas.

THE CONSTITUTION

There is no written Constitution of the Spanish State, whose legal foundation is formed by a number of fundamental laws and charters. These are the Fuero de los Españoles (Spaniards' Charter), the Fuero del Trabajo (Labour Charter), the Ley Constitutiva de las Cortes (Parliament Law), the Ley de Sucesión (Law of Succession), the Ley de Referendum Nacional (National Referendum Law), the Ley de los Principios Fundamentales del Movimiento Nacional and The Organic Law of the Spanish State.

THE SPANIARDS' CHARTER, 1937

As early as 1937, the political parties fighting on the National side were unified by decree into a single movement which adopted the name of Falange Española Tradicionalista y de las Juntas de Ofensiva Nacional-Sindicalista (F.E.T. y de las J.O.N.S.) and set out to provide a social organization for Spain on corporative or "national-syndicalist" lines. The aims of the party were summarized in the Spaniards' Charter, published in 1937.

(1) The Spanish State proclaims as the main principle of its acts respect for the dignity, integrity and liberty of the individual, acknowledging man as the bearer of eternal values and member of a national community, endowed with duties and rights, the exercise of which guarantees the common good.

CHAPTER I

(2) Spaniards owe faithful service to their Motherland, loyalty to the Head of the State and obedience to the laws.

(3) The Law protects equally the rights of all Spaniards without class distinction or discrimination between persons.

(4) Spaniards are entitled to respect concerning their personal or family honour. Whoever insults them, regardless of his social status, will incur liability.

(5) All Spaniards have a right to receive knowledge and education and a duty to acquire them, either at home or in private or public centres, according to their free choice. The State will ensure that no talent is wasted for want of financial means.

(6) The profession and practice of the Catholic religion, which is that of the Spanish State, will enjoy official protection.

The State will assume the protection of religious freedom, which will be guaranteed by effective judicial protection and which, in turn, will safeguard morals and public order.

(7) Service to the Motherland in a military capacity confers an honourable status on Spanish citizens.

All Spaniards must accept military service when called up, according to the law.

(8) By means of laws, and always in a general manner, personal contribution can be asked for, in case of national interest or public necessity.

(9) Every citizen must contribute to the public expenditure according to his means. No one can be compelled to pay taxes which are not established in accordance with the appropriate law voted by the Cortes.

(10) All Spaniards have the right to undertake public functions of political representative character, through the family, the Municipality and the Syndicate, without this preventing their being elected to other legally established representative bodies.

(11) All Spaniards may hold public positions and offices according to their merit and capacity.

*(12) Every Spaniard is allowed to express his opinions freely so long as they are not directed against the fundamental principles of the State.

(13) Inside the national territory the State guarantees the liberty and secrecy of correspondence.

*(14) Spaniards have the right to set up residence freely inside the national territory. (By virtue of Art. 35 suspended for 2 years, May 1962-May 1964.)

*(15) No one may enter the home of a Spaniard or carry out any search in it without his consent, unless empowered with a warrant from the competent Authority, and in the cases and manner established by the laws.

*(16) Spaniards may meet and associate freely for lawful purposes and according to the rules established by the laws.

The State may create and maintain organizations which it considers necessary to the fulfilment of its purposes. The established rules, which will take the form of Law, will co-ordinate the operation of this right with the one acknowledged in the preceding paragraph.

(17) Spaniards are entitled to legal security. All the organs of the State will operate according to a pre-established social order of rules which cannot be arbitrarily interpreted or altered.

*(18) No Spaniard may be detained except for reasons and in the manner prescribed by the Laws.

After a time-limit of seventy-two hours, any detained person must be set free or handed over to the judicial Authority.

(19) No one may be sentenced otherwise than by virtue of a Law existing prior to the offence and by decision of the competent Tribunal after the hearing and defence of the person concerned.

(20) No Spaniard may be deprived of his nationality except for the crime of treason, defined in the penal laws, for enrolling in the army or for accepting public office in a foreign country in defiance of the express prohibition of the Head of the State.

(21) Spaniards may address individual petitions to the Head of the State, to the Cortes and to the Authorities.

Corporations, civil servants and members of the armed forces and Institutes can only exercise this right in accordance with the regulations governing their callings.

* These articles were suspended during the State of Emergency (January-March 1969).

CHAPTER II

(22) The State acknowledges and protects the family as a natural and fundamental institution of society, with rights and duties having precedence and superiority over all positive human laws.

Marriage can be only one and indissoluble.

The State will give special protection to large families.

(23) Fathers are under obligation to feed, bring up and educate their children. The State can suspend or deprive of their paternal authority those who do not exercise it in a worthy manner and transfer the guardianship and upbringing of minors to those who can legally take charge of them.

CHAPTER III

(24) All Spaniards have the right to work and the duty to contribute to some useful social activity.

(25) Work, because of its essentially human nature, cannot be relegated to the material concept of trading, nor be the object of any transaction incompatible with the dignity of the person involved. Work constitutes in itself an honourable attribute and sufficient qualification to claim protection and assistance from the State.

(26) The State acknowledges that any Enterprise is a collective contribution of skill, man-power and capital in its various forms, and declares therefore the right of these elements to share in the benefits.

The State will take care that relations between them are kept under the strictest impartiality in a social order which subordinates financial values to those of human quality, to the interest of the State and to the requirements of the common good.

(27) All workers will be protected by the State in their right to a just and sufficient remuneration, allowing them and their families, at least, a degree of welfare which will enable them to lead a worthy and moral life.

(28) The Spanish State guarantees to the workers the security of aid in case of misfortune and acknowledges their right to assistance in the case of old age, death, sickness, maternity, accident at work, invalidity, unavoidable suspension of work and other risks which come under the heading of social security.

(29) The State will maintain public assistance institutions, and protect and give support to those created by the Church, the Corporations and private persons.

(30) Private property, as a natural means of fulfilling individual, family or social purposes is recognized and protected by the State.

All forms of property are subordinated to the necessities of the State and of the common good.

Riches must not remain inactive, nor be dissipated unworthily, nor be used for illicit purposes.

(31) The State will facilitate for all Spaniards access to the kinds of property most intimately connected with the human person: home, land, working equipment and goods in everyday use.

(32) In no case may the penalty of confiscation of property be imposed.

No one may be expropriated except in case of public necessity or social interest, and provided that the appropriate compensation has been paid in accordance with the provisions of the Laws.

(33) The exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter cannot be allowed to threaten the spiritual, national and social unity of Spain.

(34) The Cortes shall vote the necessary laws for the exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter.

(35) The operation of the articles 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 18 can be temporarily suspended by the Government, totally or partially, by virtue of a Decree-Law which will determine the limit, extent and duration of the measure.

(36) Any violation against any of the rights proclaimed in this Charter will be examined by the laws, which will determine what action can be taken in their defence before the appropriate judicial organ.

Given in the Pardo on the seventeenth of July, nineteen forty-five, and modified in nineteen sixty-six.

ORGANIC LAW

On November 22nd, 1966, General Franco proposed a New Organic Law of the State, which was approved by the Cortes and by the electorate in a National Referendum on December 14th, 1966. A summary of the provisional Organic Law is given below. In July 1969 the Cortes approved Prince Juan Carlos de Bourbon as General Franco's successor by 491 votes for, 9 against and 19 abstentions.

THE HEAD OF THE STATE (Art. 1-12)

The Spanish State is legally a monarchy based on the principles of the National Movement promulgated in the Fundamental Law of 1958.

The actual and present Head of State is the Caudillo, Generalísimo Francisco Franco Bahamonde. As Head of State and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces he has assumed absolute authority and is "Responsible to God and the nation". By virtue of legislation re-organizing the Spanish Government, published in the Official Bulletin of November 24th, 1966, he confers appointments, public offices and honours, and will appoint the President of the Government, the President of the Cortes and other High Offices; he may preside over the Council of Ministers and National Defence Junta but may not vote. The Cortes must authorize International Treaties or Agreements, declarations of War and Peace, and the Nomination of a Successor. During the absence of the Head of State, the Heir to the Crown (if over 30) or the Council of Regency will assume his functions. The guardian of royal minors will be approved by the Cortes and may not be the President of the Government or the President of the Cortes; he must be Spanish and by religion a Catholic.

In July 1969 the Head of State nominated Prince Juan Carlos de Borbón as the future King.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE NATION (Art. 13-20)

The Head of State controls the government by means of the Council of Ministers. The Head of State is to share executive powers with the President, who is to be chosen by the Head of State from a list of three names submitted by the Council of the Realm. The President's term of office will be five years, although he may be removed earlier by the Head of State or the Council of the Realm. A new President must be elected within a period of ten days. The other members of the government will be appointed by the Head of State on the recommendation of the President.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL (Art. 21-28)

The President of the Government in his capacity as National Leader of the Movement is President of the National Council, assisted by the permanent Secretary-General. The Council consists of 70 other members and one elected councillor from each province. The Council promotes mainly the Principles of the Movement and other Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom.

THE JUDICIARY (Art. 29-36)

The President of the Supreme Court supervises the Judiciary which includes military, ecclesiastical and civil courts. Legal aid is granted. The Attorney-General liaises between the Government and the Courts of Justice. The President of the Supreme Court is elected for six years (Art. 58).

THE ARMED FORCES (Art. 37-39)

The National Defence Board, consisting of the Heads of the Armed Forces, relevant ministries and the President of the Government, will be responsible for security and national defence. A Supreme General Staff will co-ordinate the activities of the three General Staffs.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE STATE (Art. 40-44)

The Council of State is the highest consultative body in matters of government and administration, and takes precedence, after the Council of Ministers, over all other bodies.

It consists of a President, a Secretary-General, an undefined number of permanent Councillors appointed by the Head of State and the following eight ex-officio Councillors: the Primate of Spain, the Vice-Secretary-General of the Falange, the Combined Chiefs of Staffs, the Solicitor-General, the Director-General of Litigation, the Rector of the University of Madrid, the Director of the Institute of Political Studies and a National Delegate of the Syndicates. The President of the Council of State is elected for six years (Art. 58).

The Council of the Realm assists the Head of State in those tasks of government that are exclusively his. He takes the advice of the Council when a law approved by the Cortes has to be reconsidered by them, with regard to declarations of peace or war and on the question of the nomination of a successor.

The Council is presided over by the President of the Cortes, and consists also of the senior dignitary of the Church with a seat in the Cortes, the senior Captain General on active service, the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, the Presidents of the Council of State, the Supreme Court of Justice and the Institute of Spain; two Councillors elected by each of the following groups in the Cortes: the Syndicates, Local Government, National Councillors, representatives of the Family; one Councillor from the University Rectors and the Professional Colleges and three Councillors appointed by the Head of State.

The Regency Council would consist of the President of the Cortes (who would preside), the senior dignitary of the Church and the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces.

The Cortes españolas (Parliament) were established in their present form by the Law of July 17th and the Decrees of October 15th, 1942. The chief mission of the Cortes is the preparation and elaboration of the laws without prejudice to the powers exercised by the Chief of State. The 570 members of the Cortes are called "procuradores", and are partly ex-officio members and partly so by appointment, together with some elected members. Under the new Organic Law of the State of November 24th, 1966, 104 members will be elected by heads of families and their wives.

Members must be Spanish, have attained their majority, be in full use of all civil rights with no political disability. Nominations by the Head of the State can be revoked; the remainder hold office for four years and may be re-elected. The President, two Vice-Presidents, and four Secretaries are elected by the Plenum of the Cortes. The Committees are appointed by the President of the Cortes with the approval of the Government. The President is elected for six years, the other above-named officials are elected for each term of the legislature.

Laws falling under the usual headings, and any others, as also motions and agreements not having the force of law, are submitted to a full session of the Cortes. Committees deliberate on anything not included in the foregoing, draft laws, and submit proposals. In war or emergencies the Government may act through decree-laws to be ratified by the Cortes later. The ratification of international treaties or agreements that affect the full sovereignty or the territorial integrity of Spain, will be the subject of a Law passed by the plenary session of the Cortes. The full Cortes or the Committees consider the ratification of treaties on matters within their competence. There is no provision for introducing new laws through individual members, and no law is promulgated without the approval of the Head of the State, to whom the President of the Cortes submits the draft laws approved by the Cortes.

The National Economic Council is the consultative, advisory and technical body dealing with matters affecting the national economy. The President of the National Economic Council is elected for six years (Art. 58).

The Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom deals with acts and laws of a fiscal nature, and audits the accounts of official organisms receiving aid from the State. The President of the Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom is elected for six years (Art. 58).

LOCAL ADMINISTRATION (Art. 45-48)

The Municipalities and Provinces are empowered to carry out their respective aims under the conditions stated in the law. Municipal and provincial corporations will be elected by articulate suffrage. State aid will be provided to encourage the development of municipal and provincial life.

RELATIONS BETWEEN SUPREME BODIES OF STATE (Art. 49-58)

The Cortes will be immediately informed of the appointment of a new government and settle questions of the Succession. The President of the Government and the Ministers will inform the Cortes of measures taken by them. The Government will submit the accounts of the State for approval by the Cortes, and the Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom will keep both organisms informed. The Head of State alone can seek the opinion of the Council of the Realm, and settle disputes within the judiciary.

THE APPEAL OF "CONTRAFUERO" (Art. 59-66)

A "Contrafuero" is any legislative act or general disposition of the Government which contravenes the principles of the National Movement or the other Fundamental Laws of the Realm. Appeal, which must be lodged within two months, may be lodged by the National Council and the Cortes to the Head of State. The resolution which annuls the "Contrafuero" will immediately be published in the Boletín Oficial del Estado. A special law will establish the conditions, the form and the terms in which the procedure arising from the appeal of "Contrafuero" must be promoted and carried out.

THE LAW OF SUCCESSION

In a broadcast to the nation on March 31st, 1947, General Franco outlined the Law of Succession that was later submitted and approved by the Cortes (on June 7th) and by the electorate in a National Referendum (on July 6th, 1947). This law was amended in The Organic Law of the State of November 24th, 1966.

This law states that Spain, as a political union, forms a Catholic and Social State, and is by tradition a monarchy. The Head of the State during his lifetime is the Caudillo, Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Don Francisco Franco.

A Regency Council will assume power on the vacancy of the Head of the State, its rulings needing a majority vote of two-thirds to be valid.

The Head of State may at any time nominate to the Cortes his successor, who will bear the title of King or Regent. (The Head of the State may revoke a nomination previously put forward by himself and approved by the Cortes.) If the death or declared incapacity of the Head of the State occurs before his successor has been nominated, the Regency Council shall convoke the Government and the Council of the Realm within three days, and they shall agree by at least a two-thirds majority on the nomination of the successor who must be a person of royal lineage. If no man is acceptable a Regent shall be agreed and appointed for a length of time specified by the Cortes.

In order to be the Head of the State, King, or Regent, the nominee must be a Spaniard, a man over thirty, a Catholic, and swear to obey the fundamental laws of the nation which are the "Spaniards' Charter", the Labour Charter, the Constitutional Law of the Cortes, the Law of Referendum, and the present Law of Succession. He must also be loyal to the principles of the Movimiento Nacional. (Modifications of this law require a national referendum as well as the agreement of the Cortes.) The monarchy having been re-established, the order of succession shall be by primogeniture.

SPAIN

Should the incapacity of the Head of the State be recognized by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the Government it is to be communicated to the Council of the Realm, who are to act in accordance with this Law of Succession.

THE TRADE UNIONS

As participants in work and production, all Spaniards constitute the Trade Union Organization which is divided into syndicates. Within the legal form there will be autonomous associations of employers, technical experts, workers and members of legislative councils. The Unions represent the interests of the national community, and will collaborate in the study of production problems and may propose solutions and take part in the drafting of regulations, and the supervision and fulfilment of working conditions. They may create and maintain organizations for research, moral, cultural and occupational training, health insurance and other items of a social nature that may be of interest to those who participate in production.

The Constitution, The Government, Parliament

POLITICAL PARTIES

There is one legally constituted political organization:

Falange Española Tradicionalista y de las Juntas de Ofensiva Nacional-Sindicalistas: President of the Political Junta Generalísimo FRANCISCO FRANCO BAHAMONDE.

The National Council of the Movimiento (Falange) consists of from 50 to 75 members, 12 nominated by the Caudillo and the remainder representing various fields of public life, and matters concerning the structure of the Falange, the formation of corporations and national and international questions submitted to it by the Caudillo.

In 1968 new statutes were drawn up allowing for the formation of political associations within the Movement.

There are many currents of opposition in Spain, some of which are actual parties operating clandestinely or in exile. These include several monarchist groups and others on the right wing of the opposition, several small Christian and Social Democrat groups, and revolutionary action groups and regional separatist movements (e.g. Catalans) on the left wing. In July 1974 the Communist Party, Christian Democrat Union, Carlists and Workers' Commissions formed the Democratic Junta of Spain whilst the Socialist parties and several centre-left groups formed the Mesas Democráticas. Both groupings are working for democracy in Spain. The following is a list of the de facto parties:

Confederación Nacional de Trabajo: a clandestine anarcho-syndicalist workers movement.

Euskadi ta Ascatasuna (ETA): the Basque Nationalist party, operating clandestinely; Leader JOSÉ ESCUBÉ-LARRAZ.

Partido Comunista: the Spanish Communist party, operating from Paris under SANTIAGO CARRILLO.

Partido Social de Acción Democrática: a Social Democrat party led by ENRIQUE TIerno GALVÁN.

Partido Socialista Obrero Español: 69 rue du Tour, 31 Toulouse, France; a socialist party affiliated to the Socialist International; Gen. Sec. FELIPE GONZÁLEZ MARQUES.

These courts are located in Madrid, Albacete, Barcelona, Burgos, Cáceres, Coruña, Granada, Oviedo, Palma de Mallorca, Las Palmas, Pamplona, Sevilla, Valencia, Valladolid, Zaragoza. They deal with civil and criminal cases and litigation. Pres. of the Audiencia Territorial of Madrid, ACISCLO FERNÁNDEZ CARRIEDO.

Audiencia Provincial (Provincial High Courts): There are fifty provincial courts, fifteen of which constitute "Salas" (Chambers) of the corresponding "Audiencias Territoriales" and the remaining thirty-five are located in the capitals of provinces in which there is no "Audiencia Territorial", the area of their jurisdiction corresponding to that of the provincial boundary. They deal mainly with criminal cases but since September 1968 they have also dealt with some civil cases. The provincial courts that do not form a chamber of the territorial courts are located in Madrid, Albacete, Alicante, Almería, Avila, Badajoz, Barcelona, Bilbao, Burgos, Cáceres, Cádiz, Castellón, Ciudad Real, Córdoba, Coruña, Cuenca, Gerona, Granada, Guadalajara, Huelva, Huesca, Jaén, Las Palmas, León, Lérida, Logroño, Lugo, Málaga, Murcia, Orense, Oviedo, Palencia, Palma, Pamplona, Pontevedra, Salamanca, San Sebastián, Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Santander, Segovia, Sevilla, Soria, Tarragona, Teruel, Toledo, Valencia, Valladolid, Vitoria, Zamora, Zaragoza.

Juzgados de Primera Instancia e Instrucción (Courts of Primary Jurisdiction and Proceedings): Policy is now to separate the civil and criminal jurisdiction of these courts. In Madrid there are 16 Courts of Primary Jurisdiction and 16 Courts of Proceedings and in Barcelona there are 8 and 13 respectively.

Juzgados Municipales (Municipal Courts): administer justice in localities with a population of up to 30,000 inhabitants. They have civil and criminal jurisdiction. There are thirty-three of these courts in Madrid and twenty-four in Barcelona.

Juzgados Comarcales y de Paz (Regional Courts and Justices): administer justice in less important cases in districts where the courts mentioned above do not function. Justices are freely appointed and do not belong to the legal profession.

Consejo Superior de Protección de Menores (Higher Council for the Protection of Juveniles): A Commission of the Council forms a Court of Appeal against the judgment of the Provincial Juvenile Courts. The Commission is composed of a president, a vice-president, two permanent members, two substitutes, and a secretary, all of whom must be trained in the law; Pres. MIGUEL FENECH NAVARRO.

Juzgados de Peligrosidad y Rehabilitación Social (Social Danger and Rehabilitation Courts): These courts have been established in Madrid, Barcelona, Burgos, Málaga, Palma de Mallorca, Valencia, Sevilla, Valladolid and Algeciras.

RELIGION

The population of Spain is overwhelmingly Roman Catholic, and there are some 61,000 churches, with about 500 persons in each parish.

In 1967 there were 306 Protestant churches with a practising congregation of 30,000. Barcelona has 38 of these churches and Madrid has 15. In addition there are two Protestant seminaries, one in Madrid and the other in Barcelona. The enforcement of the partial regulations of the law on religious liberty concerning denominational associations called for applications to be made to the Ministry of Justice and a register to be kept of church members and church accounts, before May 31, 1969.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

THE PRESS

A Press Law was passed in 1966 which put an end to censorship, gave far greater freedom of discussion to editors, and reduced the penalties for offences against morality and the principles of the Movimiento to six months' imprisonment. But in April 1967 the Cortes increased the penalties to six years' imprisonment for exceeding the 1966 definition of press freedom, and to twelve years' for publishing insults to the nation or propaganda against the Fundamental Laws. Restrictions were further increased by the Official Secrets Act of April 1968. Suspension of publication, which like a fine, could become effective before consideration in a court, was also provided for as a penalty for infringements of the press laws. Thus Madrid was prohibited from publication for two consecutive periods of two months in 1968, in addition to being fined, and was finally forced to cease publication in 1972.

The Government closely supervises the selection and training of journalists, who must be graduates of one of the two official schools in Madrid or of the independent school in Navarra. The Ministry of Information controls EFE, the national news agency which monopolizes the distribution of foreign news; through the Press Syndicate, the Government also has influence over the distribution of newsprint.

Spain has no national newspapers but provincial towns are well served by local papers. There are 115 dailies, including fifteen in Madrid and eleven in Barcelona. This press regionalism is explained in part by communication problems—Madrid newspapers may take up to a day to reach provincial centres—and in part by regional loyalties.

Most towns have a single Monday paper (Hoja del Lunes), and in a town with more than one daily the publishers combine to produce this edition. There are some 2,384 weekly papers and periodicals, of which about 300 are general interest magazines.

The space devoted to news reports in the newspaper press is relatively small—usually less than half that given to cultural features and entertainments. Most papers are tabloid in format. The majority of daily and weekly papers belong to political, religious, or commercial organizations and associations. One-third of them are published by organs of the Movimiento. The major ownership groups are as follows:

Prensa del Movimiento: the principal press group: controlled by the Falange and comprising 33 morning and 6 afternoon dailies, five weekly papers and four magazines. Each of thirty-three towns has one or more Falange dailies; the most important are Arriba and Marca in Madrid, and La Prensa and Solidaridad Nacional in Barcelona. The Falange also owns the Pyresa news agency.

Editorial Católica: closely connected with Acción Católica, a non-political movement supported by businessmen and active in social welfare, this group controls five of the better dailies, headed by Ya in Madrid; it also owns the Logos news agency.

Prensa Española: with monarchist leanings, publishes the daily ABC in Madrid and Seville, and the weekly Blanco y Negro.

Members of Opus Dei, the Catholic group, run a daily in Madrid, Nuevo Diario (morning), and also run the only independent school of journalism at Navarra.

The chief morning papers in order of popularity are ABC, Ya and Marca in Madrid, and in Barcelona Vanguardia, Diario de Barcelona and Correo Catalán. Madrid is unique in having four afternoon papers, including Pueblo and El Alcázar. The circulations of ABC, Ya, Pueblo and Vanguardia exceed 200,000 each.

Vanguardia, highly respected for its serious and comprehensive news coverage, is able to devote six pages each to foreign, national and local news, and some 45 per cent of its 36 pages to advertising—more than any other paper. Some 10 per cent of its 200,000 copies circulate nationally. ABC and Ya are the chief Monarchist and Catholic dailies respectively (ABC having rather more feature articles and pictures), and are likewise highly respected. The two remaining major metropolitan dailies belong to the Falange: Arriba and the Syndicalist Pueblo.

Among the more serious weeklies are Ecclesia, the official publication of the Catholic hierarchy, and Destino, an influential progressive paper. Blanco y Negro, Semana, Gaceta Ilustrada and Triunfo typify the popular class of illustrated family periodicals; Triunfo is steadily growing in importance. On Sundays the dailies produce special editions; that of ABC is a prominent example.

Spain's first nuclear power plant at Zorita was inaugurated in July 1968. It is owned by the Unión Eléctrica Madrileña and has a capacity of 153,200 kW. A second larger power station (460 mW) at Santa María de la Gardoña, in the province of Burgos, owned by Nucleonor, started operations in 1971. The third and largest power station at Vandellós near Tarragona came into operation in 1972; owned by Hifrensa, it has a capacity of 480 mW. Between 1975 and 1980 nuclear plants at Lemóniz (Vizcaya), Almárez (Cáceres), Asco (Tarragona) and Cofrentes (Valencia) will come into operation.

Co-operation: Spain has bilateral agreements with the U.S.A. and the U.K., France, Canada, Brazil, Peru, Belgium, Italy, Argentina, Pakistan and the Federal Republic of Germany; it is a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Nuclear Energy Agency and the European Atomic Energy Society.

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Sweden lies in north-west Europe, occupying half the Scandinavian peninsula. It is bordered by Finland to the north-east and Norway to the north-west and west. The Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Bothnia are to the east, the Skagerrak and Kattegat to the south-west. Winters are cold and summers mild. Average summer temperature in Stockholm is 17°C (62°F) and winter temperature -3°C (27°F). The language is Swedish, but there are Finnish and Lapp minorities in the north retaining their own language. The predominant faith is Lutheran Protestantism. The national flag (proportions 8 by 5) is light blue with a yellow cross. The capital is Stockholm.

Recent History

Sweden remained neutral throughout both World Wars and, despite playing an active part in promoting international co-operation, still refuses to join organizations such as the EEC which might compromise Swedish neutrality. In 1946 Sweden joined the United Nations, to which it has since given considerable financial and military support. Sweden was also a founder member of the Council of Europe in 1949 and of the Nordic Council in 1952. The death in September 1973, of King Gustaf VI Adolf, who had reigned since 1950, and the accession of Carl XVI Gustaf permitted a new constitution to come into force in 1975, reducing the monarch's role to that of a ceremonial head of state.

Sweden has had only three Prime Ministers since 1932, all Social Democrats. Between 1951 and 1957 the Social Democrats governed in coalition with the Centre Party, and since then, as a minority government, they have been dependent on Communist support. A comprehensive social welfare system has been constructed, but the resulting heavy taxation has led to increasing dissatisfaction. The September 1973 general election produced an evenly balanced Parliament, with the socialist and non-socialist blocs each holding 175 seats. Tied votes can be resolved only by drawing lots, and if the Government loses on a key issue new elections will have to be held. The Prime Minister, Olof Palme, has so far avoided this eventuality, having obtained the support of the Liberal Party on major economic issues, in return for a moderation of his socialist rhetoric.

Government

Sweden is a constitutional monarchy. Executive power rests with the Cabinet (Regeringen) which is responsible to Parliament (Riksdag). The unicameral Riksdag was introduced in January 1971. The new constitution, which came into force in January 1975, reduces royal powers to a formal representative role, and lowers the voting age to 18. The country is divided into 24 counties.

Defence

Sweden maintains total armed forces of 18,000 regulars, 13,900 reservists and 54,200 conscripts and has a total mobilization strength of 750,000. The army consists of 8,200 regulars, 40,400 conscripts and 101,000 reserves on 18-40 days annual refresher training. The navy has 4,400 regulars and 7,500 conscripts and in the air force there are 5,400 regulars and 6,300 conscripts. In addition there are voluntary defence organizations with a total strength of 551,500. National service lasts from seven and a half to fifteen months in the army and navy, and from nine to fourteen months in the air force. The 1974-75 budget for defence was 7,221 million kronor. A permanent force at the disposal of the UN was created in 1964, at present serving in Cyprus and Egypt.

Economic Affairs

About 7 per cent of the working population are in agriculture, forestry and fisheries. Agriculture is concentrated in the southern region, the chief crops being oats, wheat, rye, barley and potatoes. Dairy produce accounts for about 30 per cent of farming output. Farming produces about 4 per cent of Sweden's G.N.P. Nearly all the live-stock and crop production is consumed in Sweden. Half the country is covered by forests, providing timber, pitch, fuel and tar, and supplies for the paper and rayon industries. Sweden is rich in mineral resources. There are large deposits of iron ore, which provides the basis of domestic heavy industry and a continuing supply to the industrial market in Western Europe. Sweden accounts for some 5 per cent of world iron ore production. The major ore fields are at Kiruna and Malmberget, north of the Arctic Circle. In 1973 about 27 per cent of the working population were employed in manufacturing industry, of which the largest branches are metalworking and engineering. Industrial products include machinery, vehicles, electronics, telecommunications, and shipping. Swedish furniture, porcelain and glass have an international reputation.

Peaceful labour and foreign relations and political stability have helped Sweden to become one of the most prosperous nations in the world. After two years of near-total stagnation, the Swedish economy began to show signs of a revival in 1973 and in 1974 GNP grew by some 4 per cent. Private consumption rose, and the paper and pulp industry benefited from record international prices. The 1973 balance of payments surplus is expected to be transformed into a deficit for 1974, due to Sweden's dependence on imported oil supplies. Swedes enjoy the highest average incomes in Europe, more than U.S. $4,600 per head in 1972, but are subject to very heavy taxation to pay for comprehensive social welfare policies. Many businesses, from shipyards to pharmacies, are state-owned, grouped in Statsföretag, a holding company which is one of the largest industrial concerns in Sweden.

Sweden was one of the founder-members of EFTA and favours the reduction of trade barriers.

Transport and Communications

Sweden has an excellent railway system. Of the 11,361 km. (1974) of nationalized railways, about 7,000 km. are electrified. Swedish State Railways operate ferry services to Denmark and the German Democratic Republic. Roads extend for 93,000 km. The ocean-going fleet totals

5,669,000 g.r.t. (1973). The Swedish Airlines own a three-sevenths share in the Scandinavian consortium SAS (Scandinavian Airlines System).

Social Welfare

There is a highly advanced system of social security schemes covering old age and family pensions, sickness, unemployment and disability benefits based on a National Pension Fund. Expenditure on the social services absorbs a considerable part of the national income. In late 1969 the State took over the pharmaceutical industry as part of the socialization of the Health Scheme. A computer system is being introduced in some big hospitals whereby complete medical records of all patients are immediately available to doctors in the hospital. A national dental insurance scheme was established in 1974. A law is planned to increase security of employment, and unemployment benefits for those made redundant.

Sweden is now developing detailed planning for the development of medical services comprising hospitals and health centres for ambulatory care. Sweden has a very high ratio of hospital beds to population—about 16.5 per 1000 inhabitants. The tendency now is for emphasis on ambulatory care, often highly specialized, and on integration of health and social services.

Education

Basic education, which is compulsory, extends for ten years, starting at the age of 6, and is received at the Comprehensive School (Grundskolan). At the end of this period, the pupil may enter the Integrated upper secondary school. From July 1971 the Integrated upper secondary school (Gymnasieskolan) has replaced the earlier schools, Upper secondary school (gymnasium), Continuation school (fachskola) and Vocational school (yrkesskola). In the new integrated school there are 22 lines of 2–4 years duration and also special vocational courses of different lengths of time.

After grade three on the theoretical lines the pupils may enter university studies. There are five state universities, several state owned professional schools and institutes on university level and one semi-private business school.

All children without exception receive instruction in English from third grade at the Comprehensive school.

Tourism

Sweden offers a variety of landscape from the mountains of the Midnight Sun north of the Arctic Circle to the white sand beaches of the south. There are many lakes and forests. Stockholm, a beautifully situated capital, is famous for modern architecture.

Visitors from Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Norway do not require a passport.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Sweden: Algeria, Andorra, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Fiji, Finland, France, The Gambia, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Republic of Korea, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Singapore, South Africa, Spain, Swaziland, Switzerland, Tanzania, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom, the U.S.A., Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

Sport

The most popular sports are football, gymnastics, skiing, ice-hockey, athletics and tennis. Swimming, sailing, golfing, hunting, table-tennis, orienteering, bandy and 'varpa' also have a considerable following.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (May Day), May 8th (Ascension Day), May 19th (Whit Monday), June 21st (Midsummer), December 25th and 26th (Christmas).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 6th (Epiphany), April 16th (Good Friday), April 19th (Easter Monday).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 öre = 1 Swedish krona.

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 9.86 kronor;

THE CONSTITUTION

The Swedish constitution dating from 1809 was based on four fundamental laws, the Instrument of Government, the Act of Succession, the Freedom of the Press Act and the Riksdag Act. Following partial reforms in 1968 and 1969, a new Instrument of Government and a new Riksdag Act were adopted in 1973 and 1974, and the revised constitution came into effect in January 1975. Meanwhile, government commissions are considering a fundamental law to protect civil rights and liberties, and are expected to introduce proposals for a Mass Media Act to replace the Freedom of the Press Act in the spring of 1975. The principles behind these extensive reforms are described in the Instrument of Government:

All public power in Sweden emanates from the people. The Swedish democracy is founded on freedom of opinion and on universal and equal suffrage and shall be realized through a representative and parliamentary polity and through local self-government. Public power shall be exercised under the laws.

THE RIKSDAG

The Riksdag is described in the Instrument of Government as the prime representative of the Swedish people. It introduces laws, decides the amount and use of taxation and examines the government's actions. The Riksdag at present contains 350 members, to be reduced to 349 at the next election, re-elected every three years. Previously, Riksdag members had the right of unlimited speaking time, but the number and length of speeches a member may deliver in a debate may now be restricted.

THE COMMITTEE SYSTEM

In accordance with tradition the work of the Swedish Riksdag is, to a great extent, carried on in a non-partisan atmosphere. This is largely the result of the thorough attention given to all questions by numerous standing committees elected on a basis of proportional representation. Besides the "Utrikesnämnden" (Advisory Council on Foreign Affairs) and Special Committees, every Riksdag appoints from within the assembly a Constitution Committee, a Finance Committee, a Taxation Committee and at least 12 other committees. At the moment there are 16 committees, each with 15 members: Constitution (Konstitutionsutskottet), Finance (Finansutskottet), Taxation (Skatteutskottet), Administration of Justice (Justitieutskottet), Laws (Lagutskottet), Foreign Affairs (Utrikesutskottet), Defence (Försvarsutskottet), Social Insurance (Socialförsäkringsutskottet), Social Welfare (Socialutskottet), Cultural Affairs (Kulturutskottet), Education (Utbildningsutskottet), Communications (Trafikutskottet), Agriculture (Jordbruksutskottet), Economic Affairs (Näringsutskottet), Home Affairs (Inrikesutskottet) and Local Government (Civilutskottet).

The Constitution Committee has to examine the minutes of the Cabinet and to deal with or to initiate proposals concerning alterations of the fundamental laws and of laws regulating local government.

THE GOVERNMENT

Under the Instrument of Government, the Cabinet governs Sweden and is responsible to the Riksdag. Sweden's parliamentary system of government has been written into the constitution only since 1968-69. The new constitution has formalized the position of the King relative to Cabinet and Parliament, and laid down rules on the selection and resignation of the Cabinet.

As head of state, the King will have only representative and ceremonial duties. The King is not to participate in the government of the country, which instead will be conducted by the Cabinet at meetings not attended by the King. From 1975 no decisions of Government will be signed by the King, nor will the King lead the procedure resulting in the formation of a new government. Instead this task has been entrusted to the Speaker of the Riksdag. Following consultations within the Riksdag, the Speaker is to nominate a candidate for the office until his appointment has been confirmed by the Riksdag. A candidate is considered approved by the Riksdag if his appointment is not opposed by a Riksdag majority. Failing this approval the procedure has to be repeated. After four unsuccessful attempts to secure Riksdag approval of a candidate for the premiership, a new election to the Riksdag must be held within three months. A candidate for the premiership approved by the Riksdag nominates the other members of the Government himself.

The Prime Minister can be dismissed at his own request, by the Speaker of the Riksdag, or in the event of a vote of no confidence in the Riksdag. Other ministers can be dismissed at their own request, by the Prime Minister or by a vote of no confidence. If the Prime Minister should resign or die, all of the ministers in his Cabinet must resign. A Cabinet which is due to resign shall, however, remain in power until a new Prime Minister has been appointed.

A demand for a vote of no confidence will be considered only if it is supported by 10 per cent of the members of the Riksdag. A vote of no confidence requires the support of more than half of the Riksdag members. If the Riksdag decides upon a vote of no confidence the Cabinet can avoid resigning if it calls for an extra general election within one week. The Riksdag may continue its business, or be summoned to convene, even after a decision has been made to hold new elections. A Riksdag session may, however, be terminated by a special decision of the Government. Existing terms of office do not expire until the new terms of office have begun.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

In Sweden, local government, following a now traditional evolution of de-centralization, is exceedingly important, and it is estimated that municipalities are responsible for about 40 per cent of public administration. However, interaction between local and national government is of fundamental importance to the development and management of the country. For these reasons local government elections have a strong element of national politics, and the turnout in both local and general elections is equally high.

ELECTORAL SYSTEM

In order that local and national government terms of office should coincide, the Constitution calls for local and general elections to be held on the same day. In both cases the term of office for the elected candidate is three years. Proportional representation was introduced in Sweden between the years 1906 and 1909, universal and equal suffrage by 1921. The voting age is 18. In allocating the 349 seats in the Riksdag the seats are divided into two groups. The first group of 310 "constituency seats" is distributed among the constituencies according to the number of eligible voters, and within each constituency among the parties. The remaining 39 seats are distributed as "adjustment seats". First, it is calculated how many seats each party would have obtained if the whole country had been treated as a single constituency and if the distribution of seats had taken place according to a modified Lague method. From this figure is subtracted the number of "constituency seats" received, the result being the number of "compensatory seats" to be allocated to each party. These seats are filled by candidates nominated in the constituencies. There is a check to the emergence of small parties. Only parties which have received at least 4 per cent of the total votes cast are entitled to a seat. However, any party which receives 12 per cent or more of the votes in any constituency will be allowed to compete for a permanent seat in that constituency.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

In Sweden the judiciary and the executive are separate. Judges are appointed by the Government and cannot be removed except by judicial sentence.

There are state officers who exercise control over the judiciary as well as the administrative authorities. The Justitiekansler (Chancellor of Justice) and the three Justitieombudsmän supervise the courts and the general administration including the armed forces. The Justitiekansler performs his functions on behalf of the Government. The Justitieombudsmän are appointed by and act on behalf of Parliament.

COURTS OF FIRST INSTANCE

Tingsrätt (District Court): The Court of First Instance in both civil and criminal cases. In criminal cases the court is composed of a presiding professional judge and five lay judges; in petty cases the court consists of the professional judge only. In civil cases the court is ordinarily composed of three professional judges; however, preparatory sessions are conducted by one professional judge. In family-law cases, e.g. divorce cases and cases concerning the guardianship or the custody of a child, the court is, however, composed of a professional judge and five lay judges. The lay judges are elected for a period of six years. They act as members of the bench and should consequently be distinguished from the jurors of other countries. There are 100 District Courts.

APPELLATE COURTS

Hovrätt (Court of Appeal): The Court of Second Instance, consisting of a president, judges of appeal and assessors. The work is apportioned between various divisions, each of which has four or five members. There are six Courts of Appeal:

- Svea Hovrätt in Stockholm; Pres. S. RUDHOLM.
- Göta Hovrätt in Jönköping; Pres. E. Åqvist.
- Hovrätten över Skåne och Blekinge in Malmö; Pres. B. KJELLIN.
- Hovrätten för Västra Sverige in Göteborg; Pres. G. LAGERGREN.

Hovrätten för Nedre Norrland in Sundsvall; Pres. Å. VON SCHULTZ.

Hovrätten för Övre Norrland in Umeå; Pres. K. SIDENBLADH.

SUPREME COURT

Högsta Domstolen (Supreme Court of Sweden): in Stockholm, consisting of 25 members, is the Court of Highest Instance. The Court works in divisions, each of which is duly constituted with five members. Certain cases are decided by full session of the Court. There are also special divisions with three members, which decide if the Court is to consider a case or not.

Supreme Court Justices: S. EDLING (Pres. of the Court), H. E. J. SJÖWALL, N. E. HEDFELDT, T. NORDSTRÖM, G. O. E. PETRÉN, A. O. R. BRUNNBERG, B. ALEXANDERSON, E. G. F. CONRADI, P. G. BERGSTEN, B. BERNHARD, T. B. HULT, K. J. G. GYLLENSVÄRD, S. C. E. T. HESSER, C. V. HOLMBERG, K. E. WALBERG, L. S. FREDLUND, I. GÄRDE-WIDEMAR, O. A. HÖGLUND, L. BRUNDIN, H. N. I. ULVESEN, N. O. G. MANNERFELT, L. T. WELANSON, E. NYMAN, H. HESSLER, U. NORDENSON.

SPECIAL COURTS

Special courts exist for certain categories of cases, e.g. fastighetsdomstolar (real estate courts) for cases concerning real estate.

ADMINISTRATIVE COURTS

The Swedish system of guarantees of the legality of administrative actions is a mixed one, composed on one hand of elements common to the system of control of lower agencies by higher agencies and on the other hand of a system of separate administrative courts. The most important administrative courts are:

COUNTY ADMINISTRATIVE COURTS AND COUNTY FISCAL COURTS

In each of the 24 administrative districts of the country there is a Länsrätt (County Administrative Court) and a Länsskatterätt (County Fiscal Court). The County Administrative Court is competent in certain cases under the

SWEDEN

Child Welfare Act and the Temperance Act that are appealed from administrative bodies, e.g. cases concerning detention. It also handles cases concerning compulsory transfer of a child from a custodian to another and cases concerning withdrawal of driving licences. The County Fiscal Court hears cases concerning taxation. The bench of both courts consists of a professional judge and three or four lay judges.

ADMINISTRATIVE COURTS OF APPEAL

All decisions by the County Administrative Courts and the County Fiscal Courts may be appealed to Kammarrätten (Administrative Courts of Appeal) consisting of a president, judges of appeal and assessors. Those courts also handle cases that are appealed from administrative bodies concerning the salary of public servants, social welfare, etc. The bench consists of at least three and not more than four judges. There are two Administrative Courts of Appeal:

Kammarrätten i Stockholm: Pres. G. HEDBORG.

Kammarrätten i Göteborg: Pres. N. WENTZ.

SUPREME ADMINISTRATIVE COURT

Regeringsrätten (Supreme Administrative Court of Sweden) in Stockholm, consisting of 22 members, is the Court of Highest Instance in Administrative cases. The composition of the Court is governed by rules very similar to those that apply to the Supreme Court (see above).

Supreme Administrative Court Justices: A. O. R. HEGRELIUS (Pres. of the Court), C. V. ÅBJÖRNSSON, H.-F. RINGDÉN, B. K. L. HJERN, A. B. Å. MARTENIUS, A. H. V. KÖRLOF, G. F. O. CARL, K. H. B. WIESLANDER, Å. B. PAULSSON, L. B. SIMONSSON, S. V. LUNDELL, P. I.

RELIGION

CHURCH OF SWEDEN

Svenska Kyrkan (Church of Sweden): Of the Evangelical Lutheran Faith. The State controls its property, and the King must profess the pure evangelical creed. About 95 per cent of the population are members. The Church consists of 13 dioceses, 2,565 parishes which are united into 1,140 rectors' districts (pastorates), and 179 rural deaneries. The number of active clergy is 2,650 (including missionaries in the mission fields). The administrative authority of the diocese is the chapter, the president of which is the Bishop. Since 1164 the Archbishop of Uppsala has been head of the Church. The relations between the Church of Sweden and other religious denominations are regulated by the Act of Religious Freedom, 1951; publs. Vår Kyrka, Svensk Kyrkotidning, Svensk Pastoraltidskrift (all weekly).

Archbishop of Uppsala: C. O. W. SUNDBY, P.O.B. 640, 751 27 Uppsala 1.

OTHER CHURCHES

Catholic Church: 70,265 members; Head of the Diocese: Bishop JOHN E. TAYLOR, O.M.I., Fack, 102 40 Stockholm 5; publ. Katolsk Kyrkotidning, Credo, Katolsk Informationsfäst.

Metodistkyrkan i Sverige (The United Methodist Church): f. 1868; about 9,000 members; Bishop OLE E. BØRGEN; Pres. of Conference Board MA. CARL AXEL HOLM; Sec. Pastor ERIK NILSSON, Sibyllegatan 18, 114 42 Stockholm; publs. Svenska Sändebudet, Söndagsskolklockan (weekly), Rätt Kurs (every two months), Metod (every two months).

THE OMBUDSMEN

For many years, Sweden's "Chancellor of Justice" officially protected the citizen from undue interference, negligence or errors caused by government officials. Furthermore, the ordinance of 1766 proclaimed that all documents from which government officials make their decisions were to be made public. By the beginning of the 19th century, however, the Chancellor of Justice was considered not sufficiently independent of the Government, and in 1809 the post of "Justitieombudsman" was created to supervise the manner in which judges, government officials and other civil servants observe the laws, and to prosecute those who act illegally, misuse their position or neglect their duties. The Ombudsman is allowed access to all documents and information and has the power to prosecute, although the latter is seldom practised as a public admonition usually suffices. Unlike Norway or Denmark, government ministers in Sweden are not subject to supervision by the Ombudsman. In 1941 the term of office was extended from one to four years. At present there are three Ombudsmen. In 1972 3,707 cases were decided by the Ombudsmen. Out of these cases 3,351 were complaints and 356 were initiated by the Ombudsmen themselves. The decisions were as follows: 5 prosecutions, 1 disciplinary proceeding, 628 public admonitions, 1,613 cases no criticism after investigation, 1,281 cases dismissed without investigation; 175 cases were referred to other agencies or state organs and 1 case resulted in a proposal to Parliament.

Ombudsmen: ULF LUNDVIK, GUNNAR THYRESON, BERTIL WENNERGREN.

Evangeliska Fosterlands-Stiftelsen (Swedish Evangelical Missionary Society): Tegnérgatan 34, 113 59 Stockholm Va; f. 1856; about 27,000 members; Chair. K. MOSSBERG; Mission Dir. TORSTEN WIBERG; publ. E.F.S. Budbäraren.

Svenska Missionsförbundet (The Mission Covenant Church of Sweden): Tegnérgatan 8, Box 6302, 113 81 Stockholm; f. 1878; about 86,000 members; Chair. of Board GUNNAR HJERN; Gen. Sec. and Pres. GÖSTA HEDBERG; publ. Svensk Veckotidning.

Jewish Community: There are about 16,000 Jews living in Sweden. The largest Jewish Community is in Stockholm:

Jewish Community in Stockholm (Mosaiska Församlingen): Wahrendorffsgatan 3, 111 47 Stockholm; about 5,000 members; Rabbi MORTON H. NARROWE.

The Salvation Army: Östermalmsgatan 71, Box 5090, 102 42 Stockholm; f. 1882; 36,696 members; 244 corps; 1,214 outposts; 86 social institutions; Territorial Commander HARRY TYNDAL; Chief Sec. KARL-AXEL LERNERMO; publs. Stridsroset, Den Unge Soldaten (weekly), Salvationisten (monthly); Editor-in-Chief SIGVARD IHLAR.

Svenska Frälsningsarmén (Swedish Salvation Army): Sibyllegatan 18, Stockholm; f. 1905; 2,000 members; Chief Col. S. TOLLIN; national movement with democratic views; split from international movement 1905; publ. Vår Fana.

THE PRESS

Press freedom in Sweden dates from the law of 1766. The 1949 Freedom of the Press Act, a fundamental law embodying the whole of the press legislation in the Constitution, is expected to be replaced by a new Mass Media Act in 1975. The 1949 law guarantees the right to print and disseminate ideas; protects those supplying information by forbidding editors to disclose sources under any circumstances; authorizes all public documents to be publicly available, official secrets being the only exception; and contains provision for defamation. Press offences are to be referred to common law; and all cases against the Press must be heard by jury.

In response to the economic situation in the newspaper world which since the war has caused many conservative and liberal papers to cease publication, the Press Subsidies Bill was passed in 1966 to grant funds to the political parties who then distribute them to assist their own papers where they are in financial difficulties.

In 1916 the Pressens Opinionsnämnd or Fair Practices Commission was founded. Lacking judicial status, its role is like that of the U.K. Press Council, with greater powers to protect the reputation of the Press and to rehabilitate persons wronged by the Press who refuse to apply to courts of law. As the Opinionsnämnd, unlike the ordinary courts, permits evidence as to the truth or falsehood of accusations of libel, it is frequently preferred by libelled persons. It treats economic and editorial disputes, examines accusations of inaccuracy, etc. Its judgments are widely published and highly respected.

The Press serves as a major medium for political discussion, and the Conservative and Socialist press each enjoy over 20 per cent of daily circulation and the Liberal over 40 per cent. Many papers are directly owned or run by political parties or trade unions. Many party organs depend on substantial subsidies from their parties who since the Press Subsidies Bill have more funds at their disposal.

The trade unions give financial support through the intermediary of the Trade Unions Confederation to some 24 Socialist dailies of which they own approximately four-fifths. Though these papers are party organs, in close contact with the party, each editor expresses a considerable measure of independence. The Trade Union Confederation owns Aftonbladet. Affiliated trade unions publish some 25 periodical organs, with 1.6 million total circulation, including the popular Metallarbetaren (368,000).

There are no important chains of newspapers. Among the major dailies, Svenska Dagbladet is owned by an independent foundation, and Göteborgs-Posten by its editor. One of the main publishers is the Bonnier group which stems from Albert Bonnier's publishing house for books. This group also owns, among a number of enterprises in the paper and printing field, Åhlen & Åkerlunds Förlags AB whose magazines enjoy 50 per cent of the total circulation of periodicals. Bonniers is also the majority shareholder in the popular Dagens Nyheter and its associated evening paper Expressen. Four other companies account for a further 40 per cent of Sweden's magazine circulation.

The dominating influence of the few major dailies is largely confined to Stockholm, the provinces having a strong Press of their own. News coverage is tending to broaden, particularly of international news. Sensational subjects are not dramatized.

The major dailies in order of circulation are: Expressen, Aftonbladet, Dagens Nyheter, Göteborgs-Posten, Svenska Dagbladet, Sydsvenska Dagbladet. The most popular weekly periodicals include the family magazine Aret Runt and the Leseisfers ICA-kunren. Vi caters for serious cultural and political discussion and Bonniers Litterära Magasin specializes in literary topics.

SWEDEN

CIVIL AVIATION

Board of Civil Aviation: 161 89 Bromma; f. 1923; state owned; Dir.-Gen. HENRIK WINBERG; 1,700 employees; central government authority for matters concerning civil aviation.

The main international airport is at Arlanda, connected by bus service to Stockholm 42 km. away. There are other international airports at Torslanda, 15 km. from Gothenburg, and at Sturup, 28 km. from Malmö. A new airport for the Gothenburg area is planned at Landvetter. There are regular flights between the main cities in Sweden.

Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS): Head Office: Stockholm-Bromma 10.

On February 8th, 1951 an agreement was signed at Oslo merging the three Scandinavian national airlines—Denmark's DDL, Norway's DNL and Sweden's ABA—into one company, the Consortium Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS). The agreement was retroactively effective from October 1st, 1950. ABA holds three-sevenths of the capital, DDL and DNL have two-sevenths each.

The Board of the consortium consists of two members from each of the companies and the chairmanship alternates between the three partners. Pres. KNUT HAGRUP; Exec. Vice-Pres. (Technical and Operational) BJÖRN G. TÖRNBLÖM; Exec. Vice-Pres. (Finance) C. E. LINDH; Exec. Vice-Pres. (Marketing) K. A. KRISTIANSEN; Senior Vice-Pres. (Administration) GUNNAR SANDBERG; publ. Scanorama (6 issues a year). Fleet (Dec. 1974): 2 Boeing 747B, 13 DC-8, 41 DC-9-41, 6 Convair Metropolitan, 9 DC-9-21, 2 DC-9-33AF, 2 DC-10-30.

A.B. Aerotransport: Ulvsundavägen 193, 161 10 Bromma 9; Chair. KRISTER WICKMAN; Chair. Exec. Cttee. MARCUS WALLENBERG; Man. Dir. STURE BLONBERG; Swedish partner of SAS.

ATOMIC ENERGY

Statens kärnkraftinspektion (Swedish Nuclear Power Inspectorate): Box 43058, 100 72 Stockholm 2; Chair. GÖSTA NETZEN; Chief Man. ARNE HEDGRAN.

The Board is the body entrusted with control and inspection of atomic installations and atomic fuel.

Statens råd för atomforskning (The Swedish Atomic Research Council): Box 23136, 104 35 Stockholm 23; f. 1945; Pres. MATS LEMNE; Head of Secretariat Dr. LARS PERSSON.

The Council, under the Ministry of Education, allocates the funds provided by the Government for fundamental research in nuclear physics, nuclear chemistry, radiation chemistry, radiation physics and radiation biology. Budget 1974-75: 30.2m. kr.

The Council also acts as an advisory body to the Swedish Government and to Swedish authorities within the field of atomic research.

The Council represents Sweden in CERN (European Organization for Nuclear Research) and in NORDITA (Nordic Institute for Theoretical Atomic Physics).

AB Atomenergi (The Swedish Atomic Energy Company): Studsvik, Fack, 611 01 Nyköping; Man. Dir. BO ALER.

The company, formed in 1947, is state owned. It is a nuclear development corporation, a national laboratory and is the central institution for Swedish applied atomic research work. The staff of the company is about 1,000.

The Ågesta experimental heat and power station was closed in 1974. Oskarhamn 1 (440 MW), Sweden's first commercial nuclear power plant, has been operating since 1971 and three more nuclear power reactors, totalling 2,160 MW, were begun in 1974. Full-scale uranium milling may be begun at the Ranstad pilot mill.

Statens Vattenfallsverk (State Power Board): Fack 162 87 Vällingby; is building six light-water power reactors, 760 MW, 820 MW, and four of 900 MW (Ringhals I-IV and Forsmark I and II), becoming operational between 1974 and 1980.

Forskningsinstitutet för Atomfysik (Research Institute for Physics): Roslagsvägen 100, 104 05 Stockholm 50; f. 1964; Dir. Prof. INGMAR BERGSTRÖM.

The Gustaf Werner Institute, University of Uppsala (Institute for High Energy Physics and Physical Biology): Box 531, 751 21 Uppsala.

CO-OPERATION

Sweden is a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Centre Européen de Recherches Nucléaires and NORDITA (Nordic Institute for Theoretical Atomic Physics). Agreements were concluded with the U.S.A. in 1956 and with the United Kingdom in 1957 and 1964.

UNIVERSITIES

Göteborgs Universitet (Göteborg University): Göteborg; 131 professors, 20,600 students.

Linköpings Högskola (University of Linköping): Linköping; 400 teachers, 4,800 students.

Lunds Universitet (University of Lund): Lund; 1,676 teachers, 19,000 students.

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Switzerland is a mountainous state in central Europe bounded to the north by Germany, to the east by Austria, to the south by Italy, and to the west by France. The climate is generally temperate, although wide and sudden variations in weather frequently occur due to differences of altitude, aspect and gradient. The snow line varies from about 2,500 to 3,200 metres. There are four official languages—German, French, Italian and Romansch, spoken by 64.9, 18.1, 11.9 and 0.8 per cent of the population respectively (1970). About 48 per cent are Protestants and 49.4 per cent Roman Catholic. The Federal flag, which is square, consists of a white cross on a red background. The capital is Berne.

Recent History

Although Switzerland has long been the headquarters of many international organizations, she has not yet joined the UN for fear of compromising her neutrality, which was guaranteed in 1815. However she maintains a Permanent Observer at the UN and has joined several of the UN specialized non-political agencies. In 1971 the Federal Council recommended that Switzerland should join the UN and in 1973 a consultative committee was appointed to examine the question. Switzerland was a founder member of EFTA in 1960 and joined the Council of Europe in 1963. In July 1972 a special agreement was concluded with the EEC.

The main federal body is the Federal Council. It is organized on a collegial system, dividing the posts between the Social Democrats, the Radical Democrats, the Christian Democrats and the People's Party. These parties lost seats in the general election in October 1971 but they still have a very large majority. There has been a swing to the right in recent cantonal and national elections, benefiting the Republic Movement and the National Campaign against Foreign Domination, which favour repatriating foreign workers and oppose joining the UN.

The restricted powers of the Federal Council cause referenda and initiatives to become the main foci of political debate. Women were given the right to vote in national elections by a government-instigated referendum in 1971. Three major plebiscites took place in 1974. In the canton of Berne, a majority voted in favour of the establishment of a separate canton for the French-speaking inhabitants of the Jura. A government plan to increase income and turnover taxes was defeated, and in another referendum the National Campaign's proposal to expel more than half of the over one million resident aliens was rejected.

Government

The Swiss Confederation, composed of 25 cantons and half-cantons, has a republican federal constitution. Parliament consists of two chambers of equal status—the Council of States and the National Council. Although national policy is the prerogative of the Federal Government, considerable power is vested in the cantons. The Swiss citizen shares three distinct allegiances—communal (local), cantonal and national. Direct participation is very important in communal government, and all members may take part in the communal assemblies or referenda which decide upon local affairs. Each canton has its own written constitution, government and assembly. The referendum, which can be on a communal, cantonal or national scale, further ensures the possibility of direct public participation in decision taking. In September 1973 the Government set up a commission to revise the Constitution, which dates back to 1848.

Defence

Switzerland maintains no standing army except for a small permanent personnel of commissioned and non-commissioned officers primarily concerned with training. There are 3,500 regulars in the army and 3,000 in the air force, and 36,000 conscripts. In effect, however, every male citizen between the ages of 20 and 50, almost without exception, is a trained militiaman, and keeps his rifle, ammunition and uniform in his own home. After 4 months initial training the standard is maintained by refresher courses, the frequency and duration of which vary according to the age of the soldier. The Confederation belongs to no foreign defence organizations, and the strategy of the army and air force is defensive. The total strength of the armed forces when mobilized is about 625,000. The allocation for defence in the 1974 budget was 2,662 million Swiss francs, but some expenses are borne by the cantons, and conscripts are not paid by the state.

Economic Affairs

In spite of the country's mountainous terrain agriculture is an important part of the Swiss economy. Three quarters of the land surface is agricultural or forest land and over 7.6 per cent of the total labour force is employed in farming. However, cheese is the only product sold in quantity abroad. Switzerland's main natural resource is the water power which has been used in the production of hydro-electric power. Some of this has been exported but recently reserves of power have been running low and Switzerland is turning towards nuclear power. The lack of natural resources has meant that industry has been developed over a wide base. The Swiss aptitude for precision engineering, especially in clocks and watches, has long been famous; other important industries include heavy engineering, textiles, footwear, chemicals, wood-working and printing. Other important sources of foreign revenue are the numerous international banks and the tourist industry which attracts visitors to Switzerland all the year round.

Since the war the Swiss economy has been expanding well and the population enjoys a very high standard of living. Inflation has recently become a serious problem. The consumer price index, with a base of 100 points in September 1966, rose to 132.5 at the end of 1972, 146.1 in November 1973 and 156.1 in September 1974. Wages are tied to the price index, and have tended to rise faster than productivity. The shortage of labour (only 74 Swiss were unemployed in 1974) has led to dependence on foreign workers. In 1974 there were 1,053,000 aliens resident in Switzerland, 596,000 of whom had jobs, as well as 121,226 seasonal workers and 107,902 who commute from neighbouring countries. Political pressures have caused the Government to impose limits on immigration, thus worsening the labour-wages-prices situation. Switzerland is very dependent on exports, which represented 23.5 per cent of G.N.P. in 1973. The heavy inflow of foreign capital has helped to stimulate inflation, and the National Bank has been empowered to discourage the inflow of new funds, and in November 1974 imposed charges on foreign deposits in Swiss banks.

The EEC takes 46 per cent of Switzerland's exports and provides 68 per cent of total imports. A special agreement with the EEC was concluded in July 1972, providing for free trade in industrial goods. The rising cost of imports, particularly oil, and the revaluation of the Swiss franc worsened the Swiss trade deficit by 27.8 per cent between 1973 and 1974, January–September.

Transport and Communications

The Swiss Federal Railways (2,913 km.) are wholly electrified and amongst the most efficient in the world. The many small private railways chiefly cover short mountain routes. There are more than 18,150 km. of main roads and a comprehensive programme of motorway construction is scheduled to be completed by 1980. There is an ocean-going merchant fleet of 27 ships and there are 516 Rhine barges based on the port of Basle. Swissair is the national airline and Zürich, Geneva and Basle-Mulhouse are the principal airports.

Social Welfare

Almost all Swiss citizens are insured against illness by the Federal Insurance Law of 1911. This insurance is not yet universally compulsory. Unemployment insurance is subsidized by the Confederation, but varies in different cantons. There is a compulsory system of old age, widows', widowers' and invalids' insurance.

Education

Education is under cantonal and communal control with the result that there are twenty-five different systems in operation. Education has been compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 14 since 1874, and in most cantons a further two years of compulsory education are required. After this primary education some 10 per cent of the pupils enter a "non-vocational continuation school" for a period of one to four years. The greater proportion, however, enter either a "lower secondary school" or a "higher secondary school" (Gymnasium, Collège). A school-leaving certificate from the latter qualifies the pupil for admission to one of the eight universities or the two technical colleges. There are numerous private schools and many foreign children receive part of their education in Switzerland.

Tourism

Switzerland is the classic land of tourism. The principal attractions are the lakes and lake resorts and the mountains. Walking, mountaineering and winter sports are the chief pastimes. Receipts from tourism totalled 5,300 million francs in 1973, and expenditure was 2,660 million francs. In 1973 foreign visitors spent 33.4 million nights in Swiss hotels, etc.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Switzerland: Algeria, Australia, Brunei, Cyprus, Fiji, Greece, Israel, Japan, Malaysia, Malta, Morocco, New Zealand, Rhodesia, Singapore, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Yugoslavia, all Western European countries and all American countries except Chile.

Sport

Skiing, skating, mountaineering and orienteering, football and cycling are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

1975: May 8th (Ascension Day), May 19th (Whit Monday), December 25th–26th (Christmas).

1976: January 1st (New Year), April 16th (Good Friday), April 19th (Easter Monday).

May 1st (Labour Day), August 1st (Swiss National Day) and various regional holidays are also observed in some parts of Switzerland.

Weights and Measures

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 Rappen (centimes) = 1 Franken (Swiss franc).

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 6.17 francs;

U.S. $1 = 2.63 francs.

THE CONSTITUTION

Much of what is now Switzerland once formed part of the Holy Roman Empire, but it was primarily against the oppression of local overlords, among whom were the powerful Hapsburg family, that in 1291 the communities of Uri, Schwyz and Lower Unterwalden joined in an "everlasting league" of defence. In 1353 the confederation comprised eight cantons, and by 1513 thirteen. Throughout this period an increasing number of these cantons obtained charters which made them virtually free communities, directly responsible to the Emperor, and they finally achieved formal independence from the Empire at the close of the Thirty Years war, as the result of French influence.

The French Revolutionary Wars brought about the collapse of the old Confederation, and the establishment of a short-lived unitary state, the Helvetic Republic. The Confederation was restored in 1815, when three new cantons were admitted, and the Congress of Vienna recognized Switzerland's perpetual neutrality. Religious conflict and the opposition of liberal and conservative cantons were brought to an end with the adoption of a Federal Constitution in 1848. The federal form of government adopted was continued in the 1874 constitution, which is still in force.

The twenty-two federated Cantons (often referred to as the twenty-five States, because three of the Cantons are sub-divided) have sovereign authority except where the constitutional pact has defined limits to their powers, and all undelegated powers are theirs. Cantonal feeling still makes for marked disapproval of any increase in Federal authority, which has been greatly extended since 1874 in the economic and social spheres of legislation.

Principally, the Federal authority is responsible for civil, penal and commercial law, legislation concerning marriage, residence and settlement, export and import duties, defence, postal, telephone and telegraph services, the mint, forestry, hunting and fishing, hydro-electric power, the economy, railways, important roads and bridges, social insurance, and international affairs. Administration is largely in the hands of the Cantons, partly in the mixed management of Federal authorities and Cantons. The Cantons derive their revenue from direct taxation. The Federal authority draws its revenue from direct and indirect taxation, and Federal direct taxes, such as the defence tax, are becoming increasingly important. The profits from State enterprises and customs duties are received by the Federal authorities.

THE COMMUNES

Each of the more than 3,000 communes of Switzerland has local autonomy over such matters as public utilities, education and roads, and grant primary citizenship. Decisions are made by communal assemblies which all citizens can attend, except in the urban communes where referenda are necessary. The smallest communes have only about 20 inhabitants, the largest, Zürich, more than 400,000.

THE CANTONS

The 25 cantons and half-cantons of the Swiss Confederation each have their own constitutions and their own methods of choosing the members of the cantonal assembly and cantonal government and the States Councillors who represent them at the federal level. Five cantons, Glarus, Appenzell Ausserrhoden and Innerrhoden, Obwalden and Nidwalden, retain the Landsgemeinde, an assembly of all citizens of the canton held annually, as their decision-making authority. Elsewhere, democracy is less direct, the secret ballot and the referendum having replaced the mass assembly. Women have recently gained full political rights in almost all the cantons.

SWITZERLAND

THE FEDERAL ASSEMBLY

The Federal Assembly is composed of two bodies, the National Council and the Council of States, which can deliberate either together or separately. The 200 members of the National Council are elected directly, by proportional representation, every four years. The Council of States represents the cantons, each of which sends two councillors, elected in varying ways according to the cantonal constitutions. The Federal Assembly is the supreme governing body of the Confederation. Both houses have to accept legislative and fiscal measures, and the Federal Assembly supervises the army, the civil service and the application of the law, exercises the right of pardon and elects the Federal Supreme Court, the Federal Insurance Court, the General who commands the army in times of crisis, and the Federal Council.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

Executive authority is vested in the Federal Council, whose seven members are the heads of the Federal ministries. Each year the Federal Assembly chooses the President and Vice-President of the Confederation from among the Federal Councillors. Generally, the Councillors are chosen from the members of the Federal Assembly, for a term of four years, which is often extended for so long as they are willing to serve. The Radical Democrats, the Social Democrats and the Christian Democrats each take two of the seats on the Council, the remaining place going to the People's Party. There has been some criticism of the constraints this system places on the choice of Councillors, and also of the lack of representation given to the Social Democrats in the Council of States.

The Constitution, The Government

REFERENDA AND INITIATIVES

Referenda are held on both cantonal and federal levels. In many cantons all legislation has to be accepted by a majority of the voters, and in some cantons major financial matters have to be submitted to the popular vote. In federal affairs, a compulsory referendum must be held and the consent of a majority of the voters and of the cantons obtained for amendments to the Federal Constitution, and other legislation is subject to optional referenda. A petition from 30,000 voters is needed to bring about a national referendum, which can accept or reject any proposed legislation or international treaties concluded for a period of more than 15 years. The initiative gives voters in many cantons the right to propose a law or a legislative amendment and to demand a popular vote on it. A petition by 50,000 voters is needed to initiate a vote on an amendment to the Federal Constitution, but as federal laws cannot be proposed by means of an initiative many constitutional amendments introduced in this manner concern relatively unimportant matters. The initiative is also used by the political opposition to bring about changes in government policy. Two recent referenda were called by the Government to ratify the trade agreement with the EEC and to annul articles of the Constitution banning Jesuit priests from Switzerland.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Switzerland has possessed a common Civil Code since 1912, but the Penal Code was only unified in 1942. Under the Code capital punishment was abolished by the few Cantons which still retained it. The individual Cantons continue to elect and maintain their own magistracy, and retain certain variations in procedure. Apart from military courts, there are only two Federal judicial authorities, the Federal Tribunal and the Federal Tribunal of Insurance. The Penal and Civil Procedure in the Canton of Zürich is described as an example.

CANTON OF ZÜRICH

CIVIL LAW

(a) District Courts (Bezirksgerichte).

Presidents or Vice-Presidents, who generally have a university degree in law, are competent as sole judges (Einzelrichter) if the value of the case is between 100 and 1,000 frs. (values below 100 frs. are decided without appeal by judges of the peace (Friedensrichter), who need not be lawyers—normally there is one for each commune). The Presidents or Vice-Presidents also deal with specified claims in bankruptcy proceedings without any limitation of the importance of the case; they are also competent to deal in summary and ex-parte proceedings.

The District Courts consist of three or five members. They settle civil matters between 1,000 frs. and 2,000 frs. value, and decide most other civil matters in the first instance if the plaintiff or both parties do not ask for an exception (see below for commercial matters and cases of over frs. 4,000 value).

(b) Industrial Courts (Gewerbegerichte).

Suits between employers and employees arising from terms of employment can be decided at Industrial Courts which cover one or more communes. Representatives of each side participate as judges.

(c) Appeal Court (Obergericht).

Each Canton has an Appeal Court, which in Zürich consists of different specialized benches (Kammern) of three or five members.

The Appeal Court decides appeals and pleas of nullity against decisions of Industrial Courts, sole judges and District Courts. If both parties agree, cases of more than 4,000 frs. value may be brought directly before the Appeal Court to avoid District Courts.

A sub-branch of the Appeal Court is the Commercial Court (Handelsgericht). It consists of two members of the Appeal Court and three or five qualified merchants chosen by the President for each case from a list of fifty names. They decide cases of more than 4,000 frs. value if of a commercial character, when either both parties or the defendant are registered merchants. Further, this Court decides some special matters like patents and trade marks.

(d) Cassation Court (Kassationsgericht).

This is a special Cantonal Court deciding pleas of nullity against decisions of the Appeal Court, Jury Court and Commercial Court, when there has been a serious infraction by the lower court, particularly concerning procedure.

PENAL LAW

Matters of Penal Law are decided partly by the same courts as matters of Civil Law.

In the Canton of Zürich, the more important cases are tried by the Jury Court (Geschworenengericht) when the accused pleads "not guilty", by the Appeal Court when the plea is "guilty". The Jury Court consists of three judges, of whom at least the President is a member of the Appeal Court, and a jury of nine members. The judges and jury decide the case together in secret session. Eight affirming votes are required for a defendant to be found guilty.

Less important cases are tried by the District Courts, or sole judges, in the first instance, and by the Appeal Court in the second instance. In certain minor cases, no appeal is possible.

The Public Attorney has the right to support the written accusation before any court. He is bound to assist only in important cases when the accused pleads "not guilty".

Witnesses and experts are examined by the Public Attorney and sign written statements, which are joined to the written accusation of the Public Attorney. The defence is allowed to question them; they are seldom called again. As a rule, they appear in person only before Jury Courts and make their deposition a second time.

THE FEDERAL TRIBUNAL

1000 Lausanne 14.

President: HANS TSCHOPP.

Vice-President: PIERRE CAVIN.

The Federal Tribunal (Bundesgericht, Tribunale Federale or Tribunal fédéral), consisting, in all, of 28 members, sits at Lausanne. There are 15 supplementary judges. Both judges and supplementary judges are appointed by the Federal Assembly for six years and may be re-elected. The President and Vice-President are elected for two years.

In matters of Federal Law, the Tribunal decides non-financial civil cases and financial civil cases involving more than 8,000 frs. value. It gives final decisions on civil matters if both parties apply to it rather than to the cantonal courts, in cases involving more than 20,000 frs.

In penal cases the Tribunal acts mainly as a court of cassation, examining the decisions of cantonal courts for violations of federal law. It cannot change a lower court's finding on facts.

The Tribunal also decides civil cases between Cantons, between Cantons and the Confederation and claims by individuals or corporations against the Confederation involving over 8,000 frs. It gives final decisions on execution and bankruptcy proceedings and on the application of administrative law by federal and cantonal administrative and legal authorities, and acts as a constitutional court, deciding appeals concerning the violation of citizens' rights.

The Tribunal consists of the following sections:

- (a) Court of Public and Administrative Law (Staats- und Verwaltungsrechtliche Abteilung, Cour de droit public et de droit administratif, Corte di diritto pubblico e di diritto amministrativo).
- (b) Two Civil Courts (Zivilabteilungen, Cours civiles, Corti civili).
- (c) Bankruptcy Court (Schuldbetreibungs- und Konkurskammer, Chambre des poursuites et des faillites, Camera di esecuzione e dei fallimenti).

SWITZERLAND

- (d) Court of Penal Cassation (Kassationshof, Cour de cassation pénale, Corte di cassazione penale).
- (e) Court of Arraignment (Anklagekammer, Chambre d'accusation, Camera d'accusa).
- (f) Criminal Court (Kriminalkammer, Chambre criminelle, Camera criminale).
- (g) Federal Penal Court (Bundesstrafgericht, Cour pénale fédérale, Corte penale federale).

RELIGION

According to the 1970 Census, the religious adherence per 1,000 of the population was as follows: Protestant 478, Roman Catholic 494, Old Catholic 3, Jewish 3, other denominations (or without religion) 22.

CATHOLIC

In December 1972 the diocesan curias estimated that there were 3,126,890 Catholics in a total population of 6,626,204.

Roman Catholic Church: The Church in Switzerland and Liechtenstein is divided into 6 dioceses and the abbeys of Maria Einsiedeln and St-Maurice, each directly subordinate to the Holy See.

Diocese of Basle: Bischöfliches Ordinariat, Baselstr. 61, 4500 Solothurn; Bishop Mgr. ANTON HÄNGGI.

Diocese of Lausanne, Geneva and Fribourg: 86 rue de Lausanne, P.O.B. 271, 1701 Fribourg; Bishop Mgr. PIERRE MAMIE.

Diocese of Lugano: Borghetto 6, 6901 Lugano; Bishop Mgr. GIUSEPPE MARTINOLI.

Diocese of St. Gallen: Bischöfliches Palais, Klosterhof 6, 9000 St. Gallen; Bishop Mgr. JOSEPH HASLER.

Diocese of Sion: Evêché, 1950 Sion 2; Bishop Mgr. FRANÇOIS-NESTOR ADAM.

FEDERAL TRIBUNAL OF INSURANCE

President: THEODOR BRATSCI.

Vice-President: HANS KORNER.

The Tribunal was founded in 1918 and consists of seven members. It sits at Lucerne. Since 1969 it has been considered as the Court of Social Insurance (Cour des assurances sociales, Sozialversicherungsabteilung, Corte delle assicurazioni sociali) of the Federal Tribunal.

Old Catholic Church: Bishop, Rt. Rev. L. GAUTHIER, Willadingweg 39, Berne.

PROTESTANT

Federation of the Protestant Churches of Switzerland (Schweizerischer Evangelischer Kirchenbund, Fédération des Eglises protestantes de la Suisse): Sulgenauweg 26, CH-3007 Berne; f. 1920. The Protestant Churches of Switzerland are grouped in this Federation of which the executive organ is the Council of the Federation (Vorstand des Schweizerischen Evangelischen Kirchenbundes, Conseil de la Fédération); Pres. Pastor W. SIGRIST (Berne); Vice-Pres. Pastor CH. BAUER (Le Locle); Members of the Council: Pastor M. FLURY (Seewis), P. SCHÄRER (Thun), K. BÜCHI (Luzern), Pastor J.-P. JORNOD (Geneva), Dr. M. UHLMANN (Zürich); Secs. Pastor A. MOBBS (Céligny GE), W. PROBST (Berne).

The eighteen reformed churches of Aargau, Appenzell Ausserrhoden, Basel-Stadt, Basel-Land, Berne, Fribourg, Geneva, Glarus, Graubünden, Neuchâtel, St. Gallen, Schaffhausen, Solothurn, Thurgau, Valais, Vaud, Zürich, the Diasporaverband Zentralschweiz-Tessin, Eglise évangélique libre de Genève and Evangelisch-methodistische Kirche, form part of this federation, as well as the Swiss churches abroad.

THE PRESS

Freedom of the Press in Switzerland is guaranteed by Article 55 of the amended 1874 Constitution, and the only formal restrictions on the press are the legal restraints concerned with abuses of this freedom. The most contentious issue relating to press freedom in recent years has been the right of journalists to refuse to reveal their sources of information, and the issue has only recently been resolved by the enactment, in October 1968, of a federal law designed to protect this right, except in cases where the security of the state is involved.

The Swiss combination of a high literacy rate and a strong interest in local news, the political autonomy of communes and cantons, direct democracy, the federal constitutional structure and the coexistence of diverse languages and religions have tended to produce a decentralized press, fragmented into numerous local papers, often with very low circulations. As well as the 170 feuilles d'avis and feuilles d'annonces, there are 497 newspapers (1974). Of these, 356 are in German, 113 in French, 24 in Italian, 3 in Romansch and 1 in Spanish. 86 per cent of these papers print fewer than 15,000 copies, only 3 per cent more than 50,000.

Of the 497 Swiss newspapers, 144 are dailies, appearing six or seven times a week, with a total circulation of 2,633,000. For every 1,000 adults in Switzerland, 370 daily papers are sold. The presence of immigrant workers and the Swiss interest in foreign news has led to the importation of 100,000 copies of French, German, Italian and Spanish newspapers every day.

Feuille d'Avis de Lausanne, dating from 1762, is the oldest Swiss paper. Blick (267,500) and Tages Anzeiger Zürich (233,600) have easily the largest circulations, followed by Neue Zürcher Zeitung (94,800), 24 Heures, Feuille d'Avis de Lausanne (93,400) and National-Zeitung (88,240) (March 1974). The two most respected dailies are Neue Zürcher Zeitung, founded in 1780, and the French-language Journal de Genève, established nearly fifty years later. Both papers, tabloid in format with few illustrations, carry an exceptionally high proportion of foreign news, and have an influential readership abroad.

channel (VHF) a complete TV programme for each region (German, French and Italian) and regular broadcasts in Romansch. On the 2nd and 3rd transmission channels the programmes of the other two areas are at present put out over existing transmitters. Limited direct advertising (20 minutes on weekdays) is allowed.

There were 541 transmitters and boosters in operation by the end of July 1974.

The licence fee for private reception is 120 frs. per year. On August 31st, 1974, there were 1,699,888 TV licence-holders in Switzerland.

FINANCE

(cap.=capital; p.u.=paid up; dep.=deposits; res.=reserves; m.=million; all values are in Swiss francs)

Switzerland's importance as a financial centre stems from many historical and geographical factors. It is a small nation with scant natural resources situated in the centre of Europe. It has always been necessary for the Swiss to depend on their shrewdness and their relations with foreigners for their livelihood. This is facilitated by centuries of political neutrality, the tri-lingual composition of the population, and a willingness to learn other languages.

Switzerland's neutrality during the First World War and its aftermath helped to develop the reputation of the Swiss banks as a secure repository for foreign capital. The principle of Bank Secrecy was made a legal obligation in 1934, protecting the accounts of German Jews from appropriation, and Numbered Accounts also served to keep depositors' affairs secure from investigation. Swiss law protects bankers from having to reveal any details of accounts in tax cases in Swiss courts. When foreign authorities wish to investigate Swiss accounts, criminal charges must have been made in a foreign court and accepted as valid by Switzerland. The abuse of this secrecy by organized crime led to a treaty between Switzerland and the U.S.A., signed in May 1973, under which Swiss banks will allow their clients' accounts to be inspected where there is "a reasonable suspicion" of certain crimes. Drug trafficking, air piracy, illicit gambling, prostitution and counterfeiting related to international criminal organizations are covered by the treaty; such offences as tax evasion, anti-trust law infringements and political and military charges are still immune from investigation. The anti-inflation measures of the Swiss Government have also introduced some limitations on the banks' freedom of action: The extension of domestic credit is restricted, and the ban on foreign purchases of Swiss land and the discouragement of foreign capital inflow have harmed the banks' profitability, in the interest of the whole Swiss economy, overheated by the inflow of "hot money".

At the end of 1971 there were 4,446 bank branches in Switzerland, owned by 474 banks, 38 private banks, 13 Swiss offices of foreign banks, two loan-office associations and 60 finance companies. Swiss banking is dominated by the Big Five banks (Union Bank of Switzerland, Swiss Bank Corporation, Swiss Credit Bank, Swiss Volksbank and Bank Leu), with 557 branches and nearly half the total 229,944.7m. francs bank balances. Much of their share comes from foreign business. Foreign banks have become increasingly important; in 1974, 84 foreign-controlled banks and 15 branches of foreign banks held nearly 12 per cent of all Swiss banking assets.

The Swiss National Bank was created in 1906 and obtained a monopoly of the issue of bank-notes in 1910. It has remained a private concern with 50 per cent of its shares held by other banks and 50 per cent by private shareholders. Since 1964 all banks are examined by the Swiss National Bank and must fulfil rigid liquidity and capital requirements. A new law regulating mutual funds was passed in 1967 by which control was introduced to correct unsound developments which had taken place in this sector. Foreign mutual funds which sell their shares in Switzerland now require a Swiss representative bank and must conform to the demands of the new law.

Linked with banking is the insurance sector, which is an integral and vital element in the Swiss financial structure. It collects some 10,000 million Sw. francs annually in premiums and contributions, to which a considerable income from its substantial international activities must be added. Financial and industrial holding companies have quadrupled in the last 12 years and their capital now amounts to some 8,000 million Sw. francs. The Zürich Stock Exchange ranks as one of the most important in Europe in terms of value and total transactions. Foreign securities, particularly American, represent more than 25 per cent of the approximately 1,000 issues quoted, a proportion which is probably not exceeded by any other market.

BANKING

CENTRAL BANK

Banque nationale suisse: f. 1906; head offices: Zürich and Berne; brs. at Aarau, Basle, Geneva, Lausanne, Lucerne, Lugano, Neuchâtel, St. Gall; numerous agencies in Swiss towns. The object of the bank is to "regulate the circulation of currency and to facilitate the operations of payment". It further guarantees the service of the Federal Treasury. The general management is composed of three depts., of which discount, foreign currency, advances on securities and control are at Zürich and issue of notes, management of metal reserves, relations with Federal Administration and treasury at Berne. Cap. subs. 50,000,000 frs.; p.u. 25,000,000 frs. Pres. of Council Dr. B. GALLI; Vice-Pres. Prof. Dr. h.c. P. JÄGGI; General Management: Dr. F. LEUTWILER (Pres., Zürich), A. HAY (Vice-Pres., Berne), Dr. L. SCHÜRMANN (Zürich).

ROADS

There are more than 18,150 km. of main (cantonal) roads. In 1958 Federal authority was extended to provide for a national network of approximately 1,600 km. of toll-free motorways. At the beginning of 1973 about one-third of this programme was completed, comprising 640 km. of motorways and a 6½ km. long road tunnel through the San Bernardino. Work on the remaining two-thirds of the network is in full progress and estimated to be completed by 1980 at a cost of 23,000 million frs. The road tunnel through the Saint Gotthard, 15 km. long and a European road link of paramount importance, is scheduled to be ready by 1978.

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The European and Asian parts of the Republic of Turkey (Thrace and Anatolia, respectively) are separated by the Straits of the Bosphorus which link the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. Most of Turkey lies in Asia, the vast Anatolian peninsula being bordered to the east by the U.S.S.R. and Iran and to the south by Iraq and Syria. The small European part of the country abuts upon Greece and Bulgaria. In the Asian interior the climate is one of great extremes. On the Mediterranean coast it is more equable with mild winters and warm summers. The principal language is Turkish, Kurdish and Arabic being spoken along the frontiers of Iraq and Syria. In 1928 the Arabic characters of the written language were superseded by Western-style script. Islam is the religion of 98.2 per cent of the population. The national flag (proportions 3 by 2) consists of a white crescent and five-pointed star on a red background. The capital is Ankara.

Recent History

The Republic of Turkey was declared in 1923 and, under the leadership of Kemal Atatürk, made great progress away from the traditions of the Ottoman Empire and towards European modernity. Atatürk created a secular state which looked to Europe for its institutions and technology, based on the principles of republicanism, nationalism, populism and state control. Neutral during the Second World War, Turkey was driven by Soviet threats into NATO and CENTO. Turkey belongs to the Council of Europe, and has established links with the EEC.

In 1960 a military coup overthrew the government of Adnan Menderes, and between 1961 and 1965 İsmet İnönü led a succession of coalition governments. The elections of 1965 brought the Justice Party to power, with Süleyman Demirel, İnönü's successor, as Prime Minister. This conservative government lasted until March 1971, when a wave of strikes and student and labour unrest caused the armed forces to demand their resignation. "Guided democracy", under military supervision, continued until October 1973, with a succession of right-wing cabinets, martial law and the rigorous suppression of all left-wing activities. The return to civilian rule began when the Grand National Assembly chose Fahri Korutürk as President, in preference to a candidate backed by the armed forces. During 1973 the senior military commanders were replaced by non-political officers, and military participation in government was ended by the elections of October 1973. No party had a majority sufficient to form a government, and negotiations on the formation of a coalition continued until January 1974.

Bülent Ecevit, the Republican People's Party leader, became Prime Minister, having negotiated a coalition with the National Salvation Party. The unlikely partnership between the social-democratic RPP and the traditionalist NSP was soon strained by the RPP's plan to release political prisoners held under martial law, but the government never had an opportunity to carry out either the social reforms promised by the RPP or the NSP's return to Islamic values. The discovery of oil in the Aegean led to a dispute between Turkey and Greece over the extent of territorial rights, which was overshadowed in July 1974 by the Greek-backed coup in Cyprus (q.v.). The success of the Turkish army in its intervention to protect the Turkish community and the establishment of an effectively autonomous Turkish administration in the north of the island made Ecevit a national hero and encouraged him to dissolve the coalition and free himself from the constraints of co-operation with the NSP.

Ecevit's resignation in September 1974 was followed by another no-government crisis. Several political leaders failed to form a coalition which could command a parliamentary majority. Eventually, on November 17th, Professor Sadi İrmak formed a non-partisan cabinet, which could obtain support only from the Republican Reliance Party and was decisively defeated in its first vote of confidence on November 29th. İrmak remains in office until the deadlock can be resolved by a general election.

Government

Turkey is a democratic republic, with elections for the National Assembly by universal suffrage held normally every four years; one-third of the Senate is re-elected every two years. The President, as Head of State, is elected by the Grand National Assembly for seven years. The President appoints the Prime Minister, giving full consideration to the Party with the majority. The Prime Minister appoints the Council of Ministers. The President has the power of veto but can be over-ruled by a majority decision of the Assembly.

Defence

Turkey joined the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in 1952. Military service in the army lasts for twenty months. The total strength of the armed forces in 1974 was 453,000: army of 365,000, navy of 40,000 and air force of 48,000; there is a gendarmerie numbering 75,000. Total mobilization could produce an estimated two million. Defence estimates for 1974-75 amounted to TL1,342.7 million (U.S. $995m.), and for 1975-76 to U.S. $1,850m.

Economic Affairs

Agriculture, the most important sector of the Turkish economy, employed 65 per cent of the working population in 1970 and accounted for 63 per cent of total export earnings in 1973. Agriculture's share of the G.N.P. declined steadily since the early 1960s, to 23 per cent in 1973. Government investment policy concentrates on industry rather than agriculture, and while industrial crops such as cotton and tobacco have gained in importance, wheat and rice have had to be imported as domestic production falls behind demand. With the exception of cotton, agriculture remains largely underdeveloped, as do livestock production and forestry. The opium poppy, a major cash crop in central Turkey, was banned in 1971, under pressure from the U.S.A., but was again made legal in 1974. A law to redistribute land among the peasants was passed in July 1973, but the opposition of the large landowners may make it difficult to effect.

Turkey's production of chromium, copper and borax is internationally significant, and coal and bauxite are also mined. Mining is dominated by state-owned companies, and the Government plans considerable investments in exploration and exploitation. Oil production now suffices for about half of Turkey's domestic requirements. Cheap locally available cotton and low wages have made textiles Turkey's biggest industrial growth sector, despite low labour productivity. Chemical production increased by 25 per cent in 1972, and investment in the industry is rising rapidly. The 1973-77 five-year plan's main objective is industrialization, with investment concentrated on the manufacturing sector. A shortage of power is proving a major obstacle to industry, and the Keban Dam hydro-electricity scheme has fallen behind schedule.

Foreign trade is buoyant; in the three years following the 40 per cent devaluation of August 1970 both imports and exports doubled. The trade deficit also doubled, but remittances from workers abroad ($740 million in 1972, $1,183 million in 1973) now produce an invisible surplus, and currency reserves are rising. Massive emigration helps to disguise the problem of unemployment in a country where the population is rising annually by about 2.6 per cent. Remittances from Turks abroad and drastic rises in export prices for agricultural products, particularly cotton, have contributed to inflation. Wholesale prices rose by some 25 per cent in 1973, and by a further 13.8 per cent in the first eight months of 1974.

Transport and Communications

The length of railway track is 9,831 km. A rail link with Iran, constructed with CENTO funds, was opened in September 1971. Roads are gradually being improved and new roads are under construction. The total length of the highway network is estimated at 125,400 km. (1973), of which 32,160 km. are main roads. The Turkish Maritime Lines, a state corporation, operates passenger and cargo lines with a fleet of 19 ships and 68 ferries. Private shipping companies operate tankers and cargo vessels totalling 488,062 tons. Turkish Airlines have an internal air service and flights to the Middle East and all the major cities in Europe.

Social Welfare

Social insurance for wage-earners is provided by the Workers' Social Insurance Institution of the Ministry of Labour. In 1972, 1,443,600 workers and employees were covered by social insurance, including free medical care. It is planned to extend socialized health services to the whole population.

Education

Education has made big advances in Turkey since before the war. Although literacy is now estimated at 65 per cent in towns, it is still much lower in the villages. Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 12.

All state education up to University or Higher Institute level is co-educational and free. The number of primary schools has risen to 33,993, compared with 12,511 in 1950, and in 1972-73, over 5 million children were attending primary schools. The six years of secondary education are divided into two stages. The Middle School period lasts for three years after which students may proceed to the Lycées for a further three years. A state examination must be passed by those students wishing to proceed to University or to an Institute of Higher Education. There are nine universities. Budget expenditure for education was set at TL8,921 million for 1973-74.

Tourism

Tourism is being stimulated by the Government, and in 1963 much of the eastern part of the country was opened to tourists for the first time since the war. The industry is now experiencing a remarkable growth. Over 950,000 tourists visited Turkey in 1972.

Visas are not required, for stays up to three months, by nationals of the following countries: Afghanistan, Australia, Austria, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Canada, Cyprus, Denmark, Finland, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Republic of Korea, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Malta, Monaco, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Portugal, Romania (up to two months only), Singapore, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, United Kingdom, U.S.A., Yugoslavia (up to two months only).

Sport

The most popular sport is football, and many teams have large followings. There is skiing in winter, and sailing, tennis and basketball are popular in summer. Wrestling is a traditional Turkish sport.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (Spring Day), May 19th (Youth and Sports Day), May 27th (Freedom and Constitution Day), August 30th (Victory Day), October 7th-9th (Şeker Bayram—End of Ramadan), October 29th (Republic Day), December 13th-15th (Kurban Bayram—Feast of the Sacrifice).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), April 23rd (National Sovereignty and Children's Day).

Weights and Measures

The metric system is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 kuruş = 1 Turkish lira (TL) or pound.

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 31.82 liras;

U.S. $1 = 13.60 liras.

PART ONE

Articles 1-9

The Turkish Republic is a nationalistic, democratic, secular and social State governed by the rule of law, based on human rights.

The Turkish State is an indivisible whole comprising the territory and people. Its official language is Turkish. Its capital is the city of Ankara.

Sovereignty is vested in the nation without reservation and condition. Legislative power is vested in the Turkish Grand National Assembly.

This power shall not be delegated.

The executive function shall be carried out by the President of the Republic and the Council of Ministers within the framework of law.

Judicial power shall be exercised by independent courts on behalf of the Turkish Nation.

Laws shall not be in conflict with the Constitution.

The provision of the Constitution establishing the form of the State as a republic shall not be amended.

PART TWO

Articles 10-62

Every individual is entitled, in virtue of his existence as a human being, to fundamental rights and freedoms, which cannot be usurped, transferred or relinquished.

All individuals are equal before the law irrespective of language, race, sex, political opinion, philosophical views, or religion or religious sect.

Status of aliens, personal immunities, freedom of communication, travel, residence, thought, belief, press and publications.

Right to controvert and rebut, to congregate, demonstrate and form associations.

Protection of individual rights.

PART THREE

Articles 63-66. Grand National Assembly

The Grand National Assembly of Turkey is composed of the National Assembly and the Senate of the Republic.

The two bodies meet in joint session in such instances as are provided in the Constitution.

The Grand National Assembly is empowered to enact, amend and repeal laws, to debate and adopt the bills on the State budget and final accounts, to pass resolutions in regard to minting currency, proclaiming pardons and amnesties, and to the carrying out of definitive death sentences passed by courts.

Articles 67-69. National Assembly

The National Assembly is composed of 450 deputies elected by direct general ballot. Election qualifications: elections shall be held every four years. The Assembly may hold new elections before the end of the four-year period.

Articles 70-73. The Senate

The Senate of the Republic is composed of 150 members elected by general ballot and 15 members appointed by the President of the Republic. Election qualifications: term of office is six years, one-third of members shall be re-elected every two years.

Articles 74-94. Elections, Members, Debates, Laws, ExpenditureArticles 95-101. The President of the Republic

The President of the Turkish Republic shall be elected for a term of seven years from among those members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly who have completed their fortieth year and received higher education; election shall be by secret ballot, and by a two-thirds majority of the plenary session. In case this majority is not obtained in the first two ballots, an absolute majority shall suffice.

The President is not eligible for re-election.

The President elect shall dissociate himself from his party, and his status as a regular member of the Grand National Assembly shall be terminated.

The President of the Republic is the head of the State. In this capacity he shall represent the Turkish Republic and the integrity of the Turkish Nation.

The President of the Republic shall preside over the Council of Ministers whenever he deems it necessary, shall dispatch the representatives of the Turkish State to foreign states, shall receive the representatives of foreign states, shall ratify and promulgate international conventions and treaties and may commute or pardon on grounds of chronic illness, infirmity or old age the sentences of convicted individuals.

The President of the Republic shall not be accountable for his actions connected with his duties.

All decrees emanating from the President of the Republic shall be signed by the Prime Minister, and the relevant Ministers. The Prime Minister and the Ministers concerned shall be responsible for the enforcement of these decrees.

The President of the Republic may be impeached for high treason upon the proposal of one-third of the plenary session of the Turkish Grand National Assembly, and conviction of high treason shall require the vote of at least a two-thirds majority of the joint plenary session of both legislative bodies.

Articles 102-109. The Council of Ministers

The Council of Ministers shall consist of the Prime Minister and the Ministers.

The Prime Minister shall be designated by the President of the Republic from among the members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly.

The Ministers shall be nominated by the Prime Minister, and appointed by the President of the Republic from among the members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly, or from among those qualified for election as deputies.

As head of the Council of Ministers, the Prime Minister promotes co-operation among the Ministries, and supervises the implementation of the Government's general policy. The members of the Council of Ministers are jointly and equally responsible for the manner in which this policy is implemented.

Each Minister shall be further responsible for the operations in his field of authority and for the acts and activities of his subordinates. The Ministers are subject to the same immunities and liabilities as the members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly.

Articles 110-111. National Defence

The office of the Commander-in-Chief is integrated in spirit in the Turkish Grand National Assembly and is represented by the President of the Republic.

The Council of Ministers shall be responsible to the Turkish Grand National Assembly for ensuring national security and preparing the armed forces for war.

The Chief of the General Staff is the Commander of the armed forces.

The Chief of the General Staff shall be appointed by the President of the Republic upon his nomination by the Council of Ministers, and his duties and powers shall be regulated by law. The Chief of the General Staff is responsible to the Prime Minister in the exercise of his duties and powers.

The National Security Council shall consist of the Ministers as provided by law, the Chief of the General Staff, and representatives of the armed forces.

The President of the Republic shall preside over the National Security Council, and in his absence this function shall be discharged by the Prime Minister.

Articles 126-131. Economic and Fiscal Provisions

The budget, accounts, development projects, natural resources.

Articles 132-136. The Judiciary

Judges shall be independent in the discharge of their duties. They shall pass judgment in accordance with the Constitution, law, justice and their personal convictions.

No organ, office, agency or individual may give orders or instructions to courts or judges in connection with the discharge of their judicial duty, send them circulars or make recommendations or suggestions.

No questions may be raised, debates held, or statements issued in legislative bodies in connection with the discharge of judicial power concerning a case on trial. Legislative and executive organs, and the administration are under obligation to comply with ruling of the courts. Such organs and the administration shall in no manner whatsoever alter court rulings or delay their execution.

Article 137. The Public Prosecutor

Article 138. Military Trial

Article 139. Court of Cassation

The Court of Cassation is the court of the last instance for reviewing the decisions and verdicts rendered by courts of law. It has original and final jurisdiction in specific cases defined by law.

Article 140. Council of State

The Council of State is an administrative court of the first instance in matters not referred by law to other administrative courts, and an administrative court of the last instance in general.

The Council of State shall hear and settle administrative disputes and suits, shall express opinions on draft laws submitted by the Council of Ministers, shall examine draft regulations, specifications and contracts of concessions, and shall discharge such other duties as prescribed by law.

Article 141. Military Court of Cassation

The Military Court of Cassation is a court of the last instance to review decisions and verdicts rendered by military courts. Furthermore, it shall try specific cases as a court of the first and last instance involving military matters as prescribed by law.

Article 142. Court of Jurisdictional Disputes

Articles 143-144. Supreme Council of Judges

Articles 145-152. The Constitutional Court

AMENDMENTS

Article 73 concerning membership of the Senate of the Republic, and Article 131 concerning the preservation of forests, were amended on April 17th, 1970.

Article 56 concerning financial aid to political parties, and Article 82 concerning the monthly allowances of members of the National Assembly were amended on June 30th, 1971.

On September 22nd, 1971, thirty-five articles were amended and nine temporary articles added. These amendments were aimed at preventing the abuse of liberties by making use of gaps existing in the Constitution, and at providing greater clarity in certain articles.

Five articles (30, 57, 136, 138 and 148) were changed and two temporary articles were added on March 15th, 1973. The addition to Article 36 set up State Security Courts.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Until the foundation of the new Turkish Republic, a large part of the Turkish civil law—the laws affecting the family, inheritance, property, obligations, etc.—was based on the Koran, and this holy law was administered by special religious (Sharia) courts. The legal reform of 1926 was not only a process of secularization, but also a radical change of the legal system. The Swiss Civil Code and the Code of Obligation, the Italian Penal Code, and the Neuchâtel (Cantonal) Code of Civil Procedure were adopted and modified to fit Turkish customs and traditions.

Constitutional Court: Consists of fifteen regular and five alternate members. Reviews the constitutionality of laws passed by the Turkish Grand National Assembly. Sits as a High Council empowered to try senior members of state. The rulings of the Constitutional Court are final. Decisions of the Court are published immediately in the Official Gazette, and shall be binding on the legislative, executive, and judicial organs of the State.

Court of Cassation: The court of the last instance for reviewing the decisions and verdicts rendered by courts of law. It has original and final jurisdiction in specific cases defined by law. Members are elected by the Supreme Council of Judges.

Council of State: An administrative court of the first instance in matters not referred by law to other administrative courts, and an administrative court of the last instance in general. Hears and settles administrative disputes and expresses opinions on draft laws submitted by the Council of Ministers.

High Military Administrative Court: A military court for the judicial control of administrative acts concerning military personnel.

Military Court of Cassation: A court of the last instance to review decisions and verdicts rendered by military courts.

Court of Jurisdictional Disputes: Settles disputes among civil, administrative and military courts arising from disagreements on jurisdictional matters and verdicts.

Supreme Council of Judges: Consists of eighteen regular and five alternate members. Decides all personnel matters relating to judges.

Public Prosecutor: The law shall make provision for the tenure of public prosecutors and attorneys of the Council of State and their functions.

The Chief Prosecutor of the Republic, the Chief Attorney of the Council of State and the Chief Prosecutor of the Military Court of Cassation are subject to the provisions applicable to judges of higher courts.

Military Trial: Military trials are conducted by military and disciplinary courts. These courts are entitled to try the military offences of military personnel and those offences committed against military personnel or in military areas, or offences connected with military service and duties. Military courts may try non-military persons only for military offences prescribed by special laws.

State Security Courts: Set up by supplement to Article 136 of Constitution in March 1973 to prosecute offences against integrity of the State. Consist of presiding judge, four regular and two substitute judges, a public prosecutor and assistant public prosecutors.

RELIGION

MUSLIMS

Diyanet İleri Reisi (Head of the Muslim Faith in Turkey): LÜTFİ DOĞAN (ad interim).

Over 98 per cent of the Turkish people are Muslims, mainly Sunnis. Under the Republic, from 1923 onwards, action was taken to reduce the influence of religion on state affairs: e.g. its association with the schools was curtailed, mosques and churches were sometimes closed and facilities denied to their adherents, both Muslim and Christian. The Muslim faith was also disestablished. After 1950 there was a change, and religious life was to a certain extent revived. The revolution of 1960 brought about a return to the more secular republic of Atatürk but the formation of the Ecevit coalition Government in 1974 once again established links between church and state. The National Salvation Party, the junior members of the coalition, are committed to a return to the traditions and values of Islam, and government aid was promised for the building of mosques.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

ARMENIAN RITE

Patriarchate of Cilicia: Patriarchat Arménien Catholique, Beirut, Lebanon; Patriarch IGNACE PIERRE XVI BATANIAN.

Archbishopric of Istanbul: Sakizagaci Cad. N. 31, P.K. 183, Beyoğlu, Istanbul; 4 secular priests, 6 religious

Mission of Trabzon: Katolik Kilisesi, P.K. 5, Samsun; 2 priests, 177 Catholics (1972); Superior Rev. P. GERMANO DA VERICA.

OTHER RELIGIONS

Mainly Greek Orthodox and Jews.

THE PRESS

Under the Constitution of 1961, "the press is free within the limits of the law". Provision is made for recourse to a constitutional court in issues involving laws affecting the Press.

Following the Revolution of 1960 and the new Constitution, which also introduced a measure of protection for editors, came the Law for Preventive Measures of March 1962. This law provided penalties of imprisonment with forced labour for persons criticizing the 1960 Revolution or for defending the pre-1960 or pre-Atatürk régimes, or suggesting that Turkey is unable to thrive as a democracy.

Political offences affecting the Press and the protection of the State and civil order are treated in Articles 141 and 142 of the Penal Code, the latter providing penalties of up to 15 years imprisonment for Communist propaganda. Articles 158 and 159 penalize defamation of the President, the Republic, the nation and institutions such as the army, parliament and the courts.

A further measure of press control is provided by the Board of Official Announcements which supervises the distribution of government announcements and advertising, which serve as an essential subsidy to the Press. The period of military rule from 1971 to 1973 was marked by the closure of many left-wing newspapers and magazines, as part of the repressive measures taken under martial law. The popular newspaper Akşam was closed by the military authorities for deriding the decisions of military courts, and military censorship was imposed on Turkish news agencies. The withdrawal of the armed forces from political affairs has brought about a larger measure of freedom.

It is almost impossible to produce a correct list of the numerous provincial newspapers, which tend to be small in circulation and rather short-lived. In all, there are some 372 daily papers, 260 weeklies and magazines, over 200 fortnightly and monthly and about 25 quarterly, six-monthly and annually published magazines. The estimated total circulation of all the daily papers is 1,353,000.

Formerly most newspapers were family businesses, but recently companies have emerged and newspaper groups are beginning to develop. Hürriyet, Milliyet and Hayat each head a group of papers. The Hürriyet Group includes Hürriyet, Günaydın and several weekly and monthly papers and its own news agency. The Hayat Group, which is the largest group owning periodicals, includes Hayat, Ses (the cinema and arts magazine), and several children's periodicals. Most papers are politically independent. A small number, while not being political organs, are indirectly associated with political parties. Noteworthy among these are Barış, which supports the Republican People's Party, and Son Havadis, which supports the Justice Party.

Almost all Istanbul papers are also printed in Ankara and İzmir on the same day, and some in Adana. Among the most serious and influential papers are the dailies Milliyet and Cumhuriyet. Akbaba is noted for its political satire. The most popular dailies are the Istanbul papers Hürriyet, Milliyet, Tercüman, Son Havadis, Günaydın and Cumhuriyet; Yeni Asır, published in İzmir, is the best selling quality daily of the Aegean region. A major popular weekly is the illustrated magazine Hayat.

FINANCE

(cap. = capital; p.u. = paid up; dep. = deposits; m. = million; brs. = branches)

(Amounts in Turkish liras, except where otherwise stated. Figures given for capital and deposits are for the end of the calendar year stated, except where otherwise stated.)

The Central Bank of the Republic of Turkey was originally founded in 1931, and constituted in its present form after the revolution of 1960. The Central Bank is the bank of issue and is also responsible for public deposits, and medium and long-term borrowings of the banks. In addition, all international payments go through the Bank, and all foreign exchange is held by the Bank.

There are some 50 other banks functioning in Turkey. Thirteen were created by special laws to fulfil specialized services for particular industries. The Sümerbank directs the operation of a number of state-owned factories; Etibank operates primarily in the extractive industries and electric power industries; the Agricultural Bank makes loans for agriculture; the Maritime Bank operates government-owned port facilities, the merchant marine and its own fleet of ships; the Real Estate Credit Bank participates in industrial undertakings and the construction of all types of building. Other specialized banks deal with tourism, municipalities and mortgages, etc.

The largest of the private sector Turkish banks is the Türkiye İş Bankası which operates over 500 branches. The private banks borrow at medium- and long-term mainly from the State Investment Bank.

There are three foreign banks operating branches in Turkey. Apart from these the Ottoman Bank, which was founded in 1863 and is the oldest bank in Turkey, has strong British and French interests, while the Turkish Foreign Trade Bank is partly owned by the Bank of America and the Banca d'America e d'Italia.

There are several other credit institutions in Turkey, including the Industrial Development Bank of Turkey, which encourages private investment in industry by acting as underwriter in the issue of share capital. The Türkiye Sınai Kalkınma Bankası is a privately owned development finance company founded in 1950 with the assistance of the World Bank to stimulate industrial growth in the private sector.

There are numerous co-operative organizations, and in the rural areas there are Agricultural Sale Co-operatives and Agricultural Co-operatives. There are also a number of savings institutions.

TRANSPORT

RAILWAYS

Türkiye Cumhuriyeti Devlet Demiryolları İşletmesi—TCDD
(Turkish Republic State Railways): Ankara; f. 1924; operates all railways and connecting ports; the Railway Administration acquired the status of a public corporation in July 1953; Gen. Dir. ZÜHTÜ ORAL; Gen. Sec. FAHİR BİLCE; publ. Demiryol (monthly).

The total length of the railways operated within the national frontiers is 9,831 km. (1972), of which 272 km. are electrified. Five-Year Plans for modernizing the railway system were introduced in 1963, with dieselization and electrification projects having since been carried out. A third Five-Year Plan (1973-77) has been prepared and submitted to the Ministry of Communications; it aims at the further rationalization and modernization of the railways.

A rail link built under a CENTO agreement between Turkey and Iran was put into service in September 1971. Soon afterwards, a direct line to Bulgaria (Pehlivanlık to Edirne) was completed and opened.

ROADS

General Directorate of Highways: Ankara; Dir.-Gen. CELALEDDİN DURSUN.

At the beginning of 1973 the total length of expressways was 24 km., the total of all-weather roads was 125,404 km., comprising 32,168 km. of national, 17,702 km. of provincial and 75,534 km. of village roads. A 93 km. highway between Istanbul and İzmit is being built as a 4-lane expressway, and is due to be completed soon. Construction of a TL 1,500m. six-lane bridge across the Bosphorus was started early in 1970, and it was opened to traffic on October 30th, 1973. It is the fourth longest bridge in the world and the biggest in Europe, with a centre span of 1,074 metres, and a length of 1,560 metres. The existing ferry services constituted a major traffic "bottle-neck" in the Turkish transport system. Construction of a third bridge across the Golden Horn was started at the end of 1971 and will be completed soon.

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Soviet Union extends for over 6,000 miles from the Baltic to the Pacific Ocean, and for 3,000 miles from north to south. It is the largest country in the world. Its western frontier, running from the Arctic Ocean in the north to the Black Sea in the south, is bordered by Norway, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania. The southern frontier, running from west to east, is bordered by Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, China, Mongolia and Korea. The climate of this area is continental and has extreme variations. In winter, temperatures can fall to -94 F. (-70 C.) in north-east Siberia, and in summer it can reach 122 F. (50 C.) in Central Asia, part of which is desert. Some 120 languages are spoken in the U.S.S.R.; Russian is the mother tongue of 58 per cent of the people. There is no state-recognized religion, but the Constitution guarantees freedom of worship. The Russian Orthodox faith is the traditional belief of Russians and there are other Christian and also Jewish and Muslim communities. The national flag (proportions 2 by 1) is red with a gold hammer and sickle surmounted by a five-pointed gold-edged red star in the upper left part. The capital is Moscow.

Recent History

The Second World War inflicted immense losses upon the Soviet Union in damage to industry, agriculture and population. About 20 million Soviet citizens were killed. At the end of the war the Soviet Union made certain territorial gains, most notably the annexation of part of East Prussia as war compensation.

During the post-war years 1948-49 socialist governments were formed in a number of European and Asian countries as a result of the defeat of Germany and Japan, in which the Soviet Union played a decisive role. These countries and the Soviet Union comprise the world socialist system.

Much of the devastation and destruction of the War had disappeared by the time of Stalin's death in 1953, and due to the Five-Year Plans the economy, particularly in the field of heavy industry, had made considerable progress. In September 1953, Nikita Khrushchev was nominated First Secretary of the Communist Party by the Central Committee, and in February 1958 he became Chairman of the Council of Ministers. Under his leadership, certain reforms were introduced into the political life of the Soviet Union, and the principle of peaceful coexistence was developed. During this period most efforts were concentrated on expanding the economy to create a sound material base for communism. In 1964 Khrushchev was replaced as Chairman of the Council of Ministers by A. N. Kosygin and as First Secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee by L. I. Brezhnev. The main goals have since been the improvement of the living standard of the Soviet people and the pursuit of international détente. In 1972 Brezhnev called for priority to be given to increasing the output of consumer goods, improving housing and bringing agriculture up to the technical level of industry by a programme of investments.

The Soviet Union plays a leading part in the economic and military groupings of the East European socialist countries, the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (COMECON) and the Warsaw Treaty organization. In the interests of its own security and that of the Communist Bloc as a whole, it has intervened in political crises in several of the Eastern European countries.

Relations with Western countries are generally improving and conditions for security in Europe are being created. In May 1972 agreement was reached in Moscow between the Soviet Union and the U.S.A. on a number of bilateral issues, including limitations on anti-ballistic missiles and on certain measures with respect to strategic offensive arms. In June 1972 the treaty between the Soviet Union and the Federal Republic of Germany came into force, renouncing the use of force in international affairs and accepting existing European frontiers as inviolable. During 1973 Brezhnev visited France, the Federal Republic of Germany, India and the U.S.A. in pursuance of the policy of détente. The Middle East conflict of October 1973 threatened good relations between the Soviet Union and the U.S.A., but efforts were made to maintain a common approach to the problem.

International criticism of Soviet restrictions on emigration, particularly for Jews, culminated in January 1975 in the Soviet Union's repudiating a trade agreement with the U.S.A. which in 1974 enacted legislation making a relaxing of these restrictions a condition for receiving economic concessions.

Reports in early 1975 of Brezhnev's ill-health led to speculation about a possible imminent change in leadership.

Government

The Soviet Union consists of 15 Union Republics which include within their boundaries 20 Autonomous Republics, 8 Autonomous Regions, 10 National Districts, 6 Areas and 105 Regions. The Union's highest organ of state power is the Supreme Soviet, composed of the Council of the Union and the Council of Nationalities. The two Chambers have equal rights and may both initiate legislation. The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet is elected by a session of both Chambers and carries out state duties between sessions of the Supreme Soviet. All citizens over 18 have the vote. The highest executive organ is the Council of Ministers appointed by the Supreme Soviet. Each Republic and Autonomous Republic has its own Supreme Soviet and Council of Ministers. The Communist Party, with 13,810,000 members, plays a leading role in government and is a substantial policy-making body. The supreme organ of the Party is Congress which lays down policy and elects the Central Committee. Between Congresses the Central Committee directs Party work, elects the Party Politbureau and meets periodically to discuss ad hoc policy. The Party works in close conjunction with the Government at all levels. Each Republic has its own Party, Presidium and Central Committee.

Defence

The Soviet Union is a nuclear power armed with long-range rockets and is a member of the Warsaw Pact Alliance. Military service is compulsory and lasts for two years in the army and air force and three years in the navy and in the border force. The total strength of the armed forces was estimated at 3,525,000 in 1974: army 1,800,000, air force 400,000, navy 475,000 (including naval air force), and air defence forces of 500,000. Paramilitary forces number about 310,000, made up of 130,000 security troops and 180,000 border troops. Estimated defence expenditure for 1974 was 23,800 million roubles. Army divisions are stationed in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Mongolia and the German Democratic Republic.

Economic Affairs

The U.S.S.R. has the largest and strongest economy in the world after the U.S.A. and is the world leader in hydro-electric power, railway transport and coal mining.

The economy is centrally planned, based on public ownership and fits into the framework of a development plan. Economic planning has gone through several stages of development. Between the years 1919 and 1928 plans were drawn up annually. In 1929 Stalin introduced the first Five-Year Plan. At present the ninth Five-Year Plan (1971-75) is in force. Heavy industry accounts for more than two-thirds of total industrial production. Industry is the most important factor in the success of the U.S.S.R. economy since the war. It accounts for more than 50 per cent of the national income. In 1971 the U.S.S.R. accounted for nearly 20 per cent of the world's gross industrial output. There are extensive deposits of iron ore, oil, peat, natural gas and coal. Production of non-ferrous metals includes aluminium, nickel, manganese, lead, copper and zinc. More than 600 million tons of coal were mined in 1972. The coal basins of the Donets near the Black Sea, Kuznetsk in Siberia and Karaganda in Kazakhstan are the main sources. Oil is produced in the Caucasian Republic of Azerbaijan, the Western Urals, the Volga region, East and West Siberia, in the south of the Central Asian Republics, Byelorussia and the Ukraine. More than 396 million tons of oil were extracted in 1972. The country is the second greatest producer of electrical power and in 1972 generated 85,800 million kWh of electricity. One third of the total land area is forest, two-thirds of it in Siberia and the Far East. Timber production amounted to 289 million cu. m. in 1972. The textile and consumer goods industry have been greatly increased in recent years. The Soviet Union has large-scale mechanized agriculture with two main types of farm. The collective farms work slightly more than half of the cultivable land and distribute profits to members. The state farms are owned and operated by the state, the employees receiving a wage. At the end of 1972 there were 32,256 collective farms and 15,744 state farms; 1,043.3 million hectares of land are used by agricultural enterprises and farms, 545.9 million hectares of which is arable land. The development of the Central Asian Virgin Lands has significantly increased production. The chief grain crops are wheat, rye, oats and maize; other crops are sugar beet, hemp, cotton and oil seeds. A record grain harvest of 215 million tons was achieved in 1973. Trade inside the U.S.S.R. is conducted by state trading establishments, consumers' co-operatives and collective farm markets. Foreign trade is a state monopoly.

The eighth Five-Year Plan (1966-70) was successfully completed and in many cases, particularly in the oil, non-ferrous metal, automation and mineral industries, targets were exceeded. National income rose by 41 per cent between 1966 and 1970, and industrial production by 50 per cent; real incomes increased by a third. The 1971-75 Five-Year Plan envisaged another 30 per cent increase in real incomes. For the first time in a Five-Year Plan, the growth in the production of consumer goods was to exceed that of capital goods. A 41-45 per cent growth was envisaged for the latter and 44-48 per cent for the former, although for the final year of the plan this policy was reversed and the industrial production growth rate was planned to exceed that of consumer goods production. National income was planned to grow by 37-40 per cent and agricultural output by 20-22 per cent, although at the beginning of 1975 it was expected that the targets of the Plan would not be achieved: between 1970 and 1974 national income grew by 23 per cent.

Transport and Communications

The vastness of the Soviet Union's territory and the rapid growth of its economy make considerable demands on the transport system. Railway tracks cover 136,000 km. and carry most goods and passenger traffic. 35,000 km. of railway track are electrified, more than one-third of the world's electrified railways. New lines are being built in Siberia, Kazakhstan and Central Asia. By the end of 1972 the total length of roads was 1,359,000 km., including 567,300 km. of hard surface roads. A project is under way for the construction of a dense network of modern hard surface roads. There are 150,000 km. of inland waterways which play an important role in transporting bulk cargo and timber. Canals navigable by large vessels link the White Sea with the Baltic through the River Volga and the Rivers Moscow and Don with the Caspian, Azov and Black Seas. Every year river vessels carry about 1.45 million passengers. The Soviet Merchant Marine totalled over 17 million tons in 1974, and takes sixth place in the world's fleets of ocean vessels. There are 27 major ports, the most important being Leningrad, Arkhangelsk, Riga, Murmansk, Odessa, Baku and Vladivostok. Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, maintains both internal and external services, covering over 800,000 km. of air routes with flights to more than 65 countries. In 1972 there were 42,900 km. of pipelines transporting over 384 million tons of oil, and 71,000 km. of pipelines pumping 200,800 million cu.m. of natural gas.

Social Welfare

In 1973 the State allocated 27,400 million roubles for social insurance and maintenance. Apart from a complete range of social security benefits (disability pensions, loss of breadwinner, student grants, maternity benefits), pensions are paid to retired men at 60 and women at 55 and average 60-70 per cent of their salary prior to retirement. Employees in enterprises where the work conditions are arduous may receive pensions five or ten years earlier than is the norm. In 1972 there were 42 million retired persons receiving pensions in the U.S.S.R. A new social security scheme for old and disabled collective farm workers has been introduced. The centralized fund of the scheme is made up of deductions from the farmers' wages made by the collective farm, and of allocations from the State budget. In 1973-74 disability pensions are to be raised on average by 33 per cent. Greater material assistance is to be given to families with children and benefits to working mothers are to be increased.

There is a streamlined system of public health services providing medical aid for the entire population. The public health services are supervised by the Ministry of Public Health and the Ministries of Public Health of the Union and Autonomous Republics, through regional (territorial), district, and city Boards of Health, under the corresponding Soviets of Working People's Deputies. All medical services and treatment are given free of charge, as are drugs and medicines in hospitals. The U.S.S.R. has a total of more than 36,600 clinics of various kinds. Public health institutions (hospitals, special clinics, maternity health centres, etc.) administer free services. By the middle of 1972 there were 112 hospital beds per 10,000 of the population. The number of doctors totalled 699,000 (25 per 10,000 of the population). In addition to these hospitals there is a large network of sanatoria and holiday homes (5,439 establishments with 928,000 beds). In 1971 10.59 million persons underwent medical and convalescent treatment in these homes. Most sanatoria and holiday homes come under the jurisdiction of the trade unions. Accommodation for children, and in tuberculosis sanatoria, is free of charge. Working people are generally charged a nominal fee—usually about 30 per cent of the cost. Expectant mothers receive payment for their pre-natal and post-natal vacations (10 weeks before and after childbirth). Infant health centres and children's polyclinics have been set up as part of the public health system in order to watch over the health and proper physical development of all children. At the age of 16 years the child is transferred to an adult polyclinic. There are more than 460,000 hospital beds for children. Workers temporarily unable to work due to sickness receive a sick leave benefit on the basis of a certificate issued by the adult polyclinic. Disabled workers are either transferred to lighter work or given a disability pension. The 1971-75 Five-Year Plan aims to increase spending on social welfare by 40 per cent, and by 1975 there will be 3 million hospital beds.

Rents are controlled and on average amount to 4.5 per cent of family expenditure.

Education

Before 1917, 70 per cent of the population was illiterate. According to the 1970 census approximately 48.3 per cent of the population had been or was being educated above primary school level, and 10,500,000 specialists were being educated above secondary school level.

All schools are state-run except a few colleges belonging to co-operatives and public organizations. There is compulsory free education for eight years. Children may attend national schools, where tuition is given in their native language, or Russian schools, according to their choice. Tuition is conducted in nearly 100 languages throughout the Soviet Union.

Secondary education is provided in either general secondary schools or polytechnic schools. In 1959 urban and rural vocational training schools were established, which admit children who have completed the eight-year school. Sixty to 70 per cent of the student's time is taken up with practical work although training also includes theoretical grounding. Upon graduation the successful student is given a job in his chosen trade. Young workers can continue their studies by attending night schools of secondary general education. In addition to these types of secondary school there are also specialized schools. These schools provide a general education together with the necessary instruction and practical skills of a profession. The course lasts from two to four years and the students receive a government stipend. Graduates are given jobs in their chosen profession. There are also special schools for foreign languages where children start at the age of seven years.

All students with a secondary education are eligible for entry to higher educational institutions. Higher education is available for all. Each Union Republic has universities and colleges with various forms of training. Tuition is free and students are provided with State stipends and other benefits. Each institution provides specialized education, both practical and theoretical. In the first years students are usually taught general subjects; specialization generally begins with the third year. The curriculum consists of compulsory, general and special subjects and subjects which can be chosen by the students themselves. Undergraduate courses are completed when the student has presented his thesis and taken state examinations. Graduates are provided with jobs and living quarters upon completing their studies. About nine million specialists with higher and secondary education are to be trained in the period 1971-75.

At the beginning of 1975, there were about 50 million school children. The budget allocation for education, science and culture in 1975 was 33,200 million roubles.

Tourism

Although foreign tourism is not a major source of income in the Soviet economy, it does contribute a valuable amount of foreign currency. The state organization, Intourist, founded in 1929, assists foreign tourists in the U.S.S.R. and Soviet tourists going abroad. Tours are also organized by the Central Board of Tourism of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, the International Youth Tourism Bureau "Sputnik", the Union of Soviet Societies for Friendship and Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, and other public bodies. Intourist deals with more than 600 tourist organizations and firms in 100 countries and the U.S.S.R. has tourist agreements at government level with several countries, including France and Italy. Favourite tourist spots are Moscow, Kiev, Leningrad, Odessa, the Black Sea and Baltic resorts, the Urals and Altai mountains, and the ancient cities of Samarkand and Bukhara in central Asia. The Hotel Russia in Moscow is the largest in Europe, with accommodation for 5,500 guests.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter the U.S.S.R.: Bulgaria; the People's Republic of China, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Iran, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea; Mongolia, Poland, Romania, the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam.

Sport

Physical culture and sport, cultivated on a mass scale, are financed under the public health budget. Additional sums are allocated by local governmental organs, industrial enterprises, collective farms and trade unions. There are more than 200,000 organizations with a total membership of about 45 million. Soviet sports federations are members of 60 world and European organizations. In 1963 a Union Republican State Committee for Physical Culture and Sport was set up by the Government. Athletics, football, volleyball, ice hockey, skiing and many other sports are popular.

Space Research

In 1957 the U.S.S.R. launched the world's first space satellite, following it in 1961 with the first manned space flight. Since then the Soviet Union has carried out an extensive space exploration programme the emphasis of which has tended to rest on unmanned flights. The Luna spacecraft series has made studies of the moon and has succeeded in bringing back samples of lunar soil and rock. Luna 21, the latest in the series, was launched on January 9th, 1973. In November 1970 Luna 17 landed a vehicle on the Moon—Lunokhod 1—equipped with television systems, an X-ray telescope and other scientific instruments. Lunokhod 2 landed on the moon on January 16th, 1973. Space probes have been sent to Mars and Venus and numerous earth satellites have been sent up in the Kosmos series. The Interkosmos series, run in conjunction with six other East European countries, was launched in 1969. Manned spaceflights have been carried out in the Vostok, Voskhod and Soyuz series, 26 Soviet cosmonauts having orbited the Earth by 1974. In April 1973, Salyut-11, an orbiting scientific space station, was launched. By November 1973 the number of Soviet spacecraft which had been launched was 605.

The U.S.S.R., together with the U.S.A. and the U.K., signed an international treaty in January 1967 prohibiting the use of outer space for military purposes. The Soviet Union co-operated with France in the launch of technological and telecommunications satellites in April 1972, and has signed agreements with the U.S.A. on the exchange of moon samples and on a project to link up Soyuz and Apollo craft in space in July 1975, for which a successful preliminary practice flight was made by Soyuz in 1974.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st, 2nd (May Day celebrations), May 9th (Victory Day), November 7th, 8th (October Revolution), December 5th (Soviet Constitution Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), February 23rd (Soviet Army Day), March 8th (International Women's Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 kopeks = 1 rouble.

Exchange rates (January 1975):

£1 sterling = 1.66 roubles;

U.S. $1 = 73.00 kopeks.

NATIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PLAN, 1961-80

1. Increase industrial productivity by 300-350 per cent.
2. Total electrification of the country.
3. Expansion of the metals and fuels industries.
4. Comprehensive development of the chemical industry.
5. Development of automation.
6. Development of jet engineering.
7. Rationalization of the distribution of industry.
8. Entire electrification of agriculture.
9. Higher pay for better work and greater material incentives.
10. Higher efficiency on collective farms.

(FUNDAMENTAL LAW)

CHAPTER I THE SOCIAL STRUCTURE

Article 1

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is a socialist state of workers and peasants.

Article 2

The political foundation of the U.S.S.R. is the Soviets of Working People's Deputies, which grew and became strong as a result of the overthrow of the power of the landlords and capitalists and the attainment of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Article 3

All power in the U.S.S.R. is vested in the working people of town and country as represented by the Soviets of Working People's Deputies.

Article 4

The economic foundation of the U.S.S.R. is the socialist system of economy and the socialist ownership of the instruments and means of production, firmly established as a result of abolishing the capitalist system of economy, the private ownership of the instruments and means of production, and the exploitation of man by man.

Article 5

Socialist property in the U.S.S.R. exists either in the form of state property (belonging to the whole people) or in the form of co-operative and collective-farm property (the property of collective farms or co-operative societies).

Article 6

The land, its mineral wealth, waters, forests, the factories and mines, rail, water and air transport facilities, the banks, means of communication, large state-organized agricultural enterprises (state farms, machine and tractor stations, etc.), as well as municipal enterprises and the bulk of the dwelling-houses in the cities and industrial localities, are state property, that is, belong to the whole people.

Article 7

The enterprises of the collective farms and co-operative organizations, with their livestock, buildings, implements, and output are the common, socialist property of the collective farms and co-operative organizations.

Every collective-farm household, in addition to its basic income from the collective farm, has for its own use a small plot of land attached to the house and, as its own property, a dwelling-house, livestock, poultry, and minor agricultural implements—in conformity with the Rules of the Agricultural Artel.

hold and articles of personal use and convenience, is protected by law, as is also the right of citizens to inherit personal property.

Article 11

The economic life of the U.S.S.R. is determined and guided by the state economic plan for the purpose of increasing the wealth of society, steadily raising the material and cultural standards of the working people and strengthening the independence of the U.S.S.R. and its defence potential.

Article 12

Work in the U.S.S.R. is a duty and a matter of honour for every able-bodied citizen, in accordance with the principle: "He who does not work, neither shall he eat."

The principle applied in the U.S.S.R. is that of socialism: "From each according to his ability, to each according to his work."

CHAPTER II THE STATE STRUCTURE

Article 13

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is a federal state, formed on the basis of a voluntary union of equal Soviet Socialist Republics (Article 13 names the Republics, see pages 1365-1410).

Article 14

The jurisdiction of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, as represented by its higher organs of state power and organs of state administration, covers:

- (a) Representation of the U.S.S.R. in international relations, conclusion, ratification and denunciation of treaties of the U.S.S.R. with other states, establishment of general procedure governing the relations of the Union Republics with foreign states;
- (b) Questions of war and peace;
- (c) Admission of new republics into the U.S.S.R.
- (d) Control over the observance of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R., and ensuring conformity of the Constitutions of the Union Republics with the Constitution of the U.S.S.R.;
- (e) Approval of changes to boundaries between Union Republics;

- (w) Definition of the fundamentals of legislation on marriage and the family;
- (x) Promulgation of all-Union acts of amnesty.

Article 15

The sovereignty of the Union Republics is limited only in the spheres defined in Article 14 of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. Outside of these spheres each Union Republic exercises state authority independently. The U.S.S.R. protects the sovereign rights of the Union Republics.

Article 16

Each Union Republic has its own Constitution, which takes account of the specific features of the Republic and is drawn up in full conformity with the Constitution of the U.S.S.R.

Article 17

The right freely to secede from the U.S.S.R. is reserved to every Union Republic.

Article 18

The territory of a Union Republic may not be altered without its consent.

Article 18A

Each Union Republic has the right to enter into direct relations with foreign states and to conclude agreements and exchange diplomatic and consular representatives with them.

Article 18B

Each Union Republic has its own Republican military formations.

Article 19

The laws of the U.S.S.R. have the same force within the territory of every Union Republic.

Article 20

In the event of divergence between a law of a Union Republic and a law of the Union, the Union law shall prevail.

Article 21

Uniform Union citizenship is established for citizens of the U.S.S.R.

Every citizen of a Union Republic is a citizen of the U.S.S.R.

Article 22

(Articles 22-27 list the autonomous soviet socialist republics and autonomous regions of the R.S.F.S.R., the Azerbaijan S.S.R., the Georgian S.S.R., the Tadzhik S.S.R. and the Uzbek S.S.R.; see U.S.S.R. Statistical Survey, for names of these. Article 23 has been repealed.)

Article 28

The settlement of questions pertaining to the regional or territorial administrative division of the Union Republics comes within the jurisdiction of the Union Republics.

Article 29

Repealed.

CHAPTER III

THE HIGHER ORGANS OF STATE POWER
IN THE UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS*Article 30*

The highest organ of state power in the U.S.S.R. is the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 31

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. exercises all rights vested in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in accordance with Article 14 of the Constitution, in so far as they do not, by virtue of the Constitution, come within the jurisdiction of organs of the U.S.S.R. that are accountable to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., that is, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., and the Ministries of the U.S.S.R.

Article 32

The legislative power of the U.S.S.R. is exercised exclusively by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 33

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. consists of two Chambers: the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities.

Article 34

The Soviet of the Union is elected by the citizens of the U.S.S.R. voting by election districts on the basis of one deputy for every 300,000 of the population.

Article 35

The Soviet of Nationalities is elected by the citizens of the U.S.S.R. voting by Union Republics, Autonomous Republics, Autonomous Regions, and National Areas on the basis of 32 deputies from each Union Republic, 11 deputies from each Autonomous Republic, 5 deputies from each Autonomous Region, and one deputy from each National Area.

Article 36

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. is elected for a term of four years.

Article 37

The two Chambers of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities, have equal rights.

Article 38

The Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities have equal powers to initiate legislation.

Article 39

A law is considered adopted if passed by both Chambers of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. by a simple majority vote in each.

Article 40

Laws passed by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. are published in the languages of the Union Republics over the signatures of the President and Secretary of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 41

Sessions of the Soviet of the Union and of the Soviet of Nationalities begin and terminate simultaneously.

Article 42

The Soviet of the Union elects a Chairman of the Soviet of the Union and four Vice-Chairmen.

Article 43

The Soviet of Nationalities elects a Chairman of the Soviet of Nationalities and four Vice-Chairmen.

Article 44

The Chairmen of the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities preside at the sittings of the respective Chambers and have charge of the conduct of their business and proceedings.

Article 45

Joint sittings of the two Chambers of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. are presided over alternately by the Chairman of the Soviet of the Union and the Chairman of the Soviet of Nationalities.

Article 46

Sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. are convened by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. twice a year.

Extraordinary sessions are convened by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. at its discretion or on the demand of one of the Union Republics.

Article 47

In the event of disagreement between the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities, the question is referred for settlement to a conciliation commission formed by the Chambers on a parity basis. If the conciliation commission fails to arrive at an agreement or if its decision fails to satisfy one of the Chambers, the question is considered for a second time by the Chambers. Failing agreement between the two Chambers, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. dissolves the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and orders new elections.

Article 48

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. at a joint sitting of the two Chambers elects the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., consisting of a President of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., fifteen Vice-Presidents—one from each Union Republic, a Secretary of the Presidium and twenty members of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. is accountable to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. for all its activities.

- (k) Institutes military titles, diplomatic ranks and other special titles;
- (l) Appoints and removes the high command of the Armed Forces of the U.S.S.R.;
- (m) In the intervals between sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., proclaims a state of war in the event of an armed attack on the U.S.S.R., or when necessary to fulfil international treaty obligations providing for mutual defence against aggression;
- (n) Orders general or partial mobilization;
- (o) Ratifies and denounces international treaties of the U.S.S.R.;
- (p) Appoints and recalls plenipotentiary representatives of the U.S.S.R. to foreign states;
- (q) Receives the letters of credence and recall of diplomatic representatives accredited to it by foreign states;
- (r) Proclaims martial law in separate localities or throughout the U.S.S.R. in the interests of the defence of the U.S.S.R. or of the maintenance of law and order and the security of the state.

Article 50

The Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities elects Credentials Committees to verify the credentials of the members of the respective Chambers.

On the report of the Credentials Committees, the Chambers decide whether to recognize the credentials of deputies or to annul their election.

Article 51

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., when it deems necessary, appoints commissions of inquiry and audit on any matter.

It is the duty of all institutions and officials to comply with the demands of such commissions and to submit to them all necessary materials and documents.

Article 52

No member of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall be prosecuted or arrested without the consent of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., or, when the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. is not in session, without the consent of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

The possibility of exercising these rights is ensured by women being accorded the same rights as men to work, payment for work, rest and leisure, social insurance and education, and also by state protection of the interests of mother and child, state aid to mothers of large families and to unmarried mothers, maternity leave with full pay, and the provision of a wide network of maternity homes, nurseries and kindergartens.

Article 123

Equality of rights of citizens of the U.S.S.R., irrespective of their nationality or race, in all spheres of economic, government, cultural, political and other social activity, is an inalienable law.

Any direct or indirect restriction of the rights of, or, conversely, the establishment of any direct or indirect privileges for, citizens on account of their race or nationality, as well as any advocacy of racial or national exclusiveness or hatred and contempt, are punishable by law.

Article 125

In conformity with the interests of the working people, and in order to strengthen the socialist system, the citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed by law:

- (a) freedom of speech;
- (b) freedom of the press;
- (c) freedom of assembly, including the holding of mass meetings;
- (d) freedom of street processions and demonstrations.

These civil rights are ensured by placing at the disposal of the working people and their organizations, printing presses, stocks of paper, public buildings, the streets, communications facilities and other material requisites for exercising these rights.

Article 126

In conformity with the interests of the working people, and in order to develop the initiative and political activity of the masses of the people, citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed the right to unite in mass organizations—trade unions, co-operative societies, youth organizations, sport and defence organizations, cultural, technical and scientific societies; and the most active and politically-conscious citizens in the ranks of the working class, working peasants and working intelligentsia voluntarily unite in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, which is the vanguard of the working people in their struggle to build communist society and is the leading core of all organizations of the working people, both government and non-government.

Article 127

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed inviolability of person. No person shall be placed under arrest except by decision of a court of law or with the sanction of a procurator.

Article 128

The inviolability of the homes of citizens and privacy of correspondence are protected by law.

Article 129

The U.S.S.R. affords the right of asylum to foreign citizens persecuted for defending the interests of the working people, or for scientific activities, or for struggling for national liberation.

Article 130

It is the duty of every citizen of the U.S.S.R. to abide by the Constitution of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, to observe the laws, to maintain labour discipline, honestly to perform public duties, and to respect the rules of socialist society.

Article 131

It is the duty of every citizen of the U.S.S.R. to safeguard and fortify public, socialist property as the sacred and inviolable foundation of the Soviet system, as the source of the wealth and might of the country, as the source of the prosperity and culture of all the working people.

Persons committing crimes in respect of public, socialist property are enemies of the people.

Article 132

Universal military service is law.

Military service in the Armed Forces of the U.S.S.R. is the honourable duty of citizens of the U.S.S.R.

CHAPTER XI THE ELECTORAL SYSTEM

ALL-UNION LEGISLATURE

In the Soviet Union laws are enacted exclusively by the higher government bodies—the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. which passes All-Union laws, and the Supreme Soviets of the Union and Autonomous Republics which pass laws effective in the republics concerned. All acts of government bodies must precisely conform to law and may be abolished or altered only by law. A law is considered valid when adopted by both chambers of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet, by a simple majority of each chamber (laws on amendments of the articles of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R., are adopted by a qualified majority). Validation of a law is preceded by the introduction of a bill by persons or institutions which have the right of legislative initiative. They are published not later than seven days after adoption and go into effect ten days after their publication, unless the law itself indicates otherwise. If a necessity arises to legislate in the interval between the sessions of the Supreme Soviet, this may be done by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet in the form of a special Decree which is subject to subsequent validation by the Supreme Soviet.

The manner in which laws are passed by the Supreme Soviets of the Union and Autonomous Republics is analogous to that in which they are passed by the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet. Unlike All-Union laws, Republican laws are valid only on the territory of the given republic. In cases of discrepancies between a Republic and an All-Union law, the All-Union law assumes superiority. (See also Chapters III and IV in the Constitution.)

SUPREME SOVIET OF THE U.S.S.R.

The Supreme Soviet adopts and repeals laws, sees that the Soviet Constitution is observed, takes decisions on the most important questions of internal and external policy, forms the leading bodies of the State, controls the work of state bodies and officials. It elects the collegiate President, forms the Soviet Government and Council of Ministers, elects the Supreme Court and appoints the Procurator-General; all these bodies are responsible to the Supreme Soviet. It is elected every four years by all citizens of 18 years and over. There are two constituent Chambers, with equal rights.

The Soviet of the Union.The Soviet of Nationalities.

The Soviet of the Union represents the common interests of all citizens, irrespective of their nationality. The Soviet of Nationalities represents the specific interests of each nation. These two chambers are vested with equal powers to initiate legislation, have equal terms of office, simultaneous sessions. Approval of both chambers is required for a bill to be passed. They have the following permanent Commissions:

Mandate, Legislative Proposals, Planning and Budget, Foreign Affairs, Industry, Transport and Communications, Construction and Building Materials Industry, Agriculture, Public Health and Social Insurance, Education, Science and Culture, Trade and Communal Services, Youth, Nature Protection.

work of subordinate bodies. Meetings are convened by the President about every two months.

At elections in June 1974, official figures state that over 99 per cent of the electorate voted.

THE COMMUNIST PARTY

The Communist Party was founded in 1903 by V. I. Lenin following a split in the Russian Social Democratic Labour Party at its London Congress into Bolsheviks (Majority) and Mensheviks (Minority). After the October Socialist Revolution (1917) it became the Russian Communist Party. In 1925 following the creation of the U.S.S.R., the All-Union Communist Party of Bolsheviks was formed, uniting various Communist Parties of the Republics of the U.S.S.R. Since 1952 this has been called the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

The Communist Party creatively develops the doctrine of Marxism-Leninism and proceeding from its principles seeks solutions to urgent problems arising in the course of building communism. The basic principle of the Party's organizational structure is democratic centralism, which involves the election of all leading Party bodies, strict party discipline and subordination of the minority to the majority, and the decisions of higher bodies being binding on lower bodies. Democratic centralism means the combination of democracy and centralism. The Party ensures every member freedom to express his opinion, however, critical.

The supreme organ of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is the Party Congress which is convened by the Central Committee at least every five years. Congress elects the Central Committee which supervises all Party activities in the intervals between congresses and directs the work of the central state and public organizations through Party groups in them. The Central Committee elects the Political Bureau of the C.P.S.U., the Secretariat and a general secretary, and organizes a Party Control Committee. The Central Committee sets up different Party organs and institutions and guides their activities, appoints the editorial boards of central Party newspapers and journals, allocates and controls Party funds, represents the Party in relations with other parties. It holds plenary sessions periodically to discuss vital problems of Party policy. The work of the Central Committee between plenary sessions is guided by the Political Bureau of the C.C. C.P.S.U., while the Secretariat of the Central Committee is responsible for routine work. Its composition is renewed at each election by at least one-fifth.

The Central Auditing Commission of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is elected by Party congress, supervises the expeditions and proper handling of affairs by the Central bodies of the Party, audits the funds of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. and controls the work of its institutions (Party schools, publishing houses, etc.). The number of members of the Party Central Committee and of the Central Auditing Commission is determined by the Congress. The 24th Congress in March 1971 elected 241 members and 155 alternate members of the Central Committee and 81 members of the Central Auditing Commission.

Party organization throughout the Soviet Union follows the country's territorial divisions in the Republics. Each Territory, Region and District has a Party Committee representing all its Branches. The Branch is the basic unit, usually embracing all the Party members in a factory, farm or other sizeable institution or group of institutions. The Branch might comprise all the members of a profession (e.g. writers) in a territory. Each Branch has a committee to lead its work and large Branches usually have full-time secretaries. Each of the fourteen Republican Communist Parties has as the supreme Party organ a Congress which elects a Central Committee. The Central Committee elects a Political Bureau and Secretariat. Each Republican Party is ultimately responsible to the Central Committee and Political Bureau of the C.P.S.U.

The C.P.S.U. exercises control over all branches of the national economy and state administration, over all activity of state bodies and public organizations.

Party members are accepted on an individual basis only. Membership is confined to Soviet citizens over 18 years old accepting the Programme and Charter of the Party, fulfilling Party decisions, paying Party dues and working in one of the Party organizations. A period of candidature is demanded before admission. Each Party member and candidate is given a card. The Soviet Union has started a renewal of Party cards beginning on March 1st, 1973, which is designed to clear the Party ranks of members unfitted to meet the demands made on them in Soviet society. In January 1973 there were 14,330,525 members and 490,506 candidate members. Workers make up 40.7 per cent (six million) of the membership of the Party and collective farmers 14.7 per cent (2.2 million). In 1970 more than 5 million members of the C.P.S.U. were specialists with higher or secondary education.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE U.S.S.R.

Chairman of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R.: L. N. SMIRNOV.

Vice-Chairman: V. V. KULIKOV, S. G. BANNIKOV.

Chairman of the Collegium for Civil Cases: V. E. PANYUGIN.

Chairman of the Collegium for Criminal Cases: E. A. SMOLENTSEV.

Chairman of the Military Collegium: V. LAPUTIN.

The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is the highest judicial organ in the U.S.S.R., exercising supervision of the judicial activities of all the judicial organs in the country. Is elected by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. for a term of five years. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. includes (by virtue of their office) the Chairmen of the Supreme Courts of the Union Republics. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is composed of the Plenum and three Collegiums (civil cases, criminal cases and military). The Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. attends the sessions of the Plenum.

The judicial collegia examine protests, by way of judicial supervision, against the rulings and verdicts passed by the Supreme Courts in Union Republics. The military collegium examines appeals and protests, by way of judicial supervision, against the verdicts of military tribunals in the military districts and fleets. All collegia examine, as courts of first instance, cases of exceptional importance coming within their purview under the law. The rulings, verdicts and resolutions of the collegia could be protested by the Chairman of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. or the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. by filing a protest to the Plenum of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. The Plenum examines also the protests against the rulings of the Supreme Courts of the Union Republics, the materials pertaining to the summarization of judicial practice and judicial statistics, issues explanations to the courts on questions of application of judicial practice. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. makes appropriate representations to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. on questions regarding the interpretation of the laws. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. has the power of legislative initiative. Cases at the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. are examined by a member of the court and two people's assessors, if the case is heard in the first instance. Appeals and protests are examined by three members of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R.

Supreme Courts are formed in Union and Autonomous Republics. They are the highest judicial organs of these Republics and exercise supervision of the activities of the judicial bodies in the given Republic. (See also Articles 102-117 of the Constitution.)

Procurator. Procurator's Offices supervise the strict observance of law by all ministerial and executive bodies, economic institutions, co-operative and public organizations, officials and individuals, through instituting criminal proceedings against guilty persons and protesting decisions infringing upon law; they exercise supervision over the legality of passing and executing sentences and observance of law in places of detention.

The Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. and procurators subordinate to him effect prosecutions in courts. They have rights to withdraw a case from the trial for purposes of further examination, to protest the decisions and verdicts of courts. The participation of the procurator in court proceedings and the rights he enjoys guarantee the observance of law and the rights of the state and citizens.

Procurator's Offices perform their functions independent of any state bodies, they are subordinated only to the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.

The Procurator-General is elected by the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet for a term of seven years. Procurators of Union and autonomous republics, territories, regions and autonomous regions are appointed by the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. for a term of five years, and procurators of towns, districts and areas are appointed by the Procurator of the Union republic. (See also Articles 102-117 of the Constitution.)

Procurator-General: R. A. RUDENKO.

RELIGION

The Council for Religious Affairs: attached to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.; Chair: VLADIMIR KUROVEDOV.

Article 124 of the Fundamental Law (Constitution) of the U.S.S.R. says: "In order to ensure to citizens freedom of conscience, the Church in the U.S.S.R. is separated from the State, and the school from the Church. Freedom of religious worship and freedom of anti-religious propaganda are recognized for all citizens."

A religious sect is recognized when it consists of twenty or more adherents over the age of eighteen. Places of worship, seminaries and other requirements are provided and maintained by the voluntary contributions of the adherents themselves. A considerable number of churches of various faiths have been restored since the end of the war, and there are a number of religious seminaries for the training of priests in the varied religions practised in the U.S.S.R.

The existing religious cults are: The Russian Orthodox Church, the Georgian Orthodox Church, the Armenian Gregorian Church, the Roman Catholic Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Evangelical Christian Baptists, the Protestant Church, the Old Believers, the Methodist Church, the Molokani communities, the Moslem communities, the Jewish Religious Community and the Buddhist Religion.

THE RUSSIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Russian Orthodox Church is the biggest single body among the religious cults, and the Moscow Patriarchate publishes its own monthly magazine.

Patriarch: PIMEN, Metropolitan of Moscow and all Russia.

tains a spiritual mission in Jerusalem and representatives in Austria and Hungary. There is a representative of the Alexandrian Orthodox Church in Odessa, and of the Antioch and Bulgarian Orthodox Churches in Moscow. There are two theological academies (the Moscow and Leningrad Academies) and theological seminaries in Moscow and Leningrad.

THE GEORGIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Georgian Orthodox Church is divided into four bishoprics.

Patriarch-Catholikos of All Georgia: Metropolitan DAVID, Tbilisi, Georgian S.S.R.

MOSLEMS

Moslems make up the second largest religious community in the U.S.S.R. The majority are Sunnites with a small number of Shiites, mostly in Azerbaizhan. They are divided into four boards, according to the geographical and historical conditions and the existence of different sects. The four Boards are located at Tashkent (Uzbek S.S.R.), Ufa (Bashkir A.S.S.R.), Baku (Azerbaizhan S.S.R.) and Buinaksk (Daghestan A.S.S.R.). A theological school is maintained in Bukhara.

Chairman of the Moslem Board of Central Asia and Kazakhstan (the biggest single grouping of Moslems, with headquarters in Tashkent): Mufti ZIYAUDDIN BABAKHANOV.

Chairman of Moslem Board of European Part of the U.S.S.R. and Siberia: Mufti SHAKIR HIYALITDINOV.

Chairman of Moslem Board for Transcaucasia: SULEYMAN-ZADE.

Chairman of Moslem Board for North Caucasus and Dagestan: Mufti MOHAMMED KHADJI KURBANOV.

ROMAN CATHOLICS

The Church has a large following in Lithuania, Latvia and W. Byelorussia and Ukraine.

THE CHURCH OF ARMENIA

Religious centre of the Church of Armenia in the U.S.S.R.—headed by the Supreme Patriarch VAZGEN I, Catholicos of All Armenians—is the ancient city of Echmiadzin. The Church has 26 bishoprics (20 outside the U.S.S.R.). Its main following is in Armenia, Georgia and Azerbaizhan.

OLD BELIEVERS (THE OLD FAITH)

Divided into three branches: the Belokrinitsky Concord, under the Archbishop of Moscow and All-Russia, the Bezpopovtsi Concord and the Beglopovovtsi Concord. Most of the believers are in the central region of Russia, the Ukraine, Byelorussia, Moldavia and the Baltic republics.

EVANGELICAL CHRISTIAN BAPTIST CHURCH

The All-Union Council of Evangelical Christian Baptists unites the Baptist, Evangelical, Pentecostal and Mennonite churches in the Soviet Union. There is a religious centre in Moscow.

Chairman of the All-Union Council: ILIA G. IVANOV; P.O.B. 520, Moscow.

EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

An episcopal church, with its greatest following in Latvia and Estonia.

Primate of Estonia: Archbishop A. T. TOUMING.

Primate of Latvia: Y. P. MATULIS.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

There are independent religious communities in a number of regions of the Soviet Union.

JEWISH RELIGION

There is no united centre, but many independent communities exist in Moscow, Kiev, and other parts of the Ukrainian and Byelorussian Republics, particularly in Lvov and Minsk, as well as in the Jewish Autonomous Region (R.S.F.S.R.), which has a preponderance of Jewish settlers.

BUDDHISM

Buddhism is most widespread in the Buryat Autonomous Republic, where the Central Religious Board has its seat, the Tuva Autonomous Republic and the Irkutsk and Chita Regions.

Chairman: Bandido-Khambo Lama Z. D. GAMBOYEV.

THE PRESS

Newspapers and periodicals in the Soviet Union are owned and published by various public or collective organizations, including the Communist Party, the central and local Soviets (district, city and rural councils), trade unions, co-operatives, ministries, planning organizations, cultural bodies, educational and learned institutions of all kinds, and finally, factories and collective farms. These publications cover national, provincial and local interests. Pravda, the largest newspaper in the Soviet Union, is printed in 40 cities; in contrast, the smallest local dailies are no more than bulletins posted on official notice-boards for public reading.

Lenin's dictum that "the Press is the most strong and powerful weapon of the Party" is the basis of the Soviet attitude to its newspapers and periodicals. Lenin believed that the Press is powerful as an organizer of the people, rallying them to the Communist cause. The purpose of the Soviet press is to disseminate the ideas of Marxism-Leninism and to present information on life in the Soviet Union and abroad. It is its duty to encourage a proper attitude to work, an attachment to the Soviet Union and a high sense of social responsibility. In so far as no newspaper is permitted to publish anything harmful to the State or to the Communist cause, a form of censorship exists, but its use is rarely evident since the system provides reliable editors who are Party members, well acquainted with Communist ideology. Senior editors are very well paid.

Owing to the predominantly political nature of the Soviet Press it may appear dull to Western readers. Stories are generally of a serious nature concentrating on international and government affairs; topics outside this sphere are considered trivial. There are very few entertainment features, and personalities are generally played down. Editorials are on serious topics and are given prominent positions. Most reporting has a bias towards the Party line. Newspapers, however, are improving in appearance, with careful layout and an increasing use of photographs.

In general the Soviet Press is remarkably popular and produces 8,700 newspapers with a circulation totalling 150 million and 6,368 periodicals. The most influential daily is Pravda (circ. 9,600,000), which is published 365 days a year and has a staff of over 40,000 correspondents. It is the organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party and is essential reading for all serious Party members. It tends to stress internal matters while Izvestia (circ. 8.6 million), the government newspaper, is more concerned with foreign affairs. Among the more important periodicals are Ogonyok and Kommunist, devoted mostly to internal problems, Notoye Vremya, Za Rubezhom and Mekhlunarsnaya Zhizn, which deal with international matters, Krokodil, a lively satirical magazine, Nevy Mir, the most influential literary journal, and Zhurnalist, published by the Union of Journalists.

The main news agency, TASS, plays an important role in distributing by radio or telegraph foreign and domestic news to newspapers throughout the republics; it also transmits Pravda editorials. Much of the control of the Soviet Press is effected through strict supervision of the news agency.

PUBLISHING

In 1964 publishing in the U.S.S.R. was reorganized into 50 central publishing houses and about 170 subsidiaries under the control of the State Committee for Publishing Houses, Polygraphy and Bookselling. The majority of publishers cover a special field of subject matter, the leading publishers being Nauka which covers all sciences and the humanities; Mir dealing with scientific and technical books; Khudozhestvennaya Literatura publishing fiction; Prosvetshenie educational books; Meditsina, Progress and Det'skaya Literatura. Republican and Regional publishers issue books and booklets of local interest.

Publishing houses function under the auspices of trade unions, the Communist Party, Young Communist League, Novosti Press, and other organizations (mainly for distribution abroad) and other publishing houses. Religious organizations and societies also publish their own books. The U.S.S.R. Writers' Union has its own publishing houses, the largest being Sovetskii Pisatel (Soviet Writer). The Union publishes 14 journals and 73 fiction magazines centrally, as well as 60 literary magazines in the national republics and areas. There are no private publishing houses in the U.S.S.R.

All branches of publishing (books, periodicals, newspapers), means of production (printers, paper industry), and means of distribution (bookshops, libraries) are either directly or indirectly supervised by the State Committee. The Committee is composed of three editorial boards dealing with, respectively, social and political literature, fiction, and technical and scientific literature. Subject experts, such as members of the Academy of Sciences, the Union of Soviet Writers, or the Ministry of Higher Education, are consulted on the choice of manuscripts for production, and proposals for publication of certain works often originate from these bodies. The three editorial boards are composed largely of editors from the various publishing houses so that, although all proposed publications must be approved by the State Committee, the publisher still influences choice of material at this level.

Publishers plan their programmes a year in advance, forwarding a list of proposed publications to the State Committee which co-ordinates all the lists to prevent duplication. When a publisher's list has been approved, a sample number of copies is printed and distributed to prospective customers—booksellers, libraries, schools. Customers return an estimate of the number of copies they will require, the books are printed, and distributed by Soyuz Kniga, the state distributive organ, which has a centre in each region of the U.S.S.R.

The following are also represented: Agencja Robotnicza, Danish Press Agency, EFE, Finnish News Agency, Interpress, Montsaine, Norwegian Press Agency, Press Trust of India, Swedish Press Agency, Syrian Arab News Agency, Thong Phong Tan Xa (South Viet-Nam Liberation Agency), Viet-Nam Dong Tan Xa.

a flourishing library market benefit the service given to customers through the bookshops.

An author incurs no expenses involved in publishing his book. He is entitled to royalties dependent on the size, edition and nature of the book and each publishing house signs an appropriate contract with the author. To further cultural cooperation, the U.S.S.R. became party to the Berne Convention of the Universal Copyright Law following a law passed in February 1973. The Soviet Union will now recognize a foreign copyright only if the work is sent abroad "by a procedure established by legislation" and unauthorized foreign publication will be stopped.

The Soviet Union is the largest book producer in the world, accounting for one-quarter of all books produced in the world. In 1971, the Soviet Union published about 79,000 books and brochures in a total edition of 1.3 thousand million copies. These were published in 59 languages spoken in the U.S.S.R. and in 36 foreign languages.

TELEVISION

Moscow Television: Shabolovka 53, Moscow.

The TV relay system covers an area that includes more than two-thirds of the country's population. The total telecasting time averages 1,656 hours a day. There are six central TV channels with a total operating time of 33 hours a day.

In 1971 there were 1,000 television stations and transmitters, and 127 television centres. About fifty cities have 2 channels, and in 14 capitals of Union republics programmes are presented in national and Russian languages. Moscow has 4 and Leningrad 3 channels. Moscow I operates 12 hours every day. Moscow II operates for 6 hours daily. Moscow III operates 4 hours daily. Moscow IV operates for 3½ hours on weekdays and Moscow V (colour) for 5 hours. Colour television is received in almost 70 cities.

A new branch of television in the U.S.S.R. is cosmonautism through which the flights of Soviet cosmonauts are shown. Communications satellites of Molniya type are used for the exchange of television programmes between Moscow, Vladivostok and other cities. Through this chain, experimental colour programmes are transmitted between Moscow and Paris based on the Soviet-French SECAM colour system.

FINANCE

BANKING

The Soviet credit system is composed of the following banks:

CENTRAL BANK

Gosbank U.S.S.R. (State Bank): Neglinnaya 12, Moscow; f. 1921; Gosbank issues currency and controls its circulation, grants credits to government enterprises, makes capital investment in agriculture and consumer co-operatives, settles international accounts, and effects transactions with foreign currency, gold and other precious metals. The Bank has main offices in each of the Union Republics, 158 regional and town offices, over 4,000 smaller branches and over 70,000 savings banks throughout the Soviet Union; Chair. M. N. SYRANOV; First Deputy Chair. P. Y. PENKIN.

It has more than 1,300 local branches; Chair. M. S. ZOROV.

Vneshtorgbank (Foreign Trade Bank): Neglinnaya 12, Moscow; f. 1922; in charge of the Soviet Union's international business, banking relations with foreign banks, imports, exports, non-commercial payments to countries abroad, payments from foreign countries and the banking business of Soviet foreign trade organizations; develops internal trade and industry connected with export and import; Vneshtorgbank has 20 branches—Gosbank carries out transactions with foreign banks, etc., on its behalf; cap. 300m. roubles; Chair. Y. A. IVANOV.

Sberkassa (Savings Bank): on January 1st, 1972 there were 5,700 saving banks in which private deposits amounted to 60,700 million roubles in 59.3 million accounts. These banks accept money from and issue money to individual citizens.

TAXATION

Taxes are paid by individuals, collective farms and co-operative societies. In 1971, tax levied on the population amounted to 13.7 thousand million roubles while the sum total of government benefits paid out to working people amounted to 55.6 thousand million roubles.

Income tax is collected monthly from those workers earning 70 or more roubles per month. Anyone who earns between 70-100 roubles pays 4.6 roubles tax a month, plus 12 per cent of what he earns above 70 roubles. Those with over three dependants are entitled to 30 per cent reduction on their income tax. Childless persons of 20-50 years of age pay a tax totalling 6 per cent of their income. Those workers who earn less than 70 roubles per month pay no income tax since 1972. There is special exemption from income tax for certain groups, including privates, N.C.O.s, pensioners, invalids, students and others.

In rural areas the agricultural tax is the principal one. It is paid by collective farmers and other citizens who hold plots of land for their personal use. It is worked out at fixed rates on the 0.01 hectare basis, irrespective of crops sown. The rates vary in different republics, regions, districts and sometimes even villages. In the Russian Federation the average rate is 0.85 roubles ranging from 0.3 to 1.4 roubles per 0.01 hectare. War and labour invalids, servicemen's families, elderly people and rural intellectuals enjoy privileges.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

U.S.S.R. Chamber of Commerce: Ul. Kuibysheva 6, Moscow; f. 1932; Pres. B. A. BORISOV; Gen. Sec. I. I. GAIDAENKO. The Chamber of Commerce promotes contact between trade corporations and foreign companies or organizations. It organizes Soviet Trade and Industrial exhibitions abroad and international exhibitions in the U.S.S.R. It is the sole patent issue office in the U.S.S.R.

INTERNAL TRADE

There are three forms of trade in the U.S.S.R., state, co-operative and collective farm trade. State trade is the leading and predominant one, embracing the entire foreign trade and the internal wholesale trade. The internal state retail trade is carried on through state organizations and offers its services mostly to the urban population. Co-operative trade serves the rural population, its share in the country's overall trade turnover being 28.9 per cent. Collective trade accounts for 1.5 per cent of the total trade volume.

U.S.S.R. Ministry of Trade: Moscow; Minister A. I. SRRUYEV; is responsible for internal trade through the Magazini Gosudarstvennoi Torgovli.

Magazini Gosudarstvennoi Torgovli (State-owned Shops): cover the urban areas and are managed and operated by the Ministry of Trade through the local authorities. Shops are subordinated either to the board of consumer goods, or to the board of food stuffs.

Tsentrosoyuz (Central Co-operative Union): organizes wholesale supplies to the local co-operatives and also trades with foreign co-operative bodies in 40 countries; handles construction and management of Kolkhoznie Rynki; Chair. A. P. KLIMOV.

Kooperativi (Co-operative Shops): mainly in rural areas. They are owned and run by local consumer co-operative societies.

Kolkhoznie Rynki (Collective Farm Markets): where collective farmers can sell surplus foodstuffs at market prices.

EXTERNAL TRADE

Foreign trade is a state monopoly, trade with foreign countries is exercised through state organizations only. Import-export relations with foreign countries are governed by special plans forming part of the national-economic plans. The postwar period has seen a rapid advance of Soviet foreign trade. The U.S.S.R. now ranks seventh in the world in terms of foreign trade turnover. The foreign trade turnover in 1972 totalled 26,000 million roubles. Eighty-five per cent of Soviet exports are industrial goods and 15 per cent agricultural produce. Over 64 per cent of the U.S.S.R.'s foreign trade is with the socialist countries. However in recent years Soviet trade with the advanced capitalist countries has increased markedly.

A foreign trade monopoly is exercised by foreign trade organizations. These include, above all, all-Union foreign trade associations ("Mashinoexport", "Exportkhleb", "Exportlyon", etc.) subordinated to the Ministry of Foreign Trade. Some foreign trade organizations engaged in wholesale deliveries of equipment and rendering technical aid to foreign countries are under the State Foreign Economic Relations Committee of the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers; the "Soyuzkhozpromstorg" association is under the "Tsentrosoyuz"; the "Soufrakht"—under the Ministry of Merchant Marine.

Each foreign trade organization exercises state monopoly over the import or export of a group of commodities (e.g. the "Soyuzneftexport" handles oil and oil products; "Autoexport"—motor cars, lorries, motor cycles, bicycles. Some associations are organized on a territorial principle, i.e. trade in various kinds of commodities with a certain group of countries (e.g. "Vostochnikorg" that trades with the East). There are also associations specializing in trade in licences, tourism, publications, delivery of commodities and transport-forwarding operations.

The foreign trade organizations have a working capital and enjoy the legal rights of a juridical person within the framework of their Rules. They have the right of setting up their own branches, offices and agencies, of concluding transactions with firms and organizations, bearing responsibility for the transactions concluded. The state is not responsible for commitments of the associations and the latter accept no claims addressed to the state.

U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers' State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations: controls economic relations with foreign countries; Chair. S. A. SKACHKOV.

U.S.S.R. Ministry of Foreign Trade: in charge of the conduct of foreign trade; Minister N. S. PATOLICHEV.

AGRICULTURE

Ministry of Agriculture: Moscow; Minister DMITRI POLYANSKY.

Soviet agriculture is divided into two main groups:

Kolkhozi (Collective Farms): administered and worked by the participating farmers. The produce is sold to the State and on the Kolkhoznie Rynki (Collective Farm Markets). Profits are shared amongst the collective farmers who also have small individual plots of land for their own private use. There are 32,100 collective farms in the U.S.S.R. (1972).

Sovkhozi (State Farms): are the property of the State. They render technical aid and advice to the farms. The farmers are employees of the State and are paid wages. There are some 15,700 state farms (1972).

All-Union Corporation "Soyuzselkhoztekhnika" of the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers: a government body which supplies equipment to collective and state farms; Chair. A. A. Yezhevsky.

INDUSTRY

The U.S.S.R. State Planning Committee, GOSPLAN, is responsible for problems of economic development, the drafting and implementation of economic plans and the co-ordination of sector plans; all plans are submitted for approval of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet.

The management of industry of national significance is centralized under the State Planning Committees. This applies to such industries as aeronautics, automobiles, gas, defence, ship-building, electronics, electrical goods, etc. Other industries such as oil, coal, chemicals, timber and its products, iron and steel and non-ferrous metals are under the joint jurisdiction of national and republican councils. Industries exclusively consuming local raw materials come under the State Planning Committees of the Union Republics.

Within three years (1973-1975) industry is to be transferred to a new system of management. It will be organized in two stages, ministry and combine (enterprise), or in three stages, ministry, industrial amalgamation and combine (enterprise). The new industrial amalgamations will unite not only enterprises but also research institutions, design bureaux and technological and other organizations. The transition to the new system of management means that the chief departments of the ministries will be abolished. Most of the problems pertaining to economic and production activity are to be solved directly by enterprises, combines and amalgamations.

TRADE UNIONS

CENTRAL ORGANIZATION

The All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions: Leninsky Prospekt 42, Moscow V-119; Chair. A. M. SHELEPIN.

In the U.S.S.R. there are 25 branch trade unions with a total membership of over 99 million. Membership in trade unions is voluntary and open to every factory or office worker, as well as to every person attending institutions of higher learning, special secondary or vocational schools.

The trade unions take an active part in the social and political life of the country. They participate in the elections to organs of state power—they have the right to nominate candidates for election to Soviets; in drafting laws on production, labour, living conditions and culture; they draw broad sections of working people into industrial management, in particular through the establishment of standing production conferences. The unions prevent the violation of labour laws, settle labour disputes, conclude collective agreements with the managements of industrial enterprises, and ensure that these are fulfilled; they help factory and office workers improve their professional skills and organize training facilities for active trade union members.

The trade unions operate the system of state social insurance, the budget of which amounted to 21,400 million roubles in 1972. They keep a check on housing and the allotment of apartments, and concern themselves generally with questions of cultural and day-to-day services for the population.

The trade unions are organized on the industrial principle, i.e. all persons employed at the same factory or office belong to the same union, each trade union comprises the employees of one or several branches of the national economy.

The trade unions have a centralized organization headed by the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions (A.U.C.C.T.U.), which convenes a Congress every five years. The last (15th) Congress took place in March 1972. The Congress elects the Central Council, which exercises authority until the next Congress. In the regions, territories, union republics and cities, the work of trade union organizations is co-ordinated by trade union councils. The basic unit of a trade union is the primary trade union organization at an enterprise, state farm, office or institute. Soviet Trade Unions are members of the WFTU and participate in the work of the International Labour Organization and UNESCO; main publs. Trud (daily), Sovetskije Profsoyuzy (fortnightly), Ohhrana Truda i Sotsialnoe Strakhovanie (monthly), Klub i khudozhestvennaya samodeyatelnost (fortnightly).

TRANSPORT

RAILWAYS

Ministry of Railways: Moscow, Novo-Basmanaya 2; Minister B. BESHCHIEV. Administers the railways through 25 railway boards located in the important towns.

The railway network totals 136,300 km. of 1,524 mm. (5 ft.) gauge. By the end of 1972 120,000 km. of line were converted to electric and diesel traction. The railways carry 70 per cent of all freight. Electrification has been completed on the 5,500 km. (3,438 miles) line between Moscow and Baikal, on the 3,500 km. (2,125 miles) between Leningrad, Moscow, and Leningrad and on the 1,800 km. (1,125 miles) between Moscow, Gorky and Sverdlovsk. The total freight turnover of the U.S.S.R. amounted to 2,760,800 million ton-km. in 1972 and 3,167 million passengers were carried.

ROADS

Main highways connect Moscow with Kiev, the Crimea, Leningrad, Minsk, Riga and Warsaw, the Caucasus, Kazakhstan, Alma-Ata, Frunze and Tashkent, and with parts of Siberia.

The total length of roads is 1,359,800 km., of which 567,300 km. are hard-surfaced.

INLAND WATERWAYS

Each Republic controls its own waterways: total length about 146,100 km. River transport has always been of great importance to the U.S.S.R., and in those areas where railway lines are few it is essential. Every year river vessels carry about 145 million passengers. The main inland waterway systems are those of the Volga, Dnieper, Don, Ob, Yenisei, Lena, Amur and Amu-Darya. The Volga and its tributaries is the largest system and carries nearly half the cargoes; it is linked by canals to the Don and the Black Sea, the Baltic and the White Sea. The main terminal ports on the Volga-Don system are Astrakhan, Rostov, Moscow, Perm and Leningrad; the main transfer ports are Volgograd, Saratov, Kuibyshev, Kazan, Gorky and Yaroslavl.

River-ports in Siberia improved under the 1951-55 Plan included Omsk, Novosibirsk and Irkutsk. Kotlas and Pechora, in North Russia, have also been improved.

SHIPPING

The Soviet Union has one of the largest merchant fleets in the world. It has 16 steamship lines, each specializing in a particular shipping operation. In 1973 the total tonnage of the Soviet fleet reached 17,396,900 gross tons making it the sixth largest in the world after Liberia, Japan, the United Kingdom, Norway and Greece.

Soviet companies are full members of a number of freight conferences such as Continent-Australia, Australia-Continent and the United Kingdom, Mediterranean-Canada Westbound Conference, North Atlantic Passenger Conference. In 1973 the U.S.S.R. shipping companies operated 73 regular lines, including 51 international lines. Scheduled shipping reached a total of 19 million tons.

CIVIL AVIATION

Aeroflot (Ministry of Civil Aviation of the U.S.S.R.): Leningradsky Prospect 37, Moscow A-167; f. 1923; Minister B. BUGAYEV.

Aeroflot is the world's largest airline and the sole operator of all kinds of air services in the Soviet Union, which, apart from scheduled flights, include agricultural, survey and ambulance services and the maintenance of airfields and navigation aids. Its extensive domestic network serves the capitals of all the Union Republics and many other towns, whilst international flights serve Europe, Africa, Asia and the Americas. Aeroflot has air service agreements with 65 countries and with many civil aviation companies.

The present fleet of Tu-104, Tu-114, Tu-124, Tu-134, Tu-154, Il-18, Il-62, An-2, An-10, An-12, An-24 and Yak-40 serves Aeroflot's basic air routes. Aeroflot operates 3,000 routes of a total length of more than 800,000 km., which connect 3,500 towns of the U.S.S.R. In 1973 Aeroflot aircraft transported 85 million passengers, that is about one-third of the world passenger transportation. In the summer holiday period aircraft carry up to 220,000 passengers daily.

The supersonic liner Tu-144 with a cruising speed of 2,500 km.p.h., was first tested in 1969. The U.S.S.R. is attempting to develop it to operate on long-distance routes.

The Soviet Union is also served by the following foreign airlines: Air Algérie, Air Canada, Air France, Air India, Alitalia, AUA, Balkan, British Airways, CSA, Egyptair, Finnair, Interflug, Iraqi Airways, JAL, JAT, KLM, LOT, Lufthansa, MALEV, Pan American, SAS, Swissair and TAROM.

ATOMIC ENERGY

The world's first atomic power station began operation in Obninsk with a capacity of 5,000 kW. in June 1954. Since that time, the Soviet Union has carried out an extensive programme of development and experiment in the peaceful use of atomic energy.

Some of the most important power stations in the U.S.S.R. are: the Siberian Atomic Power Station in Novosibirsk, opened in 1958, with 100,000 kW. capacity in its first section, 500,000 kW. in its second, and third and fourth sections under construction; the Kurchatov Atomic Power Station, opened in 1963, with 100,000 kW. capacity in its first section, 200,000 kW. in its second, and third and fourth sections under construction; and the Novovoronezh Atomic Power Station, opened in 1964, with 240,000 kW. capacity in its first section, 375,000 kW. in its second, and third and fourth sections under construction each with two reactors of 440,000 kW. capacity.

There are several smaller plants of the ARBUS type (750 kW.) and the TES-3 type (1,500 kW.) supplying power to remote northern regions lacking fuel deposits.

Under the programme adopted by the Twenty-fourth Party Congress nuclear power stations of six to eight million kW. capacity are to be put into operation by 1975. Three types of reactor have been chosen for this purpose: the RBMK-1000 (capacity 1 million kW.), the VVER (two versions of 440,000 kW. and 1 million kW. capacity) and the BN-600 (600,000 kW. capacity). The first twin-unit nuclear power station with an output of 2 million kW. is under construction near Leningrad. Other power stations to be constructed in the period 1971-75 include four using RBMK-1000 units (at Kursk, Chernobylsk, Smolensk and the Western station) and others using VVER-110 and RBMK-1000 units (Kola, Armenia, West Ukraine).

A new method of uranium mining has been developed in the U.S.S.R. in which the uranium is dissolved by a chemically active agent and pumped up to the surface as a solution to undergo further processing. Some enterprises have already put this method to practical use.

For the purpose of control and automation of technological operations, over 4,000 radiotelephone devices are installed annually in the U.S.S.R.

(R.S.F.S.R.)

INTRODUCTION

The R.S.F.S.R., which was formed on November 7th, 1917, and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922, has an area of 17,075,400 sq. km. extending from the Baltic Sea and the Arctic Ocean in the north to China and Mongolia in the south and the Pacific Ocean in the east. It embraces 16 Autonomous Republics, 5 Autonomous Regions and 10 National Areas and is the biggest of the Union Republics in size and population. Out of the total population of the R.S.F.S.R. of 132,200,000 (1973), 82.8 per cent are Russians, 3.7 per cent Tartars, 2.6 per cent Ukrainians and 1.3 per cent Chuvash (census 1970). There are over 60 other nationalities in the R.S.F.S.R. Moscow, the capital, has a population of 7,410,000 (1973). Other major towns include the seaports of Leningrad on the Baltic, Archangel on the Arctic and Vladivostok on the Sea of Japan.

AGRICULTURE

In 1972 11,305,000 people were engaged in agriculture on 13,601 collective farms and 9,015 state farms. The Republic has a diversified agriculture owing to differing conditions over the vast area. The main crops are cultivated everywhere except in the northern area. Sown areas of the R.S.F.S.R. constitute 59 per cent of the sown area of the U.S.S.R. and in 1972 the total yield of grain crops was 54 per cent of that of the U.S.S.R. As for other crops, sugar beet comprised 21 per cent of the total yield in the U.S.S.R., sunflower 46 per cent, flax 70 per cent, potatoes 34 per cent and vegetables 40 per cent. In livestock the R.S.F.S.R. produced 52 per cent of meat, 54 per cent of milk, 67 per cent of eggs and 51 per cent of wool. Bee-keeping, fur farming and reindeer breeding are developed in some regions.

INDUSTRY AND MINING

The Russian Federation is the most economically developed of the Union Republics, having Leningrad as the hub of the north-western area, an industrial area around Moscow, oil and salt in the Volga valley, the Urals with their rich natural resources, and further mineral sources on the Black Sea coast, especially of iron-ore and coal deposits. Large deposits of coal are found in Siberia, which also provides iron ore, copper, manganese, nepheline, tungsten, potash, magnesium, titanium, lithium, tantalum, rubidium, cobalt, mica, tin, zinc, gold and precious stones.

Industry is highly developed in the R.S.F.S.R. It possesses the world's four largest hydro-electric stations on the Volga and on the Angara, Ob and Yenisei in Siberia. The central area (around Moscow) produces a high proportion of technological equipment and there are complex and advanced precision engineering plants. The industry of the Volga-Vyatka region is characterized by high labour consumption and produces large numbers of cars, river-craft and milling machines. Ship-building is an important industry in the North-west. It also produces equipment for industry. The enormous timber resources of this region enable it to produce 86 per cent of the Union's paper and cardboard. The Volga area has predominately heavy industry and is also the main supplier of sulphuric acid to the national economy. Siberian industry is based mainly on mining, but certain branches of the chemical and engineering industries have developed there. Incentives are offered to people settling in Siberia.

THE ARMENIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Armenian Republic was formed on November 29th, 1920 and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922. It has an area of 29,800 sq. km. and a population of 2,672,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these 88.6 per cent are Armenians, 5.9 per cent Azerbaizhanians, 2.7 per cent Russians and 1.5 per cent Kurds (census 1970). Yerevan, the capital, has a population of 842,000 (1973). Armenia is a country of high mountains and fertile valleys, situated in the southern part of Transcaucasia. To the west, Armenia has a land frontier with Turkey and, to the south, a short frontier with Iran.

INDUSTRY AND MINING

In the mountains of Armenia are found copper and iron ore, pyrite, manganese, molybdenum and nepheline, which form the basis of developing metallurgical industries. The mountains are also rich in marble of varied shades and tufa which is widely used in construction. The mountain rivers have been harnessed as a source of cheap electric power for industry and are also used for irrigating arid lands. The food and other light industries, machine-building and metallurgy are important branches of industry in Armenia, and the chemical industry is of growing significance. Since power generation is relatively cheap, power-consuming industries such as aluminium, rubber and ferro-alloy production have been established.

THE AZERBAIZHAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Azerbaijan Republic was formed on April 20th, 1920 and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922. It has an area of 86,600 sq. km. and a population of 5,421,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these, 73.8 per cent are Azerbaijanians, 10 per cent Russians and 10 per cent Armenians. Baku, the capital, has a population of 1,337,000 (1973). The Republic includes Nakhichevan Autonomous Republic and Nagorno-Karabakhskaya Autonomous oblast.

The Azerbaijan Republic occupies the eastern part of Transcaucasia facing the Caspian Sea. The greater part of the Republic includes the lowlands of the River Kura and the lower reaches of its tributary, the Araks. The Republic juts out into the Caspian Sea, forming the oil-rich Apsheron Peninsula. To the south is a frontier with Iran.

INDUSTRY AND MINING

The Republic is rich in oil and gas and in mineral deposits, which include iron ore, bauxite, chromium, molybdenum, cobalt, rock salt and marble. In the north, in the Caucasian foothills, is one of the oldest oil-producing areas in the world, which contributes 9.0 per cent of the total oil production of the U.S.S.R. Rolled metals, steel and aluminium are produced and a wide range of heavy machinery is manufactured, including extraction and refining equipment for the oil industry. Petro-chemical products (plastics, synthetic rubber, fertilizers, weed-killers, pesticides, paints, varnishes), building materials (cement, glass, concrete) and textiles (cotton, silk and wool) are all well developed.

INDUSTRY AND MINING

Byelorussian industry produces motor vehicles, ball bearings, electric motors, farm machines, television sets, electric instruments, watches, cameras, pianos, synthetic fibres and furniture. There is a very high output of machine tools, lorries, tractors and motorcycles. The chemical industry is a large supplier of mineral fertilizers. Oil and natural gas were recently discovered in quantities to be of industrial importance. A new branch of mining has thus been established.

ESTONIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

Estonia became part of the Soviet Union on August 6th, 1940, the Republic having been formed on July 21st of that year. It has an area of 45,100 sq. km. and a population of 1,405,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these, there are 68.2 per cent Estonians, 24.7 per cent Russians, 2.1 per cent Ukrainians, 1.4 per cent Byelorussians and 1.4 per cent

Finns (census 1970). Tallinn, the capital, has a population of 386,000 (1973). The Estonian Republic is located in the north-west of the Soviet Union between Latvia and the Gulf of Finland and, in addition to the mainland, includes over 800 islands in the Baltic Sea. It is bounded on the east by the R.S.F.S.R.

INDUSTRY AND MINING

Engineering and metal working are the main industries. Estonia produces building machinery, trench excavators, precision instruments, equipment for the oil, mining, and chemical industries, and radio and electronic equipment.

Estonia is rich in power resources, water power, peat, and especially bituminous shale, having the biggest deposits in the Soviet Union. Gas, liquid fuel, chemicals and other valuable products obtained from the shale are processed at the Kohtla-Järve works, the largest plant of its kind in the world. A number of power stations have been built including a hydropower station on the Narva Falls and a power station in Ellamaa, working on peat.

Timber and wood-working industries and the textile industry are expanding rapidly, and Estonia has the highest per capita output of fabrics in the U.S.S.R.

Estonian fishing trawlers and refrigerators ships work in the North Atlantic, the main catch being herring. The Republic has the biggest per capita fish catch and output of tinned fish in the country.

THE GEORGIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Georgian Republic was formed on February 25th, 1921 and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922. It has an area of 69,700 sq. km. and a population of 4,835,000. Of these, 66.8 per cent are Georgians, 9.7 per cent Armenians, 8.5 per cent Russians, 4.6 per cent Azerbaijanians, 3.2 per cent Ossetians and 1.7 per cent Abkhazians (census 1970). Tbilisi, the capital, has a population of 946,000 (1973). The Georgian Republic includes the Abkhazian Autonomous Republic (capital Sukhumi), the Adzharian Autonomous Republic (Batumi), and the South-Ossetian Autonomous Region (Tskhinvali). The republic is situated in West Transcaucasia on both sides of the Suram range. A humid sub-tropical zone with luxuriant evergreen vegetation stretches along the Black Sea coast. There is a short frontier with Turkey in the south.

AGRICULTURE

Georgia's main crop is tea. More tea is produced in Georgia than anywhere else in the Soviet Union. The Republic also grows almost all the Soviet Union's tangerines and lemons and is renowned for its grapes, wines, tobaccos, essential oils and mineral waters. In areas where crops are grown, particularly near industrial centres and on the Georgian highlands, stock is raised for meat, milk and wool.

In 1972 there were 575,000 persons engaged in agriculture on 1,184 collective farms and 265 state farms.

THE KAZAKH SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Kazakh Republic was formed as an Autonomous Republic within the Russian Federation on August 26th, 1920, and reconstituted as a Union Republic on December 5th, 1936. It has an area of 2,717,300 sq. km. and a population of 13,695,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these 32.6 per cent are Kazakhs, 43.2 per cent Russians, 7.2 per cent Ukrainians and 2.2 per cent Tatars (1970 census). The population density is 4.9 persons per square kilometre. Alma Ata, the capital, has a population of 794,000. In size the Kazakh Republic (Kazakhstan) is second only to the Russian Federation. It extends from the Volga to the Altai Mountains and from the Siberian plains to the Central Asian deserts. Kazakhstan has a frontier with the People's Republic of China to the south-east.

The number of towns and industrial communities in Kazakhstan has increased greatly in recent years. The Kazakh settlement of Baikonur, in the heart of the Steppes, is world famous as the launching place of the Soviet spaceships.

AGRICULTURE

Agriculture in Kazakhstan is varied and intensive. It is one of the greatest regions of the U.S.S.R. for the production of grain and other agricultural crops. The 1972 grain harvest, which was poor in other regions of the U.S.S.R. was not seriously affected in Kazakhstan.

Besides sheep and horses, cows, camels, goats, pigs and poultry are raised. Kazakhstan produces 22.3 per cent of Soviet wool, 18.2 per cent of grain, 6.8 per cent of meat and 4.8 per cent of milk.

In 1972 there were 1,272,000 persons engaged in agriculture on 441 collective farms and 1,654 state farms.

THE KIRGHIZ SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

Kirghizia was made an Autonomous Republic on February 1st, 1926, and attained the status of a Union Republic on December 5th, 1936. It has an area of 198,500 sq. km. and a population of 3,145,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these 43.8 per cent are Kirghiz, 29.2 per cent Russians, 10.6 per cent Uzbeks, 4.1 per cent Ukrainians and 2.4 per cent Tatars (1970 census). Frunze, the capital, has a population of 463,000 (1973). The Kirghiz Republic is situated at the junction of two gigantic mountain systems, the Tien-shan and the Pamirs, and is noted for its severe natural beauty and amazing range of climate. In the south-east there is a frontier with the People's Republic of China.

AGRICULTURE

The Kirghiz were formerly wandering herdsmen. They have now settled on the land, taken up agriculture and built up their own industry. Kirghizia produces wheat, cotton, tobacco, southern hemp, kenaf, essential oil plants and poppy. Grape- and fruit-growing and silkworm breeding also have an important place in the economy.

Livestock raising is the main branch of agriculture. The wealth of the Republic is made up of its herds of cattle, flocks of fine-fleece sheep and droves of horses.

In 1972 there were 340,000 people engaged in agriculture on 234 collective farms and 110 state farms.

THE LATVIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

Latvia became part of the Soviet Union on August 5th, 1940, the Republic having been constituted on July 21st of that year. It has an area of 63,700 sq. km. and a population of 2,430,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these, 56.8 per cent are Letts, 29.8 per cent Russians, 4 per cent Byelorussians, 2.7 per cent Poles and 2.3 per cent Ukrainians (census 1970).

Riga, the capital, has a population of 765,000 (1973). The Latvian Republic is situated in the north-west of the Soviet Union, between Lithuania and Estonia on the Baltic coast. It is bounded on the east by the R.S.F.S.R. and on the south-east by Byelorussia.

AGRICULTURE

Latvia is a maritime country and fishing plays a big part in its economy. The Letts now catch fish not only in the Baltic but also in the Atlantic near the coasts of Canada and Africa. There has been a considerable increase in the amount of fish caught and in the output of tinned fish (herring and sprat). The raising of livestock is also important and this is the reason for the growing number of food factories, creameries and cheese factories. In many districts there are collective farms which raise poultry and keep bees. The Republic also has silver fox and mink farms.

In 1971 there were 246,000 people engaged in agriculture on 597 collective farms and 234 state farms.

THE MOLDAVIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Moldavian S.S.R. was formed as an autonomous Republic on October 12th, 1924, and joined the U.S.S.R. on August 2nd, 1940. It has an area of 33,700 sq. km. and a population of 3,722,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these, 64.6 per cent are Moldavians, 14.2 per cent Ukrainians, 11.6 per cent Russians, 3.5 per cent Gagauzi, 2.7 per cent Jews and 2.1 per cent Bulgarians (census 1970). Kishinev, the capital, has a population of 415,000 (1973). Moldavia is situated in the south-west of the Soviet Union, with Romania to the west.

POPULATION

BIRTHS AND DEATHS

	BIRTH RATE (per '000)	DEATH RATE (per '000)
1960 . . . . .	29.2	6.4
1969 . . . . .	18.9	7.4
1971 . . . . .	14.7	11.0

AGRICULTURE

Moldavia contributes a quarter of the grape crop in the Soviet Union, half of the rose oil, and holds second place in tobacco production, after the Ukraine. In addition to grapes and fruit, the Republic raises high-grade winter wheat, maize (which is the main grain crop), sunflower (the biggest industrial crop) and also hemp, soya beans and essential-oil plants. The growth of production of fruit, grapes, vegetables and sugar beet has led to greater development in the food industries. Thus, Moldavia is one of the country's biggest producers of grape wines and also makes vast quantities of canned foods.

In 1972 there were 735,000 people engaged in agriculture on 487 collective farms and 213 state farms.

THE TURKMEN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Turkmen Republic was formed on October 27th, 1924. Turkmenia, the southernmost republic in the Soviet Union, is situated in the south-west of Central Asia. It is bounded on the north by Kazakh S.S.R., on the north-east by the Uzbek S.S.R., on the south by Iran, and the south-east by Afghanistan. To the west lies the Caspian Sea. The Republic has an area of 488,100 sq. km. and a population of 2,360,000 (as of January 1st, 1973). Of these, 65.6 per cent are Turkmen, 14.5 per cent Russian, 8.3 per cent Uzbeks and 3.2 per cent Kazakhs (1970 census).

The Kara-Kum, one of the largest Central Asian deserts, occupies more than four-fifths of the territory and irrigation is therefore of prime importance to this desolate land. The capital, Ashkhabad, has a population of 272,000 (1973). The most densely populated districts are the valleys of the rivers Amu-Darya and Murgab and the foothills of Kopet-Dag, and the oases of Khorezm, Tedzen, Atrek and Ashkhabad, where there are up to 300 inhabitants per sq. km. It is extremely sparse in the vast desert lands. However, the discovery of rich mineral deposits has caused many settlements to develop even in the most arid districts.

AGRICULTURE

Agricultural areas occupy almost half of the territory. The fourth section of the Great Kara-Kum Canal is due to be completed in 1975. The first stage is 850 km. long and stretches from the Amu-Darya river to Geok-Tepe. It supplies water for Ashkhabad and has already provided irrigation for more than 160,000 hectares of desert land; it is also used for shipping. Thanks to its special climatic conditions, Turkmenia is able to grow large quantities of long-staple cotton. Sowing and cultivating operations are fully mechanized. Sheep-breeding is also important.

In 1972 there were 288,000 people engaged in agriculture on 331 collective farms and 53 state farms.

INDUSTRY AND MINING

Oil is the basic source of wealth of Turkmenia. It also has gas, chemical and other industries based on locally available raw materials. Mirabilite is being extracted in the Kara-Bogaz-Gol Bay on the Caspian and deposits of sulphur are worked in the heart of the Kara-Kum Desert. The Turkmen Republic is the country's biggest supplier of ozocerite. The textile, silk-spinning and food industries are rapidly expanding. Machine-building is the newest branch of heavy industry. Output includes electrical engineering equipment, bulldozers and ventilators.

THE UKRAINIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Ukrainian Republic, formed on December 25th, 1917, and a member of the U.S.S.R. from December 30th, 1922, has an area of 603,700 sq. km. and a population of 48,200,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these, 74.9 per cent are Ukrainians, 19.4 per cent Russians, 0.8 per cent Byelorussians, 0.6 per cent Moldavians and 0.6 per cent Poles (census 1970). The capital, Kiev, has a population of 1,827,000 (1973). The Ukraine has frontiers with Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania, and stretches as far as the Black Sea coast.

The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic is a member of the United Nations in its own right.

1971 . . . . .	15.4	8.9

AGRICULTURE

The Ukraine is the second most productive agricultural area of the Soviet Union as the warm climate and black earth give high yields of diverse crops—wheat, sugar beet, maize and sunflower. About a quarter of the industrial crops and more than a quarter of the meat and milk in the Soviet Union is produced in the Ukraine.

In 1972 there were 6,028,000 people engaged in agriculture on 8,812 collective farms and 1,620 state farms.

THE UZBEK SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Uzbek Republic was formed on October 27th, 1924. It has an area of 447,400 sq. km. and a population of 12,896,000 (January 1st, 1973). Of these, 65.5 per cent are Uzbeks, 12.5 per cent Russians, 4.9 per cent Tatars, 4.0 per cent Kazakhs, 3.8 per cent Tadzhiks and 2.0 per cent Kara-Kalpaks (census 1970). Tashkent, the capital, has a population of 1,504,000 (1973). The Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic of Kara-Kalpakiya (capital Nukus) is part of the Uzbek Republic. Uzbekistan is situated in the south-eastern part of the Soviet Union, in the heart of Central Asia, and has a short frontier with Afghanistan in the south. Turkmenia lies to the south-west, Kazakhstan to the north, Kirghizia to the east and Tadzhikistan to the south.

AGRICULTURE

Cotton holds the leading place in agriculture with two-thirds of all land under cotton. Sugar beet and groundnuts are grown under irrigation while the main grain crops are rice, wheat and maize.

In 1972 there were 1,440,000 persons engaged in agriculture on 1,037 collective farms and 412 state farms.

THE UNITED KINGDOM

GREAT BRITAIN

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Great Britain is the largest of the islands forming the United Kingdom. It comprises England, Scotland to the north and Wales to the west. It is separated from the coast of western Europe by the English Channel to the south and by the North Sea to the east. The northern and western shores are washed by the Atlantic Ocean. Ireland lies to the west across the Irish Sea. Climate is temperate and variable. The language is English, but Welsh is spoken fairly extensively in Wales. The Church of England is the established church in England. Other large Christian denominations are Roman Catholicism, Methodism, Presbyterianism, Congregationalism and the Baptists. The national flag (proportions 2 by 1), known as the Union Jack, is a superimposition of the red cross of Saint George of England, the white saltire of Saint Andrew of Scotland and the red saltire of Ireland, all on a blue background. The capital is London.

Recent History

The United Kingdom retains several colonial territories throughout the world but since 1947 independence has been granted to most of the large former possessions overseas, the majority of which are now members of the Commonwealth.

A Labour government, under Harold Wilson, came to office in 1964 and, in response to a poor balance of payments situation, instituted a programme of credit restrictions and cutbacks on spending, particularly on defence. The pound was devalued by 14.3 per cent in 1967.

A Conservative government, under Edward Heath, was returned in the General Election of June 1970. This administration concentrated on curbing inflation.

During the Conservative Government's rule the central administration was modified, most parliamentary constituency boundaries were redefined, and measures providing for the establishment of six new Metropolitan Counties and adjustments to county boundaries were introduced, taking effect in England and Wales in April 1974 and in Scotland in May 1975.

The United Kingdom became a full member of the European Economic Community on January 1st, 1973, when she left the European Free Trade Association. In the election campaigns of 1974, Labour undertook to renegotiate British terms of entry and to hold a referendum on continuing membership.

Direct rule from London was introduced in Northern Ireland in March 1972. At the end of 1973 direct rule was replaced by government under an Executive of 15 members from the three main parties in Northern Ireland. This Executive collapsed in May 1974 after a general strike called by Protestant trade unionists opposed to power-sharing (see Northern Ireland, page 1406). During 1974 the Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorist campaign was extended to Great Britain with increased intensity leading to the introduction in November of anti-terrorist measures and the outlawing of the IRA.

In a general election in February 1974, called by Mr. Heath in order to gain a firm mandate to carry out measures to contain inflation, a minority Labour government under Harold Wilson was returned. A second election in October gave Labour a small majority.

Government

The United Kingdom is a constitutional monarchy. The Sovereign is Head of the State and the monarchy is hereditary. The Sovereign summons and dissolves Parliament and gives the Royal Assent to bills which have passed through both Houses of Parliament. Her formal consent is necessary before a treaty is signed, a cabinet formed or war declared. Parliament consists of the House of Commons and the House of Lords. The Commons are elected for a five-year term through direct suffrage by all citizens of 18 years and over. The House of Lords is composed of hereditary Peers of the Realm and Life Peers and Peeresses created by the Sovereign for outstanding public service. Legislation may be initiated in either House but it usually originates in the Commons. Each bill has three readings in the Commons and it is then passed to the House of Lords who may return it to the Commons with amendments or suggestions. The House of Lords cannot prevent any bill from becoming law once it has been passed by the Commons. Executive power is vested in the Cabinet headed by the Prime Minister who is appointed by the Sovereign.

Defence

Britain is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and maintains a regular army. The total strength of the armed forces at October 1st, 1974, including women's services, was 347,235 (army 172,319, navy 77,887, air force 97,029). There is no compulsory military service. Britain possesses a nuclear deterrent. Defence expenditure totalled £3,420 million in 1973/74.

Economic Affairs

Britain is one of the world's leading industrial and exporting countries. In 1973 about 31 per cent of the United Kingdom's Gross Domestic Product came from manufacturing. Among the principal industries are those producing iron and steel, engineering, chemicals, electronics, motor vehicles, aircraft, textiles, clothes and other consumer goods. The coal, gas, electricity and atomic energy industries are nationalized as are the railways and the largest civil aviation group.

Oil was first discovered under the bed of the North Sea in 1970 and it is hoped that production will be some 200 million tons per annum by the early 1980s. Foreign investment amounts to some 70 per cent but the National Coal Board and the British Gas Corporation are also large shareholders.

Although Britain's agriculture and trawler-fishing are highly mechanized, half of the country's food supplies and most of its raw materials are imported. Britain maintains a large passenger, cargo and oil tanker merchant fleet. At June 30th, 1973, Britain's merchant shipping fleet totalled just over 30 million gross tons and accounted for more than 10 per cent of world trade.

The cost of joining the EEC in January 1973 presented economic difficulties and the pound, which had been "floating" since June 1972, was allowed to continue to float after Britain's accession to the Community. Trade with EEC countries other than Belgium and Ireland was disappointing and, coupled with the downward float of sterling, a general increase in world prices, and, at the end of the year, the power crisis resulting from both domestic and foreign causes, a marked deterioration in trade figures became inevitable. A visible trade deficit of £2,375 million for 1973 was the ultimate result. Retail prices increased by 12 per cent over the same period.

In December 1973 the Government announced cuts of £1,200 million in planned public expenditure over the coming two years. Despite these difficulties, economic growth in 1973 was more than 5 per cent, the highest figure for several years. The balance of payments, however, continued to cause concern. There was a surplus on current account of £114 million in 1972, rising to £1,200 million in 1973 and £3,730 million in 1974.

During 1974 the economic situation worsened considerably: the record trade deficit of 1973 was more than doubled to £5,190 million; inflation reached a record rate with retail prices rising by 19.1 per cent; the index of industrial share prices, generally regarded as an indicator of confidence, dropped to its lowest level for 20 years, G.D.P fell by 1 per cent and in January 1975 the pound was at its lowest ever level on the foreign exchange market.

During 1974 earnings rose by an average of 29.1 per cent; statutory wage controls were abandoned and voluntary wage restraint urged as an alternative.

Transport and Communications

In 1973 the state-owned British railways, including the London Underground, covered 11,643 route miles, and carried 1,388 million passengers and 196 million tons of freight. London Transport forms the world's largest transport undertaking, and in 1972 its buses carried 1,413 million passengers while its Underground, the oldest and most extensive in the world, operates over 238 route miles and carries over two million passengers daily. Total road mileage in Great Britain was 212,124 miles in 1973 including 1,090 miles of motorways. In 1973, road transport accounted for 65 per cent of freight movement and 92 per cent of passenger travel. Navigable inland waterways extend for 2,500 miles. There are over 300 ports of which London, Liverpool, Southampton, Middlesbrough, Dover and Immingham are the busiest. An extensive passenger ship service is provided by British Rail as well as by private concerns. London is linked to most large cities by a dense internal air network of 21 main commercial airports, of which Heathrow is by far the busiest. Plans and preliminary work for a Channel tunnel were abandoned in January 1975.

Social Welfare

The National Insurance Scheme was started in 1948 and is run by the Department of Health and Social Security, through 607 local offices. The scheme is compulsory for most people over school-leaving age and under minimum pension age. Employers and employees make earnings-related contributions. The scheme insures against loss of income due to sickness, unemployment and maternity and provides retirement pensions and widows' benefits, maternity benefits, child allowances, death and industrial injury benefits.

There are also family allowances of £1.50 per week for all but first-born children and supplementary benefits for people whose income falls below a certain level. The family income supplement is payable to families with at least one child, where the head of the family is in full-time employment and where the family income is below a certain level: £25 for a one-child family, plus £3 for each additional child.

The National Health Service is a comprehensive health service, not based on an insurance scheme, which everyone ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom may use. Apart from charges (from which there are certain exemptions) for such things as prescriptions, dental treatment and spectacles, the service is free. Most of the cost of the service is met from taxation, the remainder being made up by a small weekly contribution from employees and employers. In 1973 the gross cost of health and personal social services in Great Britain was 3,109 million.

Education

Education is compulsory from the age of 5 to 16.

Secondary education generally starts at the age of 11 and, in the public maintained state system, is given in grammar schools, secondary modern schools, comprehensive schools and some middle schools. A few Sixth Form Colleges take pupils (usually at 16) for two years. In recent years there has been a move to replace grammar and secondary modern schools by comprehensive schools, which are able to accommodate a larger number of pupils, and provide a wider variety of vocationally or academically biased courses to suit the individual ability. Changes of this kind are, however, left to each local education authority to decide and implement as they think fit, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State. Alongside the state system there are fee-paying schools including "public schools", many of which are boarding schools and most of which award a number of scholarships to suitable pupils; direct grant schools, where up to half the pupils have their fees paid by the local authority; numerous private schools, some of which are independent and some run by charitable trusts or churches. The General Certificate of Education (G.C.E.) Ordinary Level may be taken (usually at the age of 16) in as many subjects as a candidate wishes. The G.C.E. Advanced Level, generally taken two years later, qualifies for entrance to higher education. The Certificate of Secondary Education (C.S.E.) is taken by pupils completing five years of secondary education but who are not up to G.C.E. standard.

Further Education: There are about 600 institutions providing vocational and academic courses, on a full-time, part-time and sandwich basis. Teacher training colleges (known as Colleges of Education) provide three-year courses for non-graduates, and many provide a one-year postgraduate teaching course.

University Education: Although five G.C.E. passes including two at Advanced Level are normally the minimum requirement for university entrance, the decision to admit students is made by a university according to its own requirements. The first degree course normally lasts three years and leads to a Bachelor of Arts or Sciences (B.A. or B.Sc.) degree. There are 45 universities, including an Open University which provides degree courses by means of television, radio, correspondence and summer schools.

Responsibility for providing education other than in universities rests with the local education authorities. The Department of Education and Science only sets standards of educational provision, controls the cost of educational building, and the training and supply of teachers. Government finance to the universities is administered through the Universities Grants Committee.

Public expenditure on United Kingdom education was £4,582 million in 1973/74, equivalent to 7.2 per cent of the Gross National Product.

Tourism

Tourism plays a significant part in the economy. In 1973, 7,724,000 visits were made by foreign residents to Britain (8 per cent more than in 1972) and between January and August 1974, one per cent more foreign nationals visited Britain than in the corresponding period in 1973. Receipts from international tourism totalled £874 million in 1973, including £192 million in fares paid to British carriers. In the first three-quarters of 1974 receipts from international tourism totalled £624 million (excluding international fare payments), 19 per cent more than in the first three-quarters of 1973. The chief attractions are the country's history and traditions and the beauty of the countryside.

In 1969 the British Tourist Authority was established as a statutory organization with particular responsibilities for attracting tourists from overseas. In addition, English, Scottish and Wales Tourist Boards were set up to encourage tourist development in and the growth of visitors to their areas.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: all countries in Central and South America (except Cuba), all members of the EEC, all countries of the Commonwealth, Algeria, Andorra, Austria, Finland, Greece, Iceland, Iran, Israel, the Ivory Coast, Japan, the Republic of Korea, Kuwait, Liechtenstein, Maldives, Monaco, Morocco, Norway, Portugal, San Marino, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey, the U.S.A. and Yugoslavia.

Sport

Many kinds of sport are popular in Britain. Football (Association and Rugby) is played everywhere. Cricket is regarded as England's national game, and it is played much less in Scotland and Wales. Other popular recreations are golf, tennis, athletics, fishing, boating, swimming, horse racing and motor racing. A Sports Council was formed early in 1965 to advise the government on training and facilities for sport.

Public Holidays

1975: May 5th†, May 26th* (Spring Holiday), August 4th†, August 25th* (Late Summer Holiday), December 25th (Christmas), December 26th* (Boxing Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 2nd†, April 16th (Good Friday), April 19th (Easter Monday).

* Excluding Scotland.

† Scotland only. Dates of Spring and late Summer holidays vary throughout Scotland.

Weights and Measures

The imperial system of weights and measures is in force; conversion to the metric system is planned.

Weight:

1 pound (lb.) = 16 ounces (oz.) = 453.59 grammes
 14 pounds = 1 stone = 6.35 kilogrammes
 112 pounds = 1 hundredweight (cwt.) = 50.8 kilogrammes
 20 hundredweights = 1 ton = 1,016 kilogrammes.

Length:

1 yard (yd.) = 3 feet (ft.) = 36 inches (in.) = 0.9144 metre
 1,760 yards = 1 mile = 1.609 kilometres.

Capacity:

1 gallon = 4 quarts = 8 pints = 4.546 litres.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 new pence = 1 pound sterling (£).

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 = U.S. $2.3355;
 U.S. $1 = 42.82 pence.

* Figures relate to the whole United Kingdom (including Northern Ireland) plus the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands. Because of differences in coverage, and the omission of an adjustment to cover under-recording of exports, the totals shown here are not the same as those given in the Balance of Payments table which appears earlier in this chapter. Both imports and exports exclude trade in gold and military stores carried on government vessels. Figures for imports exclude fissionable materials.

† Including re-exports but excluding any allowance for under-recording of exports.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE United Kingdom is a Constitutional Monarchy. In the ninth century, when England was first united under a Saxon King, the Monarchy was the only central power and the Constitution did not exist. To-day, the Sovereign acts on the advice of her Ministers which she cannot, constitutionally, ignore; power, which has been at various times and in varying degrees in the hands of kings, feudal barons, ministers, councils and parliaments, or of particular groups or sections of society, is vested in the people as a whole; and the Sovereign is an essential part of the machinery of government which has gradually been devised to give expression to the popular will.

Both the powers of the Government and the functions of the Sovereign are determined by the Constitution, by the body of fundamental principles on which the State is governed and the methods, institutions and procedures which give them effect. But the United Kingdom has no written Constitution. There is no document, no one law or statute, to which reference can be made. The Constitution is organic; it is an accumulation of convention, precedent and tradition which, although continually changing as the times change, is at any one moment binding and exact.

Some of the principles and many of the practices are secured by Statute, some are avowed by Declaration or Manifesto and many are incorporated in the Common Law; the Reform Bill of 1832 dramatically broadened the basis of representative government and prepared the way for further changes; the Bill of Rights of 1689 ended the long era of rivalry between Crown and Parliament and began the story of their co-operation; and Magna Carta, in 1215, began the process by which the law of the land acquired a status of its own, independent of King and Parliament and, as Professor G. M. Trevelyan has put it, "gave expression to the spirit of individual liberty as it has ever since been understood in England." But the Constitution is above all based on usage. It has been, and will continue to be, moulded and modified to match changing customs and to meet successive situations. Any one Parliament could, if it chose, revise or repeal every law and disown every convention that has constitutional significance. It could destroy the whole fabric of political and social existence, including its own; because, according to the Constitution, Parliament, which represents the people, is supreme. The work of one Parliament is not binding on its successors, except in so far as changes must be made by constitutional means. Parliament cannot disobey the law, but it can change it.

This evolutionary Constitution has come into being only because the United Kingdom emerged and consolidated over long years when change was slow; and because she escaped any violent revolution. New countries, which grow up in the conditions of the twentieth century, when education, science and outside influences can change the face of political life inside a generation, and older countries which have suffered violence, have little time to allow constitutions to evolve. It is perhaps paradoxical that the United Kingdom, who has no written constitution herself, should provide a model for so many new constitutions in such various lands. In some respects the modern constitution makers have the best of several worlds: they can apply their own skill and judgment, unhindered by preceding legislation; and they can draw on the experience of a long past and see its results.

It would be impossible to enumerate the principles which are extant in the British Constitution. It would also be misleading, because declarations of general principles are quite out of character. In constitutional as in legal practice, the way has been to admit the general principle in quite practical terms related to specific practical problems: the Habeas Corpus Act, which establishes the principle of no imprisonment without trial, makes no mention of the principle itself but lays down in most concrete terms the punishments that shall be inflicted on a judge, or other law officer, if he fails to issue the Writ (commanding the prisoner to be brought before the court) when applied for. The principles of the Constitution and constitutional practice are in fact inherent in the Common Law on the one hand and in the structure, functions and procedures of the various instruments of government on the other: of the Crown, of Parliament, of the Privy Council, of the Government and the Cabinet and of the Government Departments.

THE SOVEREIGN

The Queen's title in the United Kingdom is "Elizabeth II, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of Her other Realms and Territories Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith". The title varies slightly for different parts of the Commonwealth. Outside the United Kingdom there are 32 full members of the Commonwealth. Of this total, 21 have their own Head of State. In each of the other eleven the Queen is represented by a Governor-General whom she appoints on the advice of the Ministers of that country. He may be a national of that country, or of any other Commonwealth country, and he fulfils the same constitutional position, according to the constitution, laws and customs of the country in which he serves, as the Queen fills in the United Kingdom. If the Queen visits a Commonwealth country she can of course take over the functions of the Governor-General.

The monarchy is hereditary, descending to the sons of the Sovereign in order of seniority or, if there are no sons, to the daughters.

Her constitutional position as head of the state, quite apart from her position as Head of the Commonwealth, demands of the Queen that she keep herself informed on all aspects of the life of her subjects, that she maintain absolute impartiality and that she should personally visit the different parts of her realm as often as it is possible for her to do so, but she has also quite specific functions, all exercised on ministerial advice: she summons, prorogues and dissolves Parliament; she must give Royal Assent to a Bill which has passed through both Houses of Parliament, before it becomes law; she is head of the judiciary (although the judiciary is now quite independent of the executive); she appoints all important state officials, including judges, officers of the forces and representatives abroad, and she confers honours and awards. Her formal consent is necessary before a Minister can take up office or a Cabinet be formed; and before a Treaty may be concluded, war declared or peace made. These are some of the more essential functions. But the Queen has also endless residuary responsibilities, such as the guardianship of infants and persons of unsound mind, the creation of corporations, granting of printing rights for the Bible and Prayer Book and for state documents; and her signature and consent are necessary to many important state papers. Constitutional government cannot in fact be carried on without her, so much so that provision has been made by Act of Parliament for the appointment of a Regent should the Sovereign be incapacitated or under age and for Counsellors of State to act in the temporary absence of the Queen.

PARLIAMENT

The Queen in Parliament—the House of Commons and the House of Lords—is the supreme legislative authority in the United Kingdom. Under the Parliament Act of 1911 the maximum life of one Parliament was fixed at five years; if, that is, Parliament has not meanwhile been dissolved for any other reason, such as the fall of the government in power, then a general election is at the end of five years necessary by law. During its lifetime, the power of Parliament is theoretically absolute; it can make or unmake any law. In practice, of course, it must take account of the electorate. Parliament is prorogued at intervals during its life, which therefore consists of a number of sessions; by present custom, a session has normally 160 sitting days and is divided into five periods: from November (when the session is opened) until Christmas (about 30 days), from January till Easter (50), from Easter till Whitsun (30), from Whitsun until the end of July (40) and 10 days in October.

The House of Commons. The House of Commons has 635 members, each elected for one geographical constituency. The Speaker, who is elected by the members immediately a new parliament meets, presides. Members of Parliament may be elected either at a general election or at a by-election (held in the event of the death, resignation or expulsion of the sitting member) and in either case hold their seats during the life of the existing parliament. All British subjects over 18 (and subjects of any Commonwealth country and of the Irish Republic who are resident in the United Kingdom) have the vote unless legally barred (e.g. for insanity). Anyone who has the vote may stand as a candidate for election except clergymen of the Church of England, the established Churches of Scotland and Northern Ireland and the Roman Catholic Church, and certain officers of the Crown; Civil Servants must resign from the Service if they wish to stand as a Member of Parliament.

The House of Lords. There are about 900 peers who have the right to a seat in the House of Lords, including Princes of the Royal Blood (who, by tradition, take no part in the proceedings); hereditary peers of England and of the United Kingdom (peerages created since the Act of Union of England and Scotland of 1707 are all peerages of the United Kingdom); several Lords of Appeal in Ordinary (appointed for life to carry out the judicial duties of the House); Scottish peers; created life peers and life peeresses; and the two archbishops and the twenty-four senior bishops of the Church of England. All except the spiritual, judicial and life peerages are hereditary. The Lord Chancellor is the Speaker of the House. The 1963 Peerage Act made three main amendments to the Constitution: (1) An hereditary peerage may be disclaimed by the holder for the duration of his lifetime. The peerage can be reclaimed at his death by his heir, but he himself cannot reclaim it. (2) All Scottish peers, instead of only sixteen representatives, and (3) peeresses in their own right, may take their seat in the House of Lords.

The Party System. Members of Parliament whose views coincide form groups which agree in each case to support the policies put forward by their chosen leaders, and to present a common front on all important issues both in Parliament and to the electorate. This system evolved during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and is now essential to the working of the British Constitution.

Under the party system, the Queen sends for the leader of the party which wins the majority of seats (although not necessarily of votes) at a general election and asks him to form a Government. The party which wins the second largest number of seats forms the Opposition, which has quite specific functions. Members of other minority parties and independents may support the Government or Opposition as they choose. Each party has its own Whips, officials whose duty it is to arrange, in consultation with the Whips of other parties, matters of procedure and organization, to see to it that Members attend debates and to muster for their party its maximum voting strength, and each has its own national and local organizations outside Parliament.

Parliamentary Procedure. Parliamentary procedure, like the Constitution itself, is determined by rules, customs forms and practices which have accumulated over many centuries. The Speaker is responsible for their application, and generally for controlling the course of business and debates in the house.

It is the duty of Parliament to make the laws which govern the life of the community, to appropriate the necessary funds for the various services of state and to criticise and control the Government. Parliament is also consulted before the ratification of certain international treaties and agreements.

Legislation may with some exceptions be initiated in either House and on either side of the House. In practice most Public Bills are introduced into the House of Commons by the Government in power (the chief exceptions are Private Members' Bills) as the result of Cabinet decisions. Each Bill which is passed by the Commons at its third reading is sent to the House of Lords, who either accept it or return it to the Commons with suggested amendments. The Lords cannot in any instance prevent Bills passed by the Commons from becoming law: over Money Bills or Bills affecting the duration of Parliament they have no power at all, and by the Parliament Act of 1949 any other Bill passed by the Commons in two successive sessions may be presented for Royal Assent without the consent of the Lords provided one year has elapsed between the date of the second reading in the Commons and the date of its final passing. In practice, the House of Lords is extremely unlikely to push things thus far, and its main function is to scrutinise the work of the Commons, to caution and suggest. Bills of a non-controversial kind are sometimes introduced initially in the House of Lords.

THE PRIVY COUNCIL

The power of the Privy Council has declined with the development of the Cabinet and its main function to-day is to give effect to decisions made elsewhere. There are at present over 300 Privy Counsellors, including Cabinet Ministers (who are automatically created Privy Counsellors), and people who have reached eminence in some branch of public affairs. Meetings are presided over by the Queen, and the responsible Minister is the Lord President of the Council, an office which since 1600 has always been held by a member of the party in power, who is usually also a leading member of the Cabinet. The Privy Council is responsible for making Orders in Council, of which there are two kinds, those made in virtue of the Royal prerogative, e.g. the ratification of treaties, and those which are authorised by Act of Parliament and are in fact a form of delegated legislation. It has also various advisory functions which cover such subjects as scientific, industrial, medical and agricultural research. An important organ of the Privy Council is the Judicial Committee

HER MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

The Government is headed by the Prime Minister, who is also the leader of the Party which holds the majority in the House of Commons. It includes Ministers who are in charge of Government departments and those who hold traditional offices which involve no special departmental duties; the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Lord Chancellor, who are specially responsible for financial and economic, and legal affairs respectively, the law officers of the Crown (the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, the Lord Advocate for Scotland and the Solicitor-General for Scotland), the Ministers of State, who are usually appointed to assist Ministers in charge of departments, and Parliamentary Secretaries and Under-Secretaries.

The Cabinet. The Cabinet system developed during the eighteenth century from the informal meetings of Privy Counsellors who were also Ministers and who formed a committee of manageable size which, it was gradually realised, could take decisions far more quickly and simply than larger bodies. The cabinet to-day has between 15-25 members at the discretion of the Prime Minister—its main duty is to formulate policy for submission to Parliament.

Ministerial responsibility. The doctrine of ministerial responsibility has also evolved gradually but was generally accepted by the middle of the last century. Each Minister must take full responsibility for the work of his own department, particularly in Parliament; if his department fails over any important matter, he will be expected to resign. Ministers also assume collective responsibility for the work of the Government and for any advice which it may offer to the Crown.

POLITICAL PARTIES

THE CONSERVATIVE AND UNIONIST PARTY

Leader: The Rt. Hon. MARGARET THATCHER, P.C., M.P.

The aims of the Conservative Party are to uphold religion, preserve the Constitution, and to strengthen the free association of the Commonwealth; to maintain, in collaboration with other like minded nations, defence forces adequate for the preservation of freedom and prevention of war; to work for peace by international disarmament; to provide financial and technical aid to raise the conditions of under-developed territories; to provide freedom and opportunity by supporting free enterprise and initiative against Socialist systems of state-trading and nationalization; to improve the standards of life by economic policies which preserve full employment, promote expanding trade and production, maintain national solvency, and encourage thrift and an ever wider spread of ownership of property; to promote greater educational opportunities at all levels; to ensure that the old share in rising living standards; to promote better health by good housing and slum clearance, and a modern hospital system.

HEADQUARTERS

The Conservative and Unionist Central Office: 32 Smith Square, London, SW1P 3HH; f. 1870; Chair. Lord THORNEYCROFT, Deputy Chair. Lord FRASER of Kilmorack, C.B.E., ANGUS MAUDE, M.P.

THE LABOUR PARTY

Leader: The Rt. Hon. HAROLD WILSON, P.C., O.B.E., M.P.

The British Labour Party is a democratic socialist party. Its central ideal is the brotherhood of man. Its purpose is to make this ideal a reality everywhere. It rejects discrimination on grounds of race, colour or creed, stands for the right of all peoples to freedom, independence and self-government, pledges itself to support the United Nations Charter and to work for world disarmament. It affirms the duty of richer nations to assist poorer ones, stands for social justice and the creation of a socialist community with a classless society and planned economy. It stands for democracy in industry and the expansion of common ownership, the protection of all citizens from any exercise of arbitrary power. It seeks to obtain and hold power only through free democratic institutions.

Relations with the Trades Union Congress and the Co-operative movement are maintained through the National Council of Labour, representing the T.U.C. General Council, the National Executive of the Labour Party, the Parliamentary Labour Party and the Co-operative Union.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

There are three sources of the law as administered in the law courts today: Statute Law, which is written law and consists mainly of Acts of Parliament, Common Law, which originated in ancient usage and has not been formally enacted, and Equity.

Scottish common and statute law differ in some respects from that current in the rest of the United Kingdom, owing to Scotland's retention of her own legal system under the Act of Union with England of 1707.

One of the most cherished liberties of the ordinary British citizen is his freedom from arbitrary arrest and his knowledge that the law regards him as innocent unless he can be proved guilty. Arbitrary arrest and imprisonment were abolished when the famous Habeas Corpus Act was passed in 1679; under this Act in its present-day form anyone having custody of a person can be ordered to bring him before the court within forty-eight hours and to prove that he is being lawfully held in custody.

Two factors help to ensure a fair trial: the independence of judges, who are outside the control of the executive and can be removed from office only after an address from Parliament to her Majesty; and the participation of private citizens in all important criminal and some civil cases, in the form of a summoned jury of twelve persons, who judge the facts of a case. The judge decides the law. The jury verdict in both criminal and civil cases has since October 1967 been a majority verdict system.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS or PETTY SESSIONS

The criminal courts of lowest jurisdiction, are presided over by Justices of the Peace, who are unpaid laymen appointed by the Lord Chancellor. They have power to try all non-indictable offences, and some of the less serious indictable offences, if the accused so desires. The trial of nearly all criminal offences begins in the Magistrates' Court. The vast majority of committals for trial are carried out under the Criminal Justice Act of 1967, which does not require the magistrate to consider the evidence. There are only a few cases in which full committals of the pre-Justice Act era are now necessary.

In London and in certain other large towns there are professional salaried magistrates, known as metropolitan stipendiary magistrates in London and as stipendiary magistrates in the provinces, who sit alone, whereas lay justices cannot when acting judicially.

Juvenile Courts, composed of specially qualified justices selected by the justices of each petty sessional division (in London, by the Lord Chancellor), have power to try most charges against children under seventeen. The general public is excluded and there are restrictions on newspaper reports of the proceedings.

Magistrates also have power to grant, renew, transfer or remove or order the forfeiture of licences for the sale of intoxicating drinks, and to control the structural design of licensed premises where intoxicating liquor is sold for consumption on the premises.

COUNTY COURTS

A high proportion of civil actions are tried in these courts, which are presided over by a paid judge, sitting alone. Subjects coming under the jurisdiction of County Courts include rent restrictions, certain cases under the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1954, and all civil cases where the sum in dispute is not more than £1,000. The jurisdiction may be increased by the consent of the parties and in certain other special cases. Some County Courts also have jurisdiction in divorce matters, and undefended divorce cases are heard by a Judge in these Courts.

CROWN COURTS

Crown Courts came into force on January 1st, 1972, under the Courts Act 1971 and replace Quarter Sessions and Assizes, abolished by the Act. They sit at various centres throughout the country but, at the Lord Chancellor's direction, they may sit anywhere. The country has been divided into six administrative circuits, each including all three tiers of the Crown Courts. Crimes calling for the severest penalties, such as life imprisonment, are tried in the first tier Crown Courts which, outside London, also deal with civil cases. The Crown Court for the City of London is the Central Criminal Court (Old Bailey). High Court Judges or Circuit Judges preside over the first and second tier courts, Circuit Judges or Recorders over the third, where less serious offences are heard.

Appeals from the Crown Court in respect of criminal matters go to the Criminal Division of the Court of Appeal and in civil matters to the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

Certain civil cases are heard in the three divisions of this court—Chancery, Queen's Bench and Family. The Chancery Division deals with litigation about properties, family trusts, companies, dissolution of partnerships and disputed estates. The Queen's Bench Division hears cases involving damage to property, personal injuries etc. and also includes the Admiralty Court. The Family Division hears contested or complex divorce and separation cases and matters relating to children such as adoption, wardship, guardianship of minors.

The judges of these three divisions have the title of Justice of the High Court.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL

This is a standing committee, consisting of the Law Lords of the United Kingdom (the Lord Chancellor, ex-Lord Chancellors and Lords of Appeal in Ordinary) and other Privy Counsellors who have held high judicial office. It is the highest court of appeal on certain issues concerning Australia, New Zealand, Ceylon and United Kingdom dependent territories and, in a few instances, the United Kingdom. The Lord Chancellor selects a board of three or five from the Committee by invitation for each particular case.

There are seventeen Commonwealth members.

SCOTTISH JUDICIAL SYSTEM*CRIMINAL COURTS

Minor offences are dealt with in Burgh and Justice of the Peace courts.

SHERIFF COURT

Most criminal actions, including all but the most serious offences, are tried in this court. Each of the twelve sheriffdoms of Scotland has a Sheriff Principal and a number of Sheriffs, who hear the cases.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY

The supreme criminal court in Scotland and all the most serious criminal cases are taken there. Appeal may be made to it from the Sheriff Court and from the Burgh and Justice of the Peace courts; there is, however, no further appeal to the House of Lords.

The judges of this court are known as Lords Commissioners of Justiciary and are headed by the Lord Justice General. Apart from their criminal jurisdiction in this court, these same nineteen judges are also judges of the Court of Session (see below) in civil cases. The Lord Justice General is also the President of the Court of Session.

CIVIL COURTS*SHERIFF COURT

Tries civil as well as criminal cases, and in civil cases its jurisdiction is practically unlimited. Appeal may be made to the Court of Session.

COURT OF SESSION

This is the supreme civil court in Scotland. It has an Inner House and an Outer House.

INNER HOUSE. Has two divisions of equal standing, each consisting of four judges under the presidency of the Lord President and the Lord Justice Clerk respectively, is mainly an appeal court, whence further appeal may be made to the House of Lords.

First Division: Lord Justice General and President: Rt. Hon. Lord EMSLIE; Judges: Hon. Lord CAMERON, Hon. Lord JOHNSTON, Rt. Hon. Lord AVONSIDE.

Second Division: Lord Justice Clerk: Rt. Hon. Lord WHEATLEY; Judges: Hon. Lord KISSEN, Hon. Lord HUNTER, Hon. Lord FRASER.

OUTER HOUSE. Deals with the major civil cases and all divorce actions.

The judges are those of the High Court of Justiciary, sitting in a civil capacity as judges of the Court of Session.

Judges: Hon. Lord HUNTER, Hon. Lord THOMSON, Hon. Lord ROBERTSON, Rt. Hon. Lord STOTT, Hon. Lord DUNPARK, Hon. Lord KEITH, Hon. Lord GRIEVE, Hon. Lord BRAND, Hon. Lord KINCRAIG, Hon. Lord MAXWELL, Hon. Lord McDONALD, Rt. Hon. Lord WYLIE.

RELIGION

British Council of Churches: 10 Eaton Gate, London, S.W.1.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

The Church of England claims to be both Catholic and Reformed. Originating from the Celtic Mission of St. Aidan from Scotland and from the Roman Mission of St. Augustine, it finally renounced the jurisdiction of the Pope at the Reformation, while retaining the episcopal form of Church government.

The Church of England is the Established Church, and as such acknowledges the authority of Parliament in matters in which secular authority is competent to exercise control. Queen Elizabeth I was declared "supreme Governor on Earth" of the Church of England, and the Sovereign is consecrated to this office at coronation.

In England, there are two Provinces, Canterbury and York. The former contains 29, the latter 14, dioceses. Each Province has its ancient Convocations, an Upper and Lower House. By the Enabling Act the Constitution of the National Assembly of the Church of England ("Church Assembly") received statutory recognition in 1920, with power, subject to the control and authority of Parliament, of initiating legislation on all matters concerning the Church of England. Measures passed by the Assembly and approved by Parliament, are submitted for the Royal Assent, and have the force of Acts of Parliament.

In 1970 by the Synodical Government Measure 1969 the Church Assembly was reconstituted as the General Synod and was also given authority to exercise most of the functions of the Convocations. The House of Bishops consists of members of the Upper House of the Convocations (43 persons). The House of Clergy consists of the members of the Lower Houses (a maximum of 251 persons). The House of Laity consists almost entirely of representatives of the dioceses elected by the deanery synods (a maximum of 251 persons).

The estimated membership of the Church of England in 1970 was 7,736,000 (baptized).

Sec.-Gen. of the General Synod: WILLIAM D. PATTINSON.

Office: Church House, Dean's Yard, London, S.W.1.

The Archbishops and the 24 senior Bishops sit in the House of Lords.

THE CHURCH IN WALES

The Province of Wales was created as a result of the Welsh Church Act of 1914, which took effect on March 31st, 1920, and separated the four Welsh Dioceses from the Province of Canterbury.

The Province is practically coterminous with Wales and Monmouthshire, with the exception of a few border parishes which, under the Welsh Church Act, voted themselves out of the Church in Wales. It is divided into 6 Dioceses served by 920 clergy. The number of Easter communicants is approximately 150,000.

The Church in Wales has an administrative Governing Body which is a legislative assembly composed of bishops, clergy and laity, and a Representative Body incorporated by Royal Charter, which holds and manages the property and central funds of the Church.

Office: 39 Cathedral Road, Cardiff. Lay Sec. of the Governing Body B. V. DAVIES; Clerical Sec. of the Governing Body The Dean of Llandaff; Sec. and Accountant of the Representative Body W. R. JONES.

THE SCOTTISH CHURCHES

The Church of Scotland: 121 George St., Edinburgh. The National Church of Scotland was reformed in 1560, and became Presbyterian in doctrine and constitution. In 1921 "The Church of Scotland Act" was passed, by which the articles declaring the full spiritual freedom of the Church are recognized as lawful. In May 1925, "The Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments) Act" became law, and made over to the Church of Scotland places of worship, manse and endowments in absolute property, vesting the future control of them in Trustees. Immediately the General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland and the United Free Church appointed a Committee to prepare a basis and plan of union, and the union of the two Churches was effected in 1929. The Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland for 1974 is Rt. Rev. RUSSELL POPE; f. 1739 as a result of the evangelical mission work conducted by Rev. John Wesley, M.A., a priest of the Church of England, and others, including his brother, Rev. Charles Wesley, M.A. The doctrinal standards are contained in certain of John Wesley's sermons and his Notes on the new Testament. It spread rapidly in the British Isles and to America. The Methodist Church in Great Britain was united in 1932 by the fusion of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Primitive Methodist Church (f. 1807) and the United Methodist Church, itself a fusion of three Methodist Churches.

The chief court of the Church is the Annual Conference, which consists of ministers and laymen. The Church throughout Great Britain is divided into 32 Districts, and these hold their Synod Meetings in the autumn and the spring. The Districts are divided into Circuits, which hold a Circuit Meeting, made up of representatives from the churches within the Circuit. There are also local church courts.

At the last triennial return (1971) there were 601,068 members of the Methodist Church in Great Britain with a Methodist community in the country of some 2 million.

The chief Methodist press organ is the Methodist Recorder (weekly).

Presbyterian Church of Wales: 9 Camden Rd., Brecon, Breconshire, LD3 7BU; f. 1811; 1,295 churches, 300 ministers 99,288 mems.; Moderator of General Assembly (1974-75) Rev. W. D. JONES; Sec. Rev. GWILYM EVANS.

The Religious Society of Friends: Friends House, Euston Rd., London, NW1 2BJ; founded by George Fox, about the middle of the 17th century, the Friends ("Quakers") number 20,386 in Great Britain; Clerk to the London Yearly Meetings DEREK H. CROSFIELD; Recording Clerk (Sec.) ARTHUR J. WHITE. The Society, as a religious organization, works actively for social reform and international peace and justice. Its chief unofficial press organ is The Friend (weekly).

Salvation Army: 101 Queen Victoria St., London, EC4P 4EP; General of the Army CLARENCE D. WISEMANN; Chief of Staff Commr. ARTHUR CARR; Int. Secs. Commr. HARRY WILLIAMS (British Dominions and the Americas), Commr. PER-ERIK WAHLSTRÖM (Europe), Commr. W. STANLEY COTTRILL (Africa and the Far East), Commr. ARTHUR HOOK (India etc.). The aim of the Army is personal salvation through belief in Jesus Christ. Founded in 1865 by the Rev. William Booth as a Christian Mission in the East End of London, the first headquarters ("Eastern Star") was opened in 1867 in Whitechapel Road. In 1878 it became the Salvation Army and William Booth assumed the title of General, the uniform being introduced throughout the Army in 1879. In 1880 the Army extended to U.S.A., in 1881 to France, and since then its operations have extended to 81 countries. Pubs. in Great Britain include The War Cry, The Young Soldier, The Musician, All the World, The Deliverer, The Musical Salvationist, etc.

The Spiritualists' National Union Ltd.: Britten House, Stansted Hall, Stansted, Mountfitchet, Essex; Pres. G. M. HIGGINSON, 218 Lightwood Rd., Longton, Stoke-on-Trent; Gen. Sec. R. J. BAKER. An organization of 500 Spiritualist churches, societies and 22,000 individual members, founded in 1891 (and incorporated 1901) for the advancement of Spiritualism as a religion and a religious philosophy, it is a Trust Corporation officially recognized as the central and national body representing the Spiritualists of Great Britain. Conducts the Arthur Findlay College of Psychic Science.

United Reformed Church: 86 Tavistock Place, London WC1H 9RT; f. 1972 by merger of the Congregational Church in England and Wales (f. 1831) and the Presbyterian Church of England; approx. 2,200 churches; Moderator Rt. ## JEWISH COMMUNITY

The Jewish Community of Great Britain and Northern Ireland is estimated to number 450,000.

Chief Rabbi of the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Commonwealth of Nations Dr. IMMANUEL JAKOBOWITS, B.A.; Office: Adler House, Tavistock Square, London, W.C.1; Exec. Dir. MOSHE DAVIS.

The Court of the Chief Rabbi (Beth Din) is at Adler House, Tavistock Square, London, W.C.1; Clerk to the Court MARCUS CARR, F.C.C.S.

There is no comprehensive organization of synagogues covering the country as a whole; their unifying bond is their recognition of the ecclesiastical authority of the Chief Rabbi under the Chief Rabbinate Council.

In London there are the following major synagogue organizations:

The Council of Reform and Liberal Rabbis: f. 1968; comprises over 40 ministers serving nearly 50 congregations in Great Britain and Ireland. Its Chairman, at present Rabbi SIDNEY BRICHTO, is elected annually to represent and speak for Progressive Jewry, which does not recognize the authority of the Chief Rabbi of the United Hebrew Congregations.

Federation of Synagogues: 9-11 Greatorex St., London, E.1; f. 1887; Pres. M. LEDERMAN; 50 constituent and affiliated synagogues with a total membership of about 16,000 families.

Liberal Synagogues: Liberal Jewish Synagogue, 28 St. John's Wood Rd., London, N.W.8; f. 1910 by Jewish Religious Union; Senior Minister Rabbi JOHN D. RAYNER, M.A.; Pres. Col. Sir LOUIS GLUCKSTEIN, G.B.E., T.D., Q.C., D.L.; Sec. R. BENEDYK; 2,800 members; publ. L.J.S. Newsletter.

Spanish and Portuguese Jews' Congregation: St. Peter's-burgh Mews, London, W2 4ST; f. 1657; Pres. of the Elders Hon. Sir ALAN MOCATTA, O.B.E.; Sec. M. BENZIMRA.

The Union of Orthodox Hebrew Congregations: 40 Queen Elizabeth's Walk, London, N.16; f. 1926; Rabbi JOSEPH DUNNER; over 4,000 mems.

The United Synagogue: Woburn House, Upper Woburn Place, London, W.C.1; f. 1870 by Act of Parliament. Pres. of the Council Sir ISAAC WOLFSON, Bt.; Vice-Pres; ALFRED WOOLF, J.P., S. S. LEVIN, LL.B.; Sec. NATHAN RUBIN, F.C.I.S.; 40,000 members.

UNITED KINGDOM (GREAT BRITAIN)

West London Synagogue of British Jews: 33 Seymour Place, London, W.1; f. 1840; Sec. ALAN SILVERMAN, J.P.; about 2,500 members. Publ. Synagogue Review (monthly).

ISLAM

The Muslim community in the United Kingdom, which is estimated to number over 300,000, consists mainly of persons of foreign origin but includes an increasing number of British converts. The chief concentrations of Muslims are in London, the Midlands, South Wales, Lancashire and Yorkshire. There are numerous mosques in the United

THE PRESS

(Except where otherwise stated, addresses are in London.)

The United Kingdom has the world's third highest newspaper circulation per head of population, and boasts some of the highest circulation figures for individual newspapers (Daily Mirror 4.2 million, Daily Express 3 million, News of the World 5.7 million). The United Kingdom press has a long tradition of independence from political and commercial pressures, though in negative ways, by the withholding of information or by attempts to withhold advertising revenue, such pressure can be applied.

There is no law which specifies the operations of the Press but several items of legislation bear directly on press activities.

Although exact reporting of legal proceedings appearing at the time of trial is protected from later charges of defamation, the freedom to report cases is subject to certain restrictions as defined in the Judicial Proceedings Act of 1926, in the Children's and Young Persons' Act of 1933 and in the Criminal Justice Act 1967.

The strict laws of contempt of court and of libel somewhat limit the scope of the Press. Journalists are subject to the former if they publish material liable to interfere with a matter which is sub judice, but this law is qualified by the Administration of Justice Act of 1960 which declares an editor not guilty of contempt if, after taking reasonable care, he remained ignorant of the fact that proceedings were pending. The Scottish law of contempt is more severe than the English.

In recent years libel cases involving the awarding of extremely punitive damages against the Press have taken place. The Defamation Act of 1952 lessened the possible repercussions of unintentional libel and made provision for the claim of fair comment by the defence.

The Official Secrets Act of 1911 prohibits the publication of secret information where this is judged not to be in the national interest. The Secretary of State is empowered to require a person with information about a violation of the Act to disclose his source. Journalists have no exemption here. Following the Sunday Telegraph case in 1971 the Secretary of State appointed the Franks committee to examine Section 2 of the Act which refers to "national interest". The Committee's report favoured the replacement of this section by an Official Information Act, which would apply to certain specified categories of official information if classified on the grounds that its unauthorized disclosure would harm seriously the interests of the nation. Under such an Act the receipt of official information by a citizen would no longer be an offence, and the duty of protecting official information would fall to the Minister or Crown servants concerned.

The publication of morally objectionable and harmful material is treated in the Children's and Young Persons' (Harmful Publications) Act of 1955 and in the Obscene Publications Act.

In recent years legislative measures have been taken to limit the excessive development of concentrations of newspaper ownership and the extent of the control by newspaper owners over other mass media such as the television. The Television Act of 1964 provides for intervention by the Postmaster-General or the Independent Television Authority where investments by newspaper owners in television companies are judged liable to lead to abuses. The Monopolies and Mergers Act of 1965 requires the written consent of the Board of Trade for the transfer of daily or weekly papers with an aggregate average of over 500,000 copies per day of publication. The Board's decision is based on the conclusions of the Monopolies Commission to which, with exception of cases of papers judged to be uneconomical and of papers with an average daily circulation of no more than 25,000 copies, all cases are referred for investigation.

The National Union of Journalists Code of Conduct and the Institute of Journalists Code of Ethics (1963) define the form of professional conduct for British journalists.

The Press Council is a non-statutory association of newspaper editors, publishers, journalists' organizations and lay members which though having no legal powers has acquired considerable standing as an adjudicating body on Press conduct.

THE PRESS COUNCIL

New Mercury House, 81 Farringdon St., London, EC4A 4BL.

The Press Council, a voluntary body consisting of an independent chairman, ten lay-members and twenty members nominated by the Newspaper Publishers Association, the Newspaper Society, the Scottish Daily Newspaper Society, the Scottish Newspaper Proprietors' Association, the Periodical Publishers Association, the National Union of Journalists, the Institute of Journalists and the Guild of British Newspaper Editors, was set up in June 1953 and reconstituted in July 1963 and July 1973. Its principal aims are to safeguard the freedom of the Press, to maintain its highest professional and commercial standards, to deal with any complaints it may receive about the conduct of the Press or of any persons towards the Press, to keep under review developments likely to restrict the supply of information of public interest and importance and to report publicly on developments that may tend towards greater concentration or monopoly in the Press.

Chair. Rt. Hon. The Lord SHAWCROSS, G.B.E., Q.C.; Vice-Chair. HENRY BATE, O.B.E.; Members: W. J. BAILEY, W. R. A. BREARE, RONALD DEADMAN, H. R. DOUGLAS, SIR TREVOR EVANS, HOWARD FRENCH, DAVID GREENSLADE, C. D. HAMILTON, WM. HEALD, SYDNEY JACOBSON, A. A. JENNER, F. P. M. JOHNSTON, K. J. PETERS, EDWARD PICKERING, A. E. SIMPSON, R. M. TAYLOR, J. S.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS

Although many British newspapers are owned by individual publishers the great rate of news consumption has fostered the growth of large national groups or chains of papers controlled by a single organization or individual. The five largest of these chains are as follows:

The Thomson Organisation Ltd.: P.O.B. 4YG, 4 Stratford Place, W1A 4YG; Joint Chair. Lord THOMSON of FLEET, The Hon. KENNETH THOMSON; controls 30 daily and weekly papers (including The Times and The Sunday Times) in England, 9 (including The Scotsman) in Scotland, 13 in Wales and 4 in Northern Ireland. It controls, in addition, 45 magazines in England; 7 book publishing companies in England; 7 printing firms in England, 2 in Scotland, one in Northern Ireland and has numerous interests abroad.

International Publishing Corporation Ltd.: Orbit House, New Fetter Lane, E.C.4; Chair. ALEX JARRATT; controls, through its subsidiary companies, IPC Newspapers Ltd., IPC Magazines Ltd., IPC Business Press Ltd., etc., two national daily papers (The Daily Mirror, The Sporting Life), two national Sunday papers (The Sunday People, Sunday Mirror), provincial newspapers (including two two Scottish national papers Daily Record and Sunday Mail) and some two hundred magazines, technical and trade journals and periodicals; also publishes books through its subsidiary the Hamlyn Group and Butterworths and produces records and prints. Large magazine and general printing interests through its subsidiary, International Printers. Publishing interests in 14 overseas countries.

Beaverbrook Newspapers Ltd.: Fleet St., E.C.4.; Chair. Sir MAX AITKEN Bt.; Deputy Chair. and Man. Dir. JOCELYN STEVENS; controls The Daily Express, The Evening Standard (London), and The Sunday Express.

Associated Newspapers Group Ltd.: Carmelite House, E.C.4; Chair. Hon. VERE HARMSWORTH; controls through Harmsworth Publications Ltd.: 2 national dailies (The Daily Mail and The Evening News) and one national weekly (Weekend); and through the Northcliffe Newspaper Group Ltd. 12 evening papers, 1 morning paper and several weeklies; the Northcliffe Group also has holdings in a further 5 provincial dailies (4 evening and one morning).

United Newspapers Publications Ltd.: 23-27 Tudor St., EC4Y 0HR; Chair. Sir WILLIAM D. BARNETSON; controls 9 provincial dailies (7 evening and 2 morning), one bi-weekly and 30 provincial weekly papers.

During 1969 the Australian newspaper owner Rupert Murdoch gained control of the News of the World and The Sun.

No newspaper is directly owned by a political party. The Morning Star, closely related to the British Communist Party, is effectively owned by the People's Press Printing Society, a co-operative society with 30,000 members. Several influential newspapers are owned and operated by trusts or independent companies, notably The Observer and The Economist.

Among the most influential newspapers may be included: The Times, The Guardian, The Daily Telegraph and The Financial Times (daily), The Observer, The Sunday Times and The Sunday Telegraph (Sunday newspapers), The Economist, The New Statesman, Punch, The Listener and New Society (weeklies). Outstanding among the popular press are: The Daily Mirror, The Daily Express and The Daily Mail (daily), The Sunday Mirror, The News of the World and The Sunday People (Sunday newspapers), Woman and Woman's Own (weekly magazines), which together with The Radio Times and the TV Times represent the most widely distributed newspapers and magazines.

PRINCIPAL PUBLISHERS

(Except where otherwise stated, addresses are in London, to which postal codes refer.)

Publishing firms in the United Kingdom are mainly located in London and many are members of large publishing groups, notably the International Publishing Corporation (The Hamlyn Publishing Group), Associated Book Publishers and Granada. There are also a large number of private firms who often produce memoirs and one or two titles a year. In recent years there has been tremendous expansion inside the field of publishing, notably political science, children's books, engineering, business management and commerce; there has been a certain drop in religion and theology. Fiction remains the largest category. In 1973 35,254 titles, including 9,556 reprints and new editions were issued and in 1974 32,194 titles, including 7,852 reprints and new editions, a decrease of 8.7 per cent.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC): Broadcasting House, London, W1A 1AA; Chair. Prof. Sir MICHAEL SWANN; Dir.-Gen. Sir CHARLES CURRAN.

The BBC was founded in 1922 and operates under licence from the Secretary of State for Home Affairs. It is financed by television licence fees, less Post Office expenses.

The number of television receiving licences at July 31st, 1974, were 11,397,840 for black and white, and 5,986,935 for colour.

Independent Broadcasting Authority (IBA): 70 Brompton Rd., Knightsbridge, London, SW3 1EY; Members of the Authority: Lady PLOWDEN (Chair.), CHRISTOPHER BLAND (Deputy Chair.), Dr. T. F. CARBERY, WALTER ANDERSON, C.B.E., A. WARREN PAGE, T. GLYN DAVIES, C.B.E., Baroness MACLEOD OF BORVE, J.P., W. J. BLEASE, M. WARNOCK, Prof. J. RING; Dir.-Gen. BRIAN YOUNG.

The Authority was founded as a public corporation in 1954 to provide an alternative television service to that of the BBC. It builds, owns and operates its transmitting stations, but the programmes transmitted by the Authority are provided by independent companies which it appoints and from which it draws its own income. The Authority's stations are linked by a network of lines which enables programmes to be exchanged between all the companies. There are now fourteen areas covered by fifteen television companies (see below).

Independent Television draws no income from licence fees or from other public funds. Its financial resources come from the sale of advertising time by the different companies and from the sale of programmes abroad.

The Independent Broadcasting Authority is responsible for independent local radio. The first two stations came into operation in 1973; 17 others are planned by 1976.

RADIO

BBC DOMESTIC SERVICES

The BBC broadcasts four separate radio services in the United Kingdom, including some programmes in stereo.

Radio 1 provides a continuous service of popular music, and is broadcast on 247 metres (202 metres Scotland) medium wave.

Radio 2 broadcasts mainly light music. It uses 1500m. long wave and is also carried on VHF.

Radio 3 is a serious music network, which in the evening also provides a full range of programmes about the arts and other topics of current intellectual interest, and some drama. It is broadcast on VHF and on 464 and 194 metres medium wave.

Radio 4 is a mainly speech network and is the main vehicle for the coverage of news and current affairs. It also carries talks, documentary and drama programmes, light entertainment shows, schools' programmes and specialized broadcasts. Regional versions of the network are broadcast in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, while various areas of England are also provided with a localized service of news and weather information. The service uses ten medium wave lengths and VHF.

Managing Director, Radio: IAN TRETHOWAN.

FINANCE

The United Kingdom's central bank is the Bank of England, which was established by Act of Parliament and Royal Charter in 1694 and nationalized under the Bank of England Act 1946.

The Bank of England Act of 1833 made Bank of England notes legal tender throughout England. (The Royal Mint issues coinage.) New banks were deprived of the right to issue notes, and, in certain circumstances, established banks lost their right of issue on amalgamation with another bank, under the 1844 Charter Act. As a result, by 1921 the Bank of England became the sole bank of issue for England and Wales. The Scottish and Northern Ireland banks issue their own notes but these are largely covered by holdings of Bank of England notes.

The Bank of England is responsible for advising the Government on the formulation of monetary policy and for its subsequent execution. It holds the main government accounts, acts as registrar of government stocks and as agent of the Government for a number of financial operations, including the management of the Exchange Equalization Account, and for the administration of Exchange Control. It is also banker to a number of commercial banks. The London clearing banks maintain a substantial proportion of their total cash holdings in the form of balances at the Bank and these are used in the settlement of the daily cheque and credit clearings.

In 1971 a new system of credit control replaced ceiling controls on banks' lending and gave greater scope for competition between banks. The new system is based on reserve ratios and the Bank of England is now able to call for special deposits from the whole of the banking system, not just from the London clearing banks and Scottish banks.

The commercial banks may be divided into two main groups: the deposit banks and the Accepting Houses and overseas and other banks.

The main constituents of the deposit banks group are the London clearing banks (6 in number), the Scottish banks (3) and the Northern Ireland banks (4). The deposit banks may, in general terms, be distinguished from the other groups of banks by the fact that they deal with the general public through an extensive branch network and play the main part in operating the payments system—the money transmission service—of the country.

The Accepting Houses, overseas and other banks are a large and rather disparate group, of some 300 banks, mainly concerned in offering specialized financial services. Unlike the deposit banks they have few branches in the United Kingdom and do not usually seek to offer ordinary banking services to the public at large. In general terms they concentrate on the specialized financial markets such as the Euro-dollar market and the local authority temporary money market, on company finance, including the raising of new capital, on the finance of foreign trade and on investment management.

The group may be further divided into very roughly comparable sub-groups; the main ones are:

- (i) The Accepting Houses—taking their name from their business of accepting bills of exchange for payment. Their interests to-day are, however, very much more broadly based.
- (ii) The British Overseas and Commonwealth banks operating in a large number of foreign and Commonwealth countries. Their principal London business is probably still the finance of foreign trade but in several instances they have led the development of ordinary commercial banking business in various countries abroad and still play a major part in such business.
- (iii) The foreign banks and affiliates—mainly European controlled banks operating in London for the purposes of financing foreign trade and for access to London's specialized markets.
- (iv) The American banks of which there are now about 45—mainly attracted to London as the centre of the Euro-dollar market but also very much concerned with offering financial services to subsidiaries and branches of their U.S. customers.

There are also 16 branches of Japanese banks in London, together with some 30 unaffiliated foreign banks. Finally the "other" banks, numbering about 90 and including the main clearing banks' subsidiaries and consortium banks (i.e. owned by two or more banks), are British based and in general terms seek to exploit the specialized markets in London.

The Discount Houses are a specialized group of institutions peculiar to London. The eleven member Houses raise the greater part of their funds from within the banking sector. These funds are borrowed by the Houses at call or short notice (thereby providing the lending banks with a highly liquid interest-bearing investment) and are used to purchase correspondingly liquid assets—mainly Treasury and commercial bills, short-dated government stocks, certificates of deposit, local authority debt, etc. The Discount Houses have the right to borrow against approved collateral from the Bank of England as "lender of last resort" but this may be at penal interest rates. In October 1972 the minimum rate of interest at which the Bank would lend to the money market (previously Bank Rate) became calculable, in normal circumstances, by reference to the average rate of discount for Treasury Bills at the most recent tender. The movement in this rate, therefore, cannot be interpreted as signalling major shifts in monetary policy.

As a result of England's lead in international trade and finance during and after the industrial revolution, several countries tended to use sterling rather than their national currency for international trading transactions and maintained their central currency reserve in London. These countries pegged their currency exchange rate to the pound sterling when the gold standard was abandoned by the United Kingdom in 1931; the pound was devalued by 33½ per cent in 1949, and by 14.3 per cent in 1967. In June 1972 the pound was floated and, by December 1974, it had not returned to a fixed parity. Since 1958 sterling has been, for non-residents, freely transferable and convertible into other currencies, and in 1961 became fully convertible. The United Kingdom's official reserves, comprising gold, convertible currencies and special drawing rights on the International Monetary Fund, are held in the Exchange Equalization Account operated since 1932 by the Bank of England as agent for the Treasury.

The London Gold Market evolved in the days of the Australian and Canadian gold rushes in the 19th century, and it remains the leading free market of the world. There are five members of the Market who are present at the two daily price fixings, although all authorized banks may (but rarely do) deal in the commodity. The Gold Market was closed from the outbreak of the Second World War until March 1954, when it was successfully re-opened under the general supervision of the Bank of England.

In the seven years up to 1968 a "gold pool" arrangement co-ordinated the gold operations of European central banks and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in stabilizing the market. In March 1968 this system ceased and a two-tier gold market system was then introduced; broadly, this re-established a system of free gold markets in which central banks did not deal, and in which prices were determined by supply and demand. The two-tier market was abolished in November 1973.

The building society movement is important both as a medium of savings (the second largest in the U.K.) and for the finance of house purchase in a country where over 50 per cent of dwellings are owner-occupied. There were 443 societies in 1974 of which ten accounted for nearly 60 per cent of funds invested by the public in this way.

National Savings are shared between the Department for National Savings and the Trustee Savings Banks. Through the Department for National Savings the Government administers the National Savings Bank "investment" and "ordinary" accounts, National Savings certificates, Premium bonds and other securities, all aimed primarily at the small saver. The outlets for these services are some 22,000 post offices in the U.K. National savings securities can also be bought through Trustee Savings Banks and other banks. The Trustee Savings scheme was started in the 19th century, and in 1973 there were 71 banks with 1,403 offices and some 17 million accounts.

In 1968 a new service, the Post Office Giro, was opened to provide a cheap credit transfer and postal cheque service for its accountholders, most of whom would not also have bank accounts.

There are certain institutions set up to provide finance for specific purposes; the more important of these are Finance for Industry and its two main subsidiaries the Finance Corporation for Industry (capital for large corporations unable to borrow elsewhere) and the Industrial and Commercial Finance Corporation (capital for technical innovation and small companies); the Commonwealth Development Finance Company (investment of private capital in Commonwealth and other countries' development schemes) and the Agricultural Mortgage Corporation (loans against mortgages on agricultural property).

The main capital market is the Stock Exchange, which since March 1973 has amalgamated the London Stock Exchange, the 5 other, much smaller, stock exchanges in the United Kingdom, and the Dublin and Cork stock exchanges. Recent figures indicate that over 9,000 securities are traded on its floors. Both government stocks and company securities are traded through a system of "jobbers" and brokers which is peculiar to London.

The U.K. has a highly developed insurance market, located primarily in London. Lloyd's, with its unique system of underwriting syndicates (of which there are about 300, with over 6,000 members) has an international reputation for marine, aviation and other types of insurance; most of its premium income comes from outside the U.K. The bulk of the domestic insurance market is shared between about 100 of the 400 (approximately) insurance companies operating in the U.K. which also do a lot of international business. These companies are important for both their general and their life-assurance business; the latter (including pension business) attracts the largest single category of personal savings in the U.K.

SHIPPING
Ports

There are over 300 ports in the United Kingdom of which London, Liverpool, Milford Haven, Southampton, Manchester, Clyde, Tees and Hartlepool, Hull, Bristol, Immingham and the Medway and Tyne ports are the largest (in terms of the tonnage of shipping cleared). Nineteen ports, including Hull, Southampton and five ports in South Wales, are nationally owned and administered by the British Transport Docks Board. London is administered by the Port of London Authority, Liverpool by the Mersey Docks and Harbours Company, Belfast by the Belfast Harbour Commission and Glasgow by the Clyde Port Authority. Bristol and a few smaller ports are under the control of local authorities, and there are over a hundred ports, of which Manchester is the largest, which are owned and administered by private companies.

ATOMIC ENERGY

United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA): 11 Charles II St., London, SW1Y 4QP; f. 1954; Chair. Sir JOHN HILL; Deputy Chair. F. J. DOGGERT; Members A. M. ALLEN, R. V. MOORE, Dr. W. MARSHALL; publ. Atom (monthly).

London: central administration, public relations and overseas collaboration.

Group Headquarters:

Reactor Group: Risley, Cheshire; Man. Dir. R. V. MOORE, G.C., C.B.E.

Research: Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Harwell, Oxon.; Dir. Dr. W. MARSHALL, C.B.E., F.R.S.

The Authority deals with research into and development of nuclear energy. Separate electricity authorities implement the civil nuclear power programme. In 1963 the functions of the Authority were extended to include scientific research and development in matters not connected with atomic energy. The Atomic Energy Authority Act 1971 transferred the activities of the Authority's Trading Fund to British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. and The Radiochemical Centre Ltd. (see below).

Atomic Energy Research Establishment: Harwell, nr. Didcot, Berks.; f. 1946; Dir. Dr. W. MARSHALL, C.B.E., F.R.S.

About half of Harwell's work is directly concerned with problems of reactor development and nuclear power generally, with special reference to materials research; supported by a programme of underlying research. The remainder of Harwell's effort is divided between work (not necessarily related to nuclear energy) done for industry and for the public sector (including government departments).

Harwell Postgraduate Education Centre: f. 1963; Man. J. N. HULL.

Culham Laboratory: Abingdon, Berks.; Dir. Dr. R. S. PEASE.

Research in nuclear fusion as a source of industrial power, and in plasma physics.

Reactor Group: Risley, Warrington, Cheshire; Man. Dir. R. V. MOORE, G.C., C.B.E.

Reactor design and development. Group headquarters.

Reactor Development Laboratories: Windscale, Sellafield, Cumbria; Head of Laboratories K. SADDINGTON, O.B.E.

Development of the Advanced Gas-cooled Reactor system and associated work. It is also engaged on the development of plutonium fuels for fast reactors.

Engineering and Materials Laboratory: Risley; Head of Laboratories J. M. HUTCHEON, O.B.E.

Investigation of physical and chemical properties of reactor materials combined with Engineering Laboratory work.

Reactor Fuel Element Laboratories: Springfields, Salwick, Preston; Head of Laboratories J. HARPER, O.B.E.

Development of fuels for thermal and fast nuclear reactors.

Dounreay Experimental Reactor Establishment: Dounreay, Caithness, Scotland; f. 1956; Dir. C. W. BLUMFIELD.

Site of the 14 MW(e) Dounreay fast reactor and a 250 MW(E) prototype fast reactor. Supporting activities include the fabrication and reprocessing of M.T.R. fuel and a comprehensive irradiation service.

Atomic Energy Establishment, Winfrith: Dorchester, Dorset; Dir. H. CARTWRIGHT, M.B.E.

Centre for studies in reactor physics, including nuclear data evaluation, heat transfer and fluid dynamics, reactor control, nucleonic instrumentation and the assessment of reactor core performance. New reactor concepts are investigated here and new applications for nuclear reactors.

Site of the 100 MW(e) prototype steam-generating heavy water reactor and the European Nuclear Energy Agency high temperature gas-cooled reactor, "DRAGON".

RESEARCH REACTORS

Harwell

"GLEEP", first British reactor; started 1947; graphite-moderated air-cooled low-energy pile; used for materials testing, research with an oscillator and on biological irradiations.

"DIDO" heavy-water (DDO) reactor, 15MW, with maximum neutron flux  $2 \times 10^{14}$  neutrons per cm.<sup>2</sup> per second, for studies requiring high-energy flux, and for isotope production, started 1956.

"PLUTO" heavy-water reactor, 20 MW (H), similar to "DIDO", for materials studies, critical 1958.

Winfrith

"ZENITH" 100-watt graphite-moderated reactor for investigating high-temperature, gas-cooled systems; started 1959.

"ZENITH II" 1 kW. graphite-moderated reactor for investigating reactor physics for high-temperature gas-cooled systems; started 1972.

"JUNO" 100-watt heavy or light water moderated reactor; started 1964.

"NESTOR" 10-kW light-water reactor to provide neutrons for sub-critical assemblies; started 1961.

"DIMPLE" Deuterium-moderated pile low-energy heavy-water pile for thermal reactor studies; started Harwell, re-erected Winfrith 1961.

"HECTOR" small experimental reactor fuelled with enriched uranium aluminium alloy; oscillator reactor, to study reactivity measurements on materials and fuel elements.

"ZEBRA" 100-watt experimental reactor with a flexible system designed primarily to investigate the physics of large fast reactors.

POWER REACTORS

A.G.R. (Windscale): completed 1962; power 34 MW(e); fuelled with enriched uranium oxide.

S.G.H.W.R. (Winfrith): completed 1967; power 100 MW(e); fuelled with enriched uranium oxide.

P.F.R. (Dounreay): commissioned 1975; power 250 MW(e); fuelled with uranium and plutonium.

The Radiochemical Centre Ltd.: Amersham, Bucks.; f. 1940; previously part of the UKAEA, est. as a limited company under the Atomic Energy Authority Act 1971; produces and markets throughout the world a wide range of radioactive products for use in industry, medicine and research; Chair. Sir CHARLES CUNNINGHAM, K.C.B., K.B.E., C.V.O.; Man. Dir. Dr. W. P. GROVE, C.B.E.

British Nuclear Fuels Limited (BNFL): Risley, Warrington, Lancashire; f. 1971 under the Atomic Energy Authority Act 1971 to take over all the nuclear fuel business of the Production Group of the UKAEA; Chief Exec. Dr. N. L. FRANKLIN, O.B.E.; Man. Dir. C. ALLDAY, C.B.E.

Windscale and Calder Works: Sellafield, Seascale, Cumbria; Gen. Man. P. W. MUMMERY.

Reprocessing of irradiated nuclear fuels and manufacture of plutonium and plutonium oxide fuels. Windscale will provide a large part of the reprocessing capacity for United Reprocessors G.m.b.H., an international company in which BNFL is an equal shareholder with French and German nuclear organizations.

Chapelcross Works: Annan, Dumfriesshire; Gen. Man. P. W. MUMMERY.

Operation of nuclear power station.

Springfields Works: Salwick, Preston, Lancashire; Gen. Man. Dr. H. ROGAN, O.B.E.

Uranium ore treatment, uranium fuel element manufacture and uranium hexafluoride production.

Capenhurst Works: Chester, Cheshire; Gen. Man. W. R. A. TAYLOR, O.B.E.

Operation of a gaseous diffusion plant producing enriched uranium. Development of an alternative gas centrifuge process, including the construction of a prototype plant. This forms part of the collaborative project between the U.K., the Netherlands and Federal Germany (see co-operation below).

POWER REACTORS

Calder Hall: Four reactors; two completed 1956 and two 1958; power 50 MW (e) per reactor; fuelled with natural uranium, cooled with carbon dioxide and moderated with graphite.

Chapelcross: Four reactors; first completed 1958 and three 1959; power 50 MW (e) per reactor; fuel, coolant and moderator as Calder Hall.

The Power Programme. In 1955 "A Programme of Nuclear Power" was presented to Parliament outlining provisional proposals for the building of nuclear power stations to give a capacity of 1,500-2,000 MW by 1965. A "Second Programme of Nuclear Power" was announced in 1964 for a further 5,000 MW of capacity by 1975. Subsequently this figure was increased to 8,000 MW in October 1965. The first station of the Second Programme now under construction at Dungeness will use the British-designed Advanced Gas-cooled Reactor system. In March 1973 the Government announced its intention of re-organizing the nuclear power industry by creating a new company to design and construct nuclear steam supply systems. The Government, through the UKAEA, took a 15 per cent share-holding in the new company, and the General Electric Company 50 per cent. The remaining 35 per cent has since been allocated to British Nuclear Associates.

Co-operation. The Atomic Energy Authority has collaboration agreements with Canada, Australia, Pakistan, U.S.A., U.S.S.R., Japan, France, Sweden, Greece, Switzerland, Spain, Denmark and Italy. In 1964, UKAEA and the German company, Nuklear-Chemie und Metallurgie G.m.b.H. formed the Nukleardienst (Nuclear Service) G.m.b.H., for the provision within the European community of a complete fuel service for advanced gas-cooled reactors. British Nuclear Fuels Limited took over from UKAEA in 1971.

Great Britain is a member of IAEA, NEA, CERN, and CENTO. In February 1959 an agreement for exchange of information and designs was signed with EURATOM. Collaboration between twelve European countries in the development at the Atomic Energy Establishment, Winfrith, of the high-temperature, gas-cooled reactor experiment "DRAGON" was provided for in an agreement signed on March 23rd, 1959, under the auspices of the Nuclear Energy Agency.

An important step was taken towards European collaboration with the achievement of a broad agreement between the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the U.K. concerning the production of enriched uranium by the gas centrifuge method (March 1969). The agreement was implemented in August 1971 by the formation of two international tripartite companies: Centec G.m.b.H. and Urenco Ltd., in both of which British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. has a one-third share. Other European countries have expressed interest in these developments. The project was taken up by British Nuclear Fuels Limited in 1971 from UKAEA for the U.K. As a member of the European Economic Community, Britain is now fully associated with EURATOM.

NORTHERN IRELAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Northern Ireland is situated in the north-east of Ireland and forms part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. It comprises the six Ulster counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone. The rest of the island comprises the Republic of Ireland. The climate is mild and temperate. It is characterized by freedom from extremes of temperature and very little snow, fog or thunder. The language is English. There are approximately two Protestants to every one Roman Catholic. The flag is the union flag of the United Kingdom. The capital is Belfast.

Brief History

The sectarian tension that has characterized Ireland's history began with the first major settlement by British Protestants in the 17th century. The main area of Protestant colonization was the province of Ulster, comprising nine counties in the north-east of Ireland. Protestant supremacy over the indigenous Catholics was established and in 1801 Great Britain absorbed Ireland into the new United Kingdom. The Irish parliament was abolished but government from Westminster was by no means successful.

The resentment of the dispossessed Catholics came to a head in 1916 with the Easter uprising in Dublin. Administrative division of the country was implemented and the Government of Ireland Act of 1920 provided for two parliaments in Ireland, one in Dublin for 26 of the 32 counties and one in Belfast for the other six (mainly Protestant-populated) counties, known today as Northern Ireland. The presence of a large Catholic minority, traditionally deprived of many civil rights, has led to a continuance of tension.

Efforts were made by Captain Terence O'Neill, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland from 1963 to 1969, and by his successor, Major James Chichester-Clark, to improve the situation, but agitation for civil rights continued through the activities of the Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The British military presence in Northern Ireland has been growing since the late 1960s and Brian Faulkner, who became Prime Minister in 1971, endorsed this trend and established internment without trial for terrorists. These measures led to an increase in violence and to the banding together of Protestants in paramilitary groups. During the early part of 1972 the situation deteriorated to such an extent that in March the British Government prorogued the Northern Ireland Parliament and introduced direct rule from Westminster, which alienated many Protestants. A referendum held in March 1973 showed that a majority of the electorate wanted to retain links with Britain. A 78-member Assembly for Northern Ireland was proposed and established. After lengthy negotiations with William Whitelaw, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, the three main parties formed the first-ever coalition Government in the Province. A 15-member Northern Ireland Executive, with Brian Faulkner at its head, was set up.

Direct rule was terminated on December 31st, 1973, and the new Executive took office the following day.

As a result of the talks in December 1973 at Sunningdale England, between the British and Irish Governments and the Northern Ireland Executive, parallel declarations were made by the British and Irish Governments on the new status of Northern Ireland, and it was agreed that a Council of Ireland comprising a Council of Ministers of 7 members from each of both the Irish Government and the new Executive, together with a Consultative Assembly, would be set up as soon as possible.

Following a vote in favour of the Sunningdale Agreement in the Northern Ireland Assembly in May 1974 a Protestant trade unionist organization, the Ulster Workers' Council, declared a general strike which led to widespread disruption, the declaration of a state of emergency and the collapse two weeks later of the Northern Ireland Executive, followed by the proroguing of the Assembly. The Executive's functions were taken over by the new Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Merlyn Rees.

In July 1974 the Northern Ireland Act 1974 provided for the election of a Constitutional Convention to determine the general opinion in Northern Ireland on future constitutional and government institutions, with the provision that any proposals must include power-sharing. At the beginning of 1975 no date for elections had been announced. Violence and terrorist activities continued throughout 1973 and 1974, but early in 1975 the IRA declared a ceasefire.

Government

After the collapse of the Northern Ireland Executive in May 1974, the Northern Ireland Act 1974 of July made the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and his ministers answerable to Parliament at Westminster for the government of Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland also returns 12 members to the United Kingdom Parliament.

Economic Affairs

The economy is based on agriculture which, with the United Kingdom's accession to the EEC in January 1973, has a good opportunity for expansion, especially in the field of livestock and livestock products which constitutes about 90 per cent of farm output; and a rapidly developing range of manufacturing industries. Long-established manufactures include linen, ships, food, drink and tobacco products, and clothing. Latterly, there have been developments in man-made fibre production and a wide range of engineering. In 1973/74 Northern Ireland had the highest rate of unemployment in the United Kingdom and among the highest of any region in the EEC. Foreign investment has fallen off considerably in the last few years but industrial expansion has been made possible by a £50 million grant from the British Government for the period 1970-73, together with a further grant of £32 million in 1972. 19 million of which was allocated to the agricultural sector for the development of the economy as a whole. In 1973/74 only 22 per cent of manufacturing firms employing over 500 were locally controlled, the rest being controlled by interests mainly in Great Britain, the U.S.A. and EEC countries. Exports have been increasing steadily over the past two years and exports to Great Britain and overseas went up from £843 million in 1971 to £916.7 million in 1972. In 1972 79 per cent of trade was with the rest of the United Kingdom.

UNITED KINGDOM (NORTHERN IRELAND)

Northern Ireland receives considerable financial support from central United Kingdom sources: in 1973/74 one third of public expenditure was met from United Kingdom support and Northern Ireland received £310 million in transfer reserves. The estimate for transfer reserves to Northern Ireland for 1974/75 is £420 million.

Defence

All matters of defence come under the jurisdiction of the United Kingdom Parliament.

Transport and Communications

The Northern Ireland Railways Co. Ltd. provide services on 203 miles of railways and there are 14,000 miles of road, including 60 miles of motorway. There are frequent cross-channel shipping services to Great Britain for passengers and freight.

Social Welfare

There is a comprehensive system of social services similar to the National Insurance and National Health Service of Great Britain. It is managed on behalf of the Ministry of Health and Social Services by four Health and Social Services Boards and by the Central Services Agency, which comprises representatives from each of the Boards. There are also a Ministry of Community Relations and an independent Community Relations Commission, which work in conjunction.

Education

Education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 16 and is free in primary, secondary (intermediate), technical (intermediate) and special schools; fees are payable in all grammar schools but the great majority of the pupils in their secondary departments hold scholarships from the local education authorities as qualified pupils.

In January 1973 there were 1,182 primary (including nursery) schools, 177 secondary (intermediate) schools, 81 grammar schools, 1 technical (intermediate) school, 27 special schools, 27 technical colleges, one Polytechnic, Ulster College, and 2 universities, Queen's University, Belfast, and the new University of Ulster. Teacher training is catered for in 3 general colleges of education and in the departments of education of Ulster College and the universities.

Tourism

Total tourism income in 1973 amounted to £16.6 million. The total number of visitors was 434,000.

Sport

Football and rugby are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

The main public holidays are the same as for Great Britain with the addition of March 17th (St. Patrick's Day) and July 12th (Battle of the Boyne).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of weights and measures is in force (See under Great Britain).

Currency and Exchange Rates

(See under Great Britain).

THE CONSTITUTION

NORTHERN IRELAND is part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. By the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, the parliamentary counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone and the parliamentary boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry were established as a separate area of government under the Parliament of Northern Ireland.

The Northern Ireland Constitution Act 1973 abolished the post of Governor and the Parliament of Northern Ireland and provided for the transfer of certain legislative and executive functions to a Northern Ireland Assembly and Executive. Devolution was effected by the Northern Ireland Constitution (Devolution) Order 1973 from January 1st, 1974 ("the appointed day"). On that day Section 1 of the Northern Ireland (Temporary Provisions) Act 1972 expired and, with it, the power to legislate for Northern Ireland by Order in Council under that Act.

LEGISLATURE

Power to make laws (to be known as Measures) in respect of "transferred" matters (that is on matters other than those listed in Schedules 2 and 3 to the Constitution Act) is now vested in the Northern Ireland Assembly, subject to the overriding power of the United Kingdom Parliament to legislate on such matters and subject to Section 17 of the Constitution Act which declares void any provision which discriminates against any person or class of persons on the ground of religious belief or political opinion. The procedure for Measures is set out in the Standing Orders of the Assembly.

The first election of members to the 78 seats in the Northern Ireland Assembly was held in 1973.

Whereas the 1920 Act listed a considerable number of matters in respect of which the Parliament of Northern Ireland could in no circumstances make laws, the Constitution Act contains a much more restricted list of matters

(the "excepted matters") in respect of which the Assembly may not legislate, except by way of ancillary provisions. A more extensive list is that of matters initially reserved; but these matters can be subsequently transferred and the Assembly may legislate in respect of them with consent even while they remain reserved.

Both the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom Parliament (in certain circumstances) are involved in the legislative process.

The circumstances in which Northern Ireland legislation can be challenged in the Courts are much more circumscribed under the Constitution Act of 1973 than they were under the 1920 Act. Once enacted, by being passed by the Assembly and approved by the Queen in Council, a law made for Northern Ireland by Measure has the same force and effect as an Act of the United Kingdom Parliament, except that it can be declared void by the Courts only for infringement of the anti-discrimination provisions in Section 17 of the Constitution Act.

There is an important exception to the exclusion of extra territorial legislation, in that the Assembly may, with consent, pass Measures to give effect to any agreement or arrangement between a Northern Ireland executive authority and any authority of the Republic of Ireland in relation to any "transferred" matters.

Under the provisions of the 1973 Constitution government continued after the collapse of the Executive in May 1974, with legislation in July re-introducing arrangements for essential legislation for Northern Ireland to be made by Orders in Council at Westminster.

A Constitutional Convention, to be elected on the same basis as the Northern Ireland Assembly, is to consider what provision for the government of Northern Ireland would be likely to command most widespread support from the community, with the provision that proposals for future government include power sharing.

THE GOVERNMENT

After the collapse of the Northern Ireland Executive and the proroguing of the Northern Ireland Assembly in May 1974, the Northern Ireland Act of July 1974 made the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and his ministers responsible to Westminster for the Government of Northern Ireland.

Secretary of State for Northern Ireland: Rt. Hon. MERLYN REES.

Minister of State: STANLEY ORME, deputy to Secretary of State, responsible for Departments of Commerce and Manpower Services.

Minister of State: ROLAND MOYLE, responsible for Departments of Health and Social Services, Education and Community Relations.

In the elections to Westminster in October 1974 10 Unionists, one SDPL and one independent were returned.

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State: JOHN CONCANNON, responsible for Departments of Housing, Local Government and Planning and the Environment.

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State: Lord DONALDSON, responsible for Departments of Agriculture and Finance.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The judicial system of Northern Ireland, so far as the Supreme Court is concerned, is a miniature of the English system, and is based on the Supreme Court established in Ireland in 1877 on the model of the Supreme Court in England. It consists, as in England, of a High Court and a Court of Appeal, the High Court having an unlimited jurisdiction both in civil and criminal matters. A Court of Criminal Appeal was established in 1930, also on the English pattern. The county court system to some extent corresponds to its English prototype, with the important difference that in Northern Ireland a county court has, in addition to its civil jurisdiction, a criminal jurisdiction that in England is exercised at Crown Courts. County court judges and recorders of boroughs accordingly exercise all the jurisdiction which in England is divided. The courts of summary jurisdiction, again, originally followed the English system, but in 1935 an alteration was made whereby most of the judicial powers of justices of the peace were transferred to permanent paid judicial officers as Resident Magistrates.

The Lord Chief Justice of Northern Ireland: The Rt. Hon. Sir ROBERT LOWRY.

Lords Justices of Appeal: The Rt. Hon. Lord Justice Sir LANCELOT CURRAN; The Rt. Hon. Lord Justice Sir EDWARD WARBURTON JONES.

Judges of the High Court: The Hon. Mr. Justice MCGONIGAL, M.C.; The Hon. Mr. Justice GIBSON; The Hon. Mr. Justice O'DONNELL; The Rt. Hon. Mr. Justice KELLY; The Hon. Mr. Justice MACDERMOTT.

Recorders: Belfast: His Honour The Rt. Hon. Judge TOPPING, Q.C.; Londonderry: His Honour Judge LITTLE, Q.C.

County Court Judges and Chairmen of Quarter Sessions:
W. W. B. TOPPING, Q.C. J. P. B. HIGGINS, Q.C.

ISLE OF MAN

The Isle of Man lies in the Irish Sea between the Cumberland coast of England and Northern Ireland. It is a dependency of the Crown and does not form part of the United Kingdom. It has its own legislative assembly and legal and administrative systems, its laws depending for this validity on Orders made by the Queen in Council. Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom is responsible for the defence and international relations of the island, and the Crown is ultimately responsible for its good government.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Isle of Man is governed by its own laws. Tynwald is the administrative body, and consists of both branches of the Legislature, that is, the Legislative Council and the House of Keys, sitting together as one body, but voting separately on all questions except, in certain eventualities, the appointment of Boards of Tynwald. The House of Keys has 24 members chosen by adult suffrage for five years. The Legislative Council is composed of the Governor, the Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man, the first Deemster, the Attorney-General and seven members elected by the House of Keys. Customs duties and income-tax come within the province of Tynwald, but since 1921 the Governor, who is Chancellor of the Exchequer, submits the budget estimates in private to the Keys and the Council separately before bringing the vote to Tynwald. The Isle of Man Act, 1958, gave the Tynwald greater control of Fiscal matters. An Executive Council of five members of the House of Keys and two of the Legislative Council was set up in 1961, to act with the Governor.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Isle of Man is, for legal purposes, an independent sovereign country under the British Crown with its own Legislature and its own Judiciary administering its own common or customary and statute law. The law of the Isle of Man is, in most essential matters, the same as the law of England and general principles of equity administered by the English Courts are followed by the Courts of the Isle of Man unless they conflict with established local precedents. Her Majesty's High Court of Justice of the Isle of Man is based upon the English system but modified and simplified to meet local conditions. Justices of the Peace are appointed by the Lord Chancellor of England usually on the nomination of the Lieutenant Governor. Members of the Legislative Council, the High Bailiff and the Mayor of Douglas, and the Chairman of the Town and Village Commissioners are ex-officio J.P.s.

First Deemster and Clerk of the Rolls: R. K. EASON, LL.B.

Second Deemster: A. C. LUFT.

Judge of Appeal: C. M. CLOTHIER, Q.C.

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

The Channel Islands lie off the north-west coast of France and are the only portions of the Duchy of Normandy now belonging to the Crown of England, to which they have been attached since 1106. They do not form part of the United Kingdom, however. They have their own legislative assemblies and legal and administrative systems, their laws depending for their validity on Orders made by the Queen in Council. Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom is responsible for the defence and international relations of the islands, and the Crown is ultimately responsible for their good government.

Exports are protected by British tariff barriers. The citizens of the Channel Islands enjoy tax sovereignty and imports are free of British purchase tax. Income tax is low. Jersey and Guernsey, especially the former, are being developed as finance centres, and Jersey's commercial laws have encouraged the founding of several merchant banks, mainly subsidiaries of London banks, which profit the economy, otherwise largely based on agriculture.

In addition to the British public holidays, the Channel Islands also celebrate May 9th (Liberation Day).

JERSEY

Jersey, the largest of the Channel Islands, is situated to the south-east of Guernsey, from which it is separated by 17 miles of sea.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Lieutenant-Governor and the Commander-in-Chief of Jersey is the Personal Representative of the Sovereign, the Commander of the Armed Forces of the Crown, and the channel of communication between Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Insular Government. He is appointed by the Crown, and is entitled to sit and speak in the Assembly of the States, but not to vote. He has a veto on certain forms of legislation.

The Bailiff is appointed by the Crown, and is President both of the Assembly of the States (the Insular Legislature) and the Royal Court of Jersey. He has, in the States, a right of dissent and a casting vote.

The Deputy Bailiff is appointed by the Crown and, when authorised by the Bailiff to do so, may discharge any function appertaining to the office of Bailiff.

The Government of the Island is conducted by Committees appointed by the States. The States consist of 12 Senators (elected for six years, six retiring every third year), 12 Constables (triennial), and 28 Deputies (triennial), all elected under universal suffrage, by the people. The Dean of Jersey, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General are appointed by the Crown and are entitled to sit and speak in the States, but not to vote. Permanent laws passed by the States require the sanction of Her Majesty in Council but Triennial Regulations do not.

The official language is French, but English is the language in daily use.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Guernsey is the Personal Representative of the Sovereign and the channel of communication between Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Insular Government. He is appointed by the Crown. He is entitled to sit and speak in the Assembly of the States, but not to vote.

The Bailiff is appointed by the Crown and is President both of the Assembly of the States (the insular legislature) and of the Royal Court of Guernsey and has a casting vote.

The Government of the island is conducted by committees appointed by the States.

The States of Deliberation is composed of the following members:

- The Bailiff, who is President ex-officio.
- Twelve Conseillers elected by the States of Election (elected for six years, six retiring every three years).
- H.M. Attorney-General and H.M. Solicitor-General (Law Officers of the Crown), who have a voice but not a vote.
- Thirty-three People's Deputies elected by popular franchise.
- Ten Douzaine Representatives elected by their respective Parochial Douzaines.
- Two Alderney Representatives elected by the States of Alderney.

The Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General are appointed by the Crown, and are entitled to sit and speak in the States, but not to vote.

Projets de Loi (Permanent Laws) require the sanction of Her Majesty in Council.

The function of the States of Election is to elect persons to the offices of Jurat and Conseiller. It is composed of the following members:

- The Bailiff (President ex-officio).
- The 12 Jurats or "Jures-Justiciers".
- The 12 Conseillers.
- The 10 Rectors.
- H.M. Attorney-General and H.M. Solicitor-General
- The 33 People's Deputies.
- Thirty-four Douzaine Representatives.

HISTORICAL NOTE

For a period of nearly a thousand years, dating roughly from the time of Charlemagne to the entry of the Italians into Rome at Porta Pia, Sept. 20th, 1870, the Papacy held temporal possessions. During the process of unification the Kingdom of Italy gradually absorbed these possessions of the Pope, the States of the Church, which stretched from sea to sea across the middle of the peninsula, the process being completed by the entry into Rome of King Victor Emmanuel's troops in 1870. From 1860 to 1870 many attempts had been made to induce the Pope to surrender his temporal possessions; but regarding them as a sacred trust from a higher Power, to be guarded on behalf of the Church, he replied constantly "Non possumus." After the entry of the Royal Army into Rome he retired into the Vatican, whence no Pope issued thereafter until the ratification of the Lateran Treaty of February 11th, 1929. By the Law of Guarantees of May 1871, Italy attempted to stabilize the position of the Papacy, by recognizing the Pope's claim to use of the Palaces of the Lateran and the Vatican, the Papal villa of Castelgandolfo, and their "gardens and annexes", and to certain privileges customary to Sovereignty. This unilateral arrangement was not accepted by Pius IX, and his protest against it was repeated constantly by his successors. Until the ratification of the Lateran Treaty in 1929, relations between the Vatican and the Quirinal had changed little since the passing of the Law of Guarantees in 1871.

The Papal protest, in principle, apart from any consideration of material spoliation, was based on the Pontiff's claim for Sovereign liberty and independence, and for such a guarantee of them as was necessary for the exercise by the Papacy of its spiritual mission and authority throughout the world. Of this it was deprived by the restriction of the Temporal Power. As things stood until 1929, the liberty and independence of the Pope was incomplete, and, lacking juridical guarantees, was at the mercy of the Italian Government. The passing of the years eliminated much of the original bitterness. In particular, Italians came to have a better understanding of the Papal claim and protest, and to realize that the position given to the Pope under the Law of Guarantees fell short in many respects of the full Sovereignty which it was necessary, from the Catholic standpoint, that he should exercise. The original aloofness, too, of Italian Catholics from national affairs was progressively modified. The attitude of the Italian Government towards religion, the Church, and the Papacy, changed little by little, culminating in the Lateran Treaty of 1929.

Under the terms of the Lateran Treaty of 1929 the Holy See was given full use of property rights in, and exclusive power and sovereign jurisdiction over, the State of the Vatican City, an area of 44 hectares (109 acres) within the city of Rome. In International affairs the Vatican State stands as neutral and inviolable territory. Its subjects, who number about 300, most of them employees of the Vatican and their families, are voluntary subjects, possessing freedom to depart from the State at will. In 1929 direct diplomatic relations between the Holy See and the Kingdom of Italy were established.

During the 1939-45 war the neutrality of the Pope and Vatican was respected by all combatants.

The new Italian Constitution of 1947 reaffirmed adherence to the Lateran Treaty of 1929.

The accession of John XXIII in 1958 marked a radical change in the approach of the Papacy to contemporary problems. In 1962 he convened the Second Vatican Council to promote the "aggiornamento" of the Church and to seek ways to bring about reconciliation and unity among the Christian Churches. His teachings in the encyclicals Mater et Magistra in 1961 and Pacem in Terris in 1963 revealed a rational and humane approach to international and religious questions and aroused great interest in both East and West. Pope John's successor, Paul VI, pledged himself to continue his predecessor's work. In January 1964 he visited the Holy Land, thus becoming the first reigning Pope to do so in the history of Christianity. Pope Paul has since visited the peoples of many parts of the world, and addressed various international organizations. Notably, he addressed the United Nations Assembly in 1965, and had amicable conversations with the Orthodox Patriarch in Turkey in 1967. Having visited both South America in 1968 and Africa in 1969, Pope Paul went to the Far East and Australia in 1970. The more important of the teaching encyclicals issued by Pope Paul include Populorum Progressio, concerning the peoples of developing countries, and Humanae Vitae, issued in July 1968, pronouncing the Pope's decision to continue the Roman Catholic Church's ban on artificial birth control.

Since 1967 the Curia has been undergoing reforms which include a greater participation by the laity, appointment of bishops as full members of the Sacred Congregations, and an increase in non-Italian appointments in order to internationalize the Curia. A decree issued in March 1968 abolished hereditary offices in the Papal Court, formerly held by certain members of the Roman nobility. A consultative body of twenty-four Italian lay experts was instituted to advise the five cardinals responsible for administration of the Vatican. Seven of its members are noblemen, and three are women. Further reforms in 1970 included the abolition of the papal gendarmerie, the Noble Guard and the Palatine Guard, and in November it was decreed that all cardinals over 80 years of age would automatically lose their Curia posts and voting rights, while retaining their titles and honorary distinctions, as from January 1st, 1971.

The population of the Vatican City was 904 at July 1st, 1964.

GOVERNMENT

THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

The central government of the Catholic Church in Rome is vested in the Pope, who is supreme, and in the College of Cardinals. Cardinals who remain in Rome as the Pope's immediate advisers are styled Cardinals "in Curia". The Sacred College of Cardinals derives from the church's earliest days. Until the reign of Pope John XXIII, the number of Cardinals was limited by custom to seventy. In February 1973 thirty-one new Cardinals were created, bringing the number to 144. On November 30th, 1973, there were 135 Cardinals. There are three Cardinal Bishops who are in Titular charge of suburban sees of Rome—Palestrina, Sabina, Porto and Santa Rufina, Albano, Velletri, Frascati and Ostia. An Oriental Patriarch is also a member of the order of Cardinal Bishops. Cardinal Priests hold titular churches in Rome, the origins of which go back to the earliest times. The administration of the affairs of the Church is carried out through the Secretariat of State and the Council for the Public Affairs of the Church under the Cardinal Secretary of State, and through a number of Sacred Congregations, each under the direction of a Cardinal, as well as through Tribunals, Offices, Commissions and Secretariats for special purposes.

A general reform of the Curia became effective in 1968, with a reduction in the number of departments, the creation of three new organs and the reconstruction of the Secretariat of State. In May 1969 the Sacred Congregation of Rites was divided into two Congregations—one for Divine Worship and the other for the Causes of Saints.

ORGANIZATION

THE ECCLESIASTICAL ORGANIZATION OF THE CHURCH

The organization of the Church consists of:

(1) Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops in countries under the common law of the Church.

(2) Abbots and Prelates "nullius in dioceseos".

(3) Vicars Apostolic and Prefects Apostolic in countries classified as Missionary and under Propaganda, the former having Episcopal dignity.

Accuracy cannot be guaranteed for the following particulars. They are compiled from statistics gathered from different sources and dates. They will serve, however, as a reliable outline picture.

The total population of the world was estimated in 1972 at 3,715,403,000; the Catholic population at 678,001,000, about 18 per cent.

Among the Pope's titles is that of Patriarch of the West. There are five other Patriarchates of the Latin Rite—Jerusalem, the West Indies, the East Indies, Lisbon and Venice. The Eastern Catholic Churches each have Patriarchs: Alexandria for the Coptic Rite, Babylon for the Chaldean Rite, Cilicia for the Armenian Rite, and Antioch for the Syrian, Maronite and Melchite Rites.

There are 2,198 residential sees—13 patriarchates, 412 metropolitan archbishoprics, 57 archbishoprics and 1,716 bishoprics. Of the 1,983 titular sees (92 metropolitan archbishoprics, 216 archbishoprics and 1,675 bishoprics), 1,165 are filled by priests who have been given these titles, but exercise no territorial jurisdiction. Other territorial divisions of the Church include 102 prelacies, 22 abbacies nullius, 11 apostolic administrations, 26 exarchates of the Eastern Church, 84 apostolic vicariates, 67 prefectures and 4 missions 'sui iuris'.

The above figures refer to the state of the Church on November 30th, 1973.

THE PRESS

Acta Apostolicae Sedis: Vatican City; f. 1909; official publication issued by the Holy See, monthly, with special editions on special occasions. It is the record of Encyclicals and other Papal pronouncements, Acts of the Sacred Congregations and Offices, nominations, etc.; Dir. Mgr. FRANCO MARTINI.

Annuario Pontificio: Direction and Administration, The Secretariat of State, 00120 Vatican City; official year book.

L'Osservatore Romano: 00120 Vatican City; f. 1861; an authoritative daily newspaper; its special columns devoted to the affairs of the Holy See may be described as semi-official. Its news service covers religious matters, and in a limited measure general affairs. Weekly editions in French, Spanish, Portuguese, German and English. Editor RAIMONDO MANZINI.

Agenzia Internazionale Fides—A.I.F.: Palazzo di Propaganda Fide, Via di Propaganda 10, 00187 Rome; f. 1926; handles news of mission countries throughout the world; Dir. Mgr. J. IRIGOYEN; publ. Information (twice weekly; in Italian, French, German, English and Spanish); Documentation (monthly); Photographic Service (weekly).

PUBLISHERS

Libreria Editrice Vaticana: Vatican City; f. 1926; Dir. Rag. Gr. uff. CARLO SBARDELLA.

Tipografia Poliglotta Vaticana (Vatican Polyglot Press): Vatican City; Dir. Very Rev. ANGELO VEDANI.

RADIO

Radio Vatican: Vatican City and Santa Maria di Galeria; Dir.-Gen. ROBERTO P. TUCCI, S.J.; Dir. of Programmes JORGE P. BLAJOT, S.J.

Radio Vatican was founded in 1931 and situated within the Vatican City. A new transmitting centre, inaugurated by Pius XII on October 27th, 1957, has been added and is located at Santa Maria di Galeria, about twelve miles north-west of the Vatican. Under a special treaty between the Holy See and Italy the site of this new centre, which covers about 1,037 acres, enjoys the same extra-territorial privileges as are recognized by international law to the diplomatic headquarters of foreign States.

The station operates an all-day service, normally in thirty-one languages, but with facilities for broadcasting liturgical and other religious services in additional languages, including Latin.

The purpose of the Vatican Radio is to broadcast Papal teaching, to provide information on important events in the Catholic Church, to express the Catholic point of view on such problems as touch upon religion and morality, but above all to form a continuous link between the Holy See and Catholics throughout the world.

There is no television service.

UNIVERSITIES

Pontificia Università Gregoriana: Rome; 271 professors, 2,421 students.

Pontificia Università S. Tommaso d'Aquino: Rome; 659 students.

Pontificia Università Urbaniana: Rome.

Pontificio Ateneo Antoniano: Rome; 48 professors.

Pontificio Ateneo di S. Anselmo: Rome; 52 professors, 220 students.

Pontificia Università Lateranense: Rome; 219 professors, 1,850 students.

Pontificio Ateneo Salesiano: Rome; 100 professors, 580 students.

YUGOSLAVIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Yugoslavia has a long western coastline on the Adriatic Sea. It is bounded to the north by Italy, Austria and Hungary, by Romania and Bulgaria to the east, with Greece and Albania to the south. The climate is continental in the hilly interior and Mediterranean on the coast, with a steady rainfall throughout the year. The average summer temperature in Belgrade is 71°F (22°C), the winter average being 32°F (0°C). Yugoslavia is a multinational federation of six republics (Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Macedonia and Montenegro), and two autonomous regions (Kosovo and Vojvodina). Serbo-Croat is the most widely used language, but Macedonian and Slovene are spoken regionally. Religion is completely separate from the state; about two-fifths of the population belong to the Orthodox Church and one-third to the Roman Catholic Church. There are also a considerable number of Muslims, several other small Christian communities and some Jews. The national flag (proportions 2 by 1) consists of blue, white and red horizontal stripes, with a five-pointed, gold-edged red star in the centre. The capital is Belgrade.

Recent History

Following the struggle of the Partisans against the German occupation during the Second World War, the Monarchy was abolished and a Republic set up in 1945 under the leadership of Marshal Tito. Refusing to accept Soviet hegemony, Yugoslavia was expelled from the Cominform in 1948 after which she formed closer relations with the West. Following the death of Stalin, her relations with the Soviet Union were normalized but have subsequently been subjected to periodical strain, as at the time of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in August 1968, when Yugoslavia condemned Soviet actions and took active measures to strengthen her defences. Yugoslavia has for many years followed a policy of non-alignment in her foreign relations and holds a prominent place among the non-aligned countries. President Tito played a leading role at the fourth non-aligned summit conference held in Algiers in September 1973.

President Tito has consistently attempted to put real power into the hands of the working people, encouraging the devolution of power from the Federation to the Constituent Republics and the system of workers' control in industry. Many difficulties have been encountered in the implementation of these policies during a period of rapid economic development. In the spring of 1971 a confrontation grew up between Croatian nationalists and the Government which resulted in a purge of political and student leaders and intellectuals. From December 1971 a tougher line was adopted generally in opposition to tendencies described as liberal or technocratic in all spheres of political, economic and cultural life. In industry self-management was reinforced and many managers who had reduced workers' control to a formality were dismissed. Intellectuals and artists were strenuously encouraged to produce propaganda for orthodox Marxist views. The new constitution adopted in February 1974 aimed at involving the working class directly in the exercise of political power at all levels, reducing the role of bureaucrats and professional politicians. A leading part is envisaged for the League of Communists in the organization of the country.

Government

Yugoslavia is a Socialist Federal Republic comprising the Republics of Serbia, Croatia, Macedonia, Montenegro, Slovenia and Bosnia-Herzegovina, as well as the autonomous provinces of Kosovo and Vojvodina. A collective Presidency, consisting of one representative of each republic and autonomous province and the President of the League of Communists, exercises the rights and duties of Head of State. In May 1974 President Tito was proclaimed President "with no limitation as to the duration of the mandate" by the Federal Assembly. The Presidency, which is elected by the Federal Assembly, is assisted by a Federal Executive Council.

The Federal Assembly is composed of two chambers. The Federal Chamber consists of 30 delegates from each of the six republics and 20 delegates from each of the two provinces, while the Chamber of Republics and Provinces consists of 12 delegates from each Republican Assembly and 8 from each Provincial Assembly. A delegate is chosen by each "Basic Organization of Associated Labour", a grouping of people in their place of work. These delegates then choose further delegates for higher levels of government. Delegates are not to be managers, executives or career politicians, but ordinary working people.

Defence

The Republic has no defensive alliances. Military service is compulsory, but in 1972 was reduced from 18 to 15 months in the army and air force, and from two years to 18 months in the navy. In 1974 the total strength of the armed forces was 230,000, comprising an army of 190,000, navy 20,000 and air force 20,000. There are 19,000 Frontier Guards, and a territorial defence force of 1 million, with plans to increase it to 3 million. Full mobilization can bring the strength of the armed forces up to 1,250,000. The system of Total National Defence, in case of war, covers all citizens from 15 to 65 years of age. The 1974 budget set defence expenditure at 19,600 million dinars.

Economic Affairs

The rapid development of heavy and light industry since the end of the Second World War has reduced the proportion of the working population employed in agriculture from 80 per cent to less than 50 per cent. In recent years, agricultural production has been helped by the extension of mechanization. The main crops are wheat, maize, sugar beet and potatoes. There are many forests, orchards and vineyards, and abundant livestock. As a result of record harvests in 1966, 1967 and 1969, wheat imports have ceased and the country is self-sufficient in chemical fertilizers. In the industrial sector there has been a marked increase in the production of electric power, crude oil and its derivatives, non-ferrous metals, paper, food and other consumer goods.

In 1965 extensive reforms were introduced with the aim of consolidating the leading role of self-management and reorientating the economy away from central control and establishing a free market economy. Yugoslavia has since experienced a sharp rise in imports and a growth in the visible trade deficit, as well as a high rate of inflation. These problems have been countered by devaluation of the dinar in January and December 1971, and by a series of freezes on wages and prices. Although the visible trade balance in 1972 and 1973 remained adverse, invisible earnings from tourism and workers' remittances from abroad have an overall favourable balance in both years. Inflation has continued at a high level, and some estimates show a drop in the real standard of living in Yugoslavia in 1973. The Five-Year Plan (1971-75) envisages an annual growth rate of 7.5 per cent in the material product, but the first four years of this period saw a growth rate of only 5.5 to 6 per cent. This has been sufficient to provide employment for a rising population and an increasing number of workers returning from temporary employment abroad. The dinar was devalued by 7 per cent in October 1974 because of a growing trade deficit caused by the rising price of imports. In 1974 the Government issued a draft plan for a long-term development programme, which should come into operation in 1976. It emphasizes economic expansion and regional development.

Yugoslavia has participated in certain activities of CMEA (Council for Mutual Economic Assistance) since 1965, and became a full member of GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) in 1966. The EEC has become one of Yugoslavia's most important trading partners, accounting, in 1970, for 35 per cent of her total trade, and in March 1970 Yugoslavia became the first Communist country to conclude a trade agreement with the Community. A new agreement was signed in June 1973, and there is to be an exchange of views on working conditions for Yugoslavs in EEC countries.

Transport and Communications

Yugoslavia has about 10,332 km. of railways, of which 1,808 km. have been electrified. There are 91,289 km. of road, of which 24,214 km. are asphalt, concrete or similar roads, and 41,644 km. are macadamized; both figures are increasing as many new roads are currently under construction. The state airline, Jugoslovenski Aerotransport, provides internal and international services. Yugoslav shipping lines have a fleet of 283 vessels totalling 1,470,000 tons (1972). The principal Adriatic ports are Rijeka, Split, Dubrovnik and Koper. The Danube is the chief inland waterway, the chief ports being Novi Sad and Belgrade. The Yugoslav-Romanian Iron Gates power and navigation project on the Danube was inaugurated in September 1964.

Social Welfare

All employed persons and their families are covered by general social insurance schemes. This form of insurance is obligatory and is enforced by law. Insurance provides for health insurance, money and grants in kind in case of sickness, accidents at work or elsewhere, disablement, old-age and death. The social insurance funds are managed by the insured persons themselves organized in communal, republican and federal social insurance associations.

Insured persons are entitled to medical examinations, treatment in case of illness, maternity care, medicines, orthopaedic aids and artificial limbs and other medical services in health institutions and at their homes, including compensation in money during sick leave, rehabilitation and preventive care. The duration of this form of insurance is unlimited. The right to most benefits is acquired on the day of insurance, i.e. the day of employment.

There were in 1970 109,707 hospital beds, 3,532 general clinics and 2,862 dental clinics, as well as a wide network of medical guidance centres, children's clinics and anti-tubercular dispensaries. The number of doctors has increased from 14,354 in 1962 to 23,410 in 1970, but there is still a shortage in some rural areas.

The right to a retirement pension and its amount depend on the total of the contributions paid into the retirement insurance funds and on the period of time over which these payments were made. Insured persons are entitled to a full pension, which is equivalent to 85 per cent of their average monthly income during the last five years of employment, after a 40-year term of employment for men and 35-year term for women regardless of age. The right to a pension is also acquired upon reaching 60 years of age (55 for women) and a 20-year term of employment, or 65 years of age and a 15-year term of employment. Women and young children enjoy special protection under the health insurance scheme. Employed women are entitled to 105 days' paid leave before and after confinement. Confinements in hospital and maternity care are free of charge, whether the woman is employed or not. Women are entitled to shorter working hours until their child is 8 months old.

There is workers' self-management in Yugoslavia. A 42-hour week is guaranteed by the Constitution. All workers are entitled to annual leave which varies from 14 to 30 days, depending on the nature of their work.

Yugoslavia has a Health Convention with Great Britain by which nationals of one country may obtain free medical treatment in the other country.

Education

The entire educational system is organized at republican and local authority level. Elementary education is free and compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 15, when Yugoslav children attend the "eight-year school". Various types of secondary education are available to all who are able to qualify, but it is the vocational and technical schools which are most popular and attract the bulk of the country's youth. Alternatively, a child may attend a general secondary school (gymnasium) where he follows a four-year course which will take him up to university entrance. At the secondary level there are also a number of art schools, apprentice schools and teacher-training schools, which train teachers for the elementary schools over a period of 5 years. Those who have attended the technical schools may pursue their education further at one of the two-year post-secondary schools, which were created in response to the needs of industry and the social services for people trained above the secondary level. Higher education is run on a very open system and is available to all who can qualify, irrespective of their school background. Apart from the nine universities and the post-secondary schools, there are also a number of schools of higher learning for teachers who have completed the courses at training schools. There are special facilities for adult education at evening schools, and in part-time studies.

Tourism

Tourist attractions include the mountains, the great lakes of Scutari, Prespa and Ohrid in the south, the Federal capital of Belgrade and the other republican capitals, and, most particularly, the Adriatic resorts, where considerable hotel development has taken place in recent years.

The expansion of the tourist industry in Yugoslavia has been remarkable in recent years, and tourism is now an important source of foreign currency. In 1973, 6,150,000 foreign tourists visited the country. The UN projects for the development of the Southern and Northern Adriatic plan a considerable increase in hotel accommodation supported by new non-seasonal openings for employment.

THE CONSTITUTION

(1974)

The Constitution of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, (SFRY), adopted February 21st, 1974, is the fifth constitutional act promulgated in the new Yugoslavia. The first constitutional act establishing Yugoslavia as a federated state was adopted in the form of decisions taken by the Second Session of the Anti-Fascist Council of the National Liberation of Yugoslavia of November 29th, 1943. The first Constitution, promulgated in 1946, introduced the system of People's Democracy and state ownership of the basic means of production. The constitutional law adopted in 1953 brought an essential change in the statist concept of the organization of the state and society, and inaugurated the system of self-management in the economy, as well as in other spheres of the life of society. The Constitution enacted in 1963 raised the right of the working people to self-management to the level of a constitutional norm. A total of 42 amendments were made to that Constitution, in 1967, 1968 and 1971, consolidating the leading role of the working class in society and establishing new relations between the Federation and the constituent republics and provinces on the basis of full equality. These amendments, and particularly those of 1971, represented an introduction to the reform of the constitution which was completed with the promulgation of the new Constitution of the SFRY.

INTRODUCTION

The introductory section of the Yugoslav Constitution contains ten chapters dealing with basic principles. The first chapter states:

"The peoples of Yugoslavia, taking as their point of departure the right of every nation to self-determination, including the right of secession; on the basis of their will freely expressed in the common struggle in the National Liberation War and socialist revolution; and in line with their historical aspirations, aware that the further consolidation of their fraternity and unity is in the common interest, have, together with the nationalities with whom they live side by side, united into a federal republic of free and equal peoples and nationalities and created a socialist federal community of working people—the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, in which, in the interest of each nation and nationality individually and collectively, they are implementing and assuring:

- socialist social relationships based on self-management by the working people and the protection of the socialist system of self-management;
- national freedom and independence;
- the fraternity and unity of the nations and nationalities;
- the integral interests of the working class and the solidarity of the workers and all working people;
- the possibility and freedom for the comprehensive development of the human personality and for rapprochement among men, nations and nationalities, in line with their interests and aspirations along the road of creating a richer culture and civilization for the socialist society;
- the unification and coordination of efforts to develop the material foundations of socialist society and prosperity for the people;
- the system of socio-economic relationships and the integral foundations of the political system for the purpose of pursuing the joint interests and assuring the equality of the nations and nationalities, and the working people; the integration of their own aspirations with the progressive aspirations of mankind.

The working people, the nations and nationalities exercise their sovereign rights in the socialist republics and in the socialist autonomous provinces in line with their constitutional rights, and in the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia where this is established by the Constitution of the SFRY as being in the common interest.

The working people, the nations and nationalities make their decisions at federal level in line with the principles of agreement between the republics and autonomous provinces; solidarity and mutuality; equitable participation by the republics and autonomous provinces in federal organs in accordance with this Constitution; and the responsibility of the republics and autonomous provinces for their own development and for the development of the socialist community as a whole".

It is stated in the second chapter that the inviolable foundation for the position and role of man is social ownership of the means of production; the emancipation of labour and the transcendence of historically conditioned socio-economic inequalities and dependence of people in labour; the right to self-management; the right of the working man to enjoy the fruits of his labour and the material progress of the social community; the economic, social and personal security of man; democratic political relationships, etc. The third chapter deals with social ownership, as a reflection of socialist socio-economic relationships among people; the fourth chapter with the working class and working people as the bearers of power and management of social affairs; the fifth chapter with the liberties, rights, duties and responsibilities of individuals and citizens; the sixth chapter with the determination of the working people and citizens, the nations and nationalities of Yugoslavia consistently to pursue a policy of peace and against war and aggressive pressures of any kind whatsoever; the seventh chapter with the international position and foreign policy of Yugoslavia inspired by peaceful coexistence and the principles of non-alignment; the eighth chapter with the League of Communists of Yugoslavia which, by its guiding ideological and political activity in conditions of socialist democracy and social self-management, represents the basic moving force and vehicle of political activity, and also with the role and activities of other socio-political organizations; the ninth chapter with the socio-economic and political system and the tenth chapter with the basic principles as a "component part of the Constitution and the basis and direction for interpreting the Constitution and the laws and for the activity of one and all."

PARTS I-II

Part one, with nine articles, is devoted to the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia as a "federal state, a state community of voluntarily united peoples and their socialist republics and the socialist autonomous republics of Kosovo and Vojvodina which are part of the Socialist Republic of Serbia, based on the government and self-management of the working class and all working people and on the socialist, self-management, democratic community of working people and citizens and equal nations and nationalities."

Part two is devoted to the social order. Chapter I consists of Articles 10 to 87 and deals with the socio-economic position of man in associated labour, the integration of labour and the means of social reproduction, the self-managed communities of interest, social planning, information systems, independent personal labour, means owned by citizens, legal property relations, goods of general interest and the protection of the human environment. Chapter II deals with the foundations of the socio-economic system and contains Articles 88 to 152 which regulate the position of the working people in the socio-political system, self-management in the organizations of associated labour, self-management in the self-managed communities of interest, self-management in the local communities, the position of the commune as a self-managed and basic socio-political community founded on the power and self-management of the working class and all working people, self-management agreements and social compacts, the protection by society of the rights of self-management and social property, the foundations of the assembly system which rests on the principle of delegates as a new form of direct participation by the working people in the management of society's affairs from the local communities to the federation. Chapter III from Articles 153 to 203 deals with the liberties, rights, duties and responsibilities of man and citizen, pursued "in mutual solidarity and through the fulfilment of the duties and discharge of responsibilities of each toward all and all toward each". Chapter IV from Articles 204 to 216 is dedicated to constitutionality and legality. Constitutionality and the rule of law is the concern of the courts, self-managed judicial organs, organs of the socio-political communities, organizations of associated labour and other self-managed organizations and communities and the bearers of self-management, public and other social functions. Chapter V from Articles 217 to 236 deals with the judiciary and public prosecutor and Chapter VI from Articles 237 to 243 with national defence. Article 237 states: "It is the inviolable and inalienable right and duty of the nations and nationalities of Yugoslavia, of the working people and citizens, to protect and defend the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and socio-political system of the SFRY, the latter having been established by the Constitution of the SFRY". Article 238 states that "no one has the right to recognize or sign capitulation, or to accept or recognize the occupation of the SFRY or any of its parts". The armed forces of the SFRY are an integral entity and consist of the Yugoslav People's Army, as the joint armed force of all the nations and nationalities and all working people and citizens; and of the territorial defence forces as the broadest form of organized armed resistance by the people.

PART III

Part three, from Articles 244 to 281, deals with relationships at federal level. "In the SFRY, the nations and nationalities and the working people and citizens exercise and assure: sovereignty, equality and national freedom, independence, territorial integrity, security and social self-defence, the defence of the country and the international position and relations of the country with other states and inter-state organizations, the system of socialist self-management of socio-economic relationships, the integral foundations of the political system, the fundamental democratic freedoms and rights of men and citizens, solidarity and the social security of the working people and citizens and the integral market, and coordinate their joint economic and social development and other of their common interests". These common interests are pursued through the organs and organizations of the federation with the equitable participation and responsibility of the republics and autonomous provinces; through direct co-operation and agreement between the republics, autonomous provinces, communes and other socio-political communities, by self-management agreement, social compact and integration of organizations of associated labour and other organizations and self-managed communities of interest; through the activities of socio-political and other organizations and through free and multifaceted activities by the citizens.

PARTS IV-VI

Part four, dealing with the rights and duties, and the organization, of the federation, comprises Articles 282 to 397. Chapter 1 deals with the rights and duties of the Federal Assembly as exercised by the Federal Chamber and the Chambers of Republics and Provinces; Chapter 2 with the Presidency of the SFRY which "represents the SFRY at home and abroad and discharges other rights and duties as established by the Constitution"; Chapter 3 with the President of the Republic and contains the express formulation that "in view of the historic role of Josip Broz Tito in the National Liberation War and socialist revolution, in the creation and development of the SFRY, in the advancement of the Yugoslav socialist society of self-management, in the achievement of fraternity and unity among the nations and nationalities of Yugoslavia, in the consolidation of the country's independence and its position in international relations, in the struggle for peace in the world, and in line with the expressed will of the working people and citizens, nations and nationalities of Yugoslavia—the SFRY Assembly may, on the proposal of the Assemblies of the Republics and Autonomous Provinces, elect Josip Broz Tito President of the Republic for an unlimited term of office"; Chapter 4 with the Federal Executive Council; Chapter 5 with the federal administrative organs; Chapter 6 with federal judicial organs, and Chapter 7 with the Constitutional Court of Yugoslavia.

Part five, from Articles 398 to 403, deals with the procedure of amending the Constitution; and Part six, Articles 404 to 406, with transitional and terminal provisions.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The structure of the judicial system in Yugoslavia is set out in the Constitution of 1963 which states that judicial functions are to be discharged within a uniform system and that the jurisdiction of the courts shall be established and altered only by law. In general, court proceedings are conducted in public (exceptionally the public may be excluded to preserve professional secrets, public order or morals) in the national language of the region in which the court is situated. Citizens who do not know the language in which the proceedings are being conducted may use their own language.

The judicial system comprises courts of general jurisdiction, i.e. communal courts, county courts, republican supreme courts, and supreme courts of autonomous regions (which decide on appeals against the decisions of county courts), the Supreme Court, and courts of specialized jurisdiction established to hear definite cases. Economic cases and other legal matters of concern to the economy are heard by economic courts with the Supreme Economic Court at the head, and criminal offences committed by military persons or offences in any way connected with service in the army are heard by military courts with the Supreme Military Court at the head. Courts of arbitration, arbitration commissions, conciliation councils and other institutions may be set up to settle disputes between citizens or organizations.

Judges are elected or dismissed by the Assembly of the particular Republic and lay judges are elected or dismissed by the assembly of the particular district or town.

The powers of the Constitutional Court of Yugoslavia and the Supreme Court are set out in the Constitution.

President: BLAŽO JOVANOVIĆ.

Number of members: 13.

Supreme Court of Yugoslavia. This is the highest organ of justice in Yugoslavia. It decides on appeals against decisions of supreme courts of the Republics and supreme courts of autonomous regions, and gives guidance on the application of federal laws. Judges are elected or dismissed by the Federal Chamber of the Federal Assembly of S.F.R.Y.

President of the Supreme Court of Yugoslavia: ILIJA DOŠEN.

Number of members: 24.

Office of the Public Prosecutor. The Federal Public Prosecutor is elected or dismissed by the Federal Assembly. Public prosecutors of the various republics are nominated by the Federal Public Prosecutor with the approval of the Executive Council of the particular Republic. All other public prosecutors are appointed by the public prosecutor of the Republic.

Federal Public Prosecutor: DR. PANTA MARINA.

Office of Public Attorney. Represents proprietary interests of the federation, republics, districts and communities. There is a Federal Office, and in addition there are six republican offices, two offices in the autonomous regions, five town offices and 228 communal offices.

Federal Attorney-General: ANDRIJA PEJOVIĆ.

RELIGION

The principle of the complete separation of Church and State was adopted after the events of 1945 and proclaimed in the Constitution of 1946. The principle was retained in the Constitution promulgated in 1963, which also states that religious confession shall in no way be restricted and makes other provisions for the welfare of religious bodies. In this way, the Republic safeguards the freedom of faith and of religious assembly, provided the State laws are respected, and ensures full equality for each religious community, as well as the freedom of its activity.

The Act on the Legal Status of Religious Communities, passed in May 1953, elaborated further the principles set out in the Constitution and further defined the rights of both the religious communities and the state organs.

THE PRESS

The Yugoslav Press has always been the most liberal of any Communist country, but since 1956 it has enjoyed an organizational freedom that has enabled it to establish a position of independence and individuality. In that year, ownership of Yugoslav newspapers was transferred to societies controlled by their employees, who share in the profits. The Constitution now guarantees newspaper publishers the right to exercise self-management, which includes the appointment of directors, editors and a board comprising a large number of people from public and political life, as well as representatives of the workers. Legal provisions also impose certain obligations on the publisher, but the main effect of this system is that the Press is free from financial and administrative control by the State, and that keen competition has developed between newspapers with the need to attract more readers becoming more apparent. To do this, Yugoslav newspapers employ many of the techniques familiar to the Western Press, and a bright layout and content are important. They differ further from their East European counterparts in their independent and critical approach to political and social problems and organizations. Their freedom is restricted mainly by their orientation towards the promotion of the objectives of a socialist society based on self-management.

Censorship is clearly not imposed upon the Press in Yugoslavia; editors are well aware of their responsibilities and of the flexibility of the Press Law, which has been in force since 1960. This lays down the usual restrictions regarding the publication of false and distorted news, confidential information, and items harmful to foreign relations, to the government or to representatives of other countries. In 1957, Tito asserted, "We are not against the free expression of ideas, but we want to build Socialism. Everything must be subordinated to this end". A year later he went further: "During our country's revolutionary period of transition, the Press cannot be considered as an independent and autonomous factor in our society, since all the actions of society as a whole must converge towards one aim: the construction of Socialism."

There are now 24 dailies published in Yugoslavia, printed in Serbian (Cyrillic alphabet), Croatian (Latin), Slovene, Macedonian, Hungarian, Italian and Albanian. The most influential are those published in Belgrade and the capitals of the constituent republics. Despite a drastic decline in circulation (from 700,000 in the 1950s to about 30,000 in 1972), Borba, the organ of the Socialist Alliance, retains a significant amount of influence. The weekly Komunist, official organ of the League of Communists, has recently experienced a considerable growth in circulation and influence. Other important newspapers include Politika (Belgrade), Vijesnik (Zagreb), Delo (Ljubljana), Oslobodjenje (Sarajevo), Nova Makedonija (Skopje) and Pobjeda (Titograd). Evening papers have also increased greatly in popularity, notably Večernje novosti (Belgrade), with a circulation of 400,000.

The Yugoslav news agency, Tanjug, has had the monopoly of news distribution in Yugoslavia since 1958. It has reciprocal arrangements with several foreign news agencies, including Tass, Reuters, AFP and UPI.

FINANCE

(brs. = branches; cap. = capital; p.u. = paid up; dep. = deposits; m. = million; res. = reserve.)

BANKING

The Yugoslav credit and banking system is based on the provisions of the Constitution, of the Law on Banks and Credit Operations (1965), and of the Law on the National Bank of Yugoslavia (1965), and other legislation relating to money and credit. The National Bank is the central bank of Yugoslavia and its powers and obligations are determined by law. Its functions include the issue of money, provision of credit to banks and government authorities, control of credits and bank activities, recommendation of legislation relating to the foreign exchange system and its implementation, management of gold and foreign exchange reserves, control of foreign exchange operations and other special activities.

There are three categories of business banks in Yugoslavia: investment banks, commercial banks and mixed (investment-cum-commercial) banks. There are no independent savings banks, although these are permitted by the law.

Payments operations, with the exception of external payments (which are handled by the National Bank), are performed by the Social Accounting Service, which keeps the accounts of all working organizations and carries out a number of other duties. It has 383 operating units. Since 1967 certain business banks have been permitted to carry on various kinds of foreign exchange operations. In order to do this they must fulfil certain conditions, according to which, they are then granted either the "great charter"—authorizing them to perform payments transactions with foreign countries and obtain credits from abroad—or the "small charter", permitting them to operate residents' foreign exchange accounts only. At the beginning of 1971, 19 banks held the "great charter", and 36 were in possession of the "small charter".

RADIO AND TELEVISION

Broadcasting in Italy is a state monopoly. In July 1974 the constitutional court declared this monopoly illegal in its present form, which contains insufficient guarantees for freedom of information. Following the court decision the Government drew up a plan of reform designed to end the control of broadcast information by the Christian Democrat Party. Due to the Government crisis, implementation of the reforms was postponed, but restrictions on local private cable-television services and on the relaying of foreign television programmes were relaxed.

Radiotelevisione Italiana (RAI-TV): Rome, Viale Mazzini 14; a joint stock company, responsible to the Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs, to which are ceded all radio and television rights; a Committee, appointed by the Ministry, is responsible for the standard of the programmes, and a Commission, chosen from among all parliamentary groups, safeguards the political independence and objectivity of all broadcast information; Chair. U. DELLA FAVE; Man. Dir. L. PAOLICCHI; Television Dirs. F. FABIANI (Cultural and Education), A. ROMANÒ (Entertainment), P. E. GENNARINI (News); Radio Dir. G. ANTONELLI.

Società Italiana Pubblicità Per Azioni (SIPRA): Turin; this company has the monopoly of all advertising on RAI-TV radio and television programmes.

CASSA PER IL MEZZOGIORNO

SOUTHERN ITALY DEVELOPMENT FUND

Piazzale Kennedy 20, Eur, Rome

President: Prof. GABRIELE PESCATORE.

The Fund was set up in 1950 to develop the Southern areas of the country. Until June 1965 the disposable resources of the Fund were 2,500,000 million lire. The Fund was extended in June 1965 until 1980, with the task of implementing 5-year plans co-ordinated with the national economic plan. During the 1965-70 period, the Fund was endowed with 2,800,000 million lire. For the period 1971-75 a further appropriation of 8,350,000 million lire is authorized. The following are projects supervised by the Fund, completed by the end of 1973:

Land Reclamation and Irrigation: More than 7,500 km. of river channel control, embankments and drains have been completed. Over 1,000,000 hectares of land have been drained or protected from floods, and 14,298 km. of irrigation canals and networks laid, 7,257 km. of new agricultural roads constructed and 3,016 km. improved.

Aqueducts: The Fund has tackled the drinking water supply problem by laying 18,350 km. of mains and constructing 3,197 water towers with a capacity of about 2,546,508 cubic metres.

Transport and Communications: 3,509 km. of new trunk roads have been built and 16,355 km. improved; also the construction of 1,633 km. of motor highways is nearing completion. The tracks of numerous railway lines have been doubled. Port improvements have been approved with an expenditure of 122,950 million lire. Construction is nearing completion. For the improvement of the airport system in the south, projects totaling 18.3 billion lire have been approved. An intercontinental airport is being completed in Calabria.

Hospitals: 56 hospitals have been completed and 7 are under construction with an approved expenditure of 75,878 million lire, in centres of the Southern Regions.

Industry: Numerous projects have been approved for setting up industrial estates in selected areas, the Fund's contributions towards this total being 409,157 million lire. In the private sector the Fund has operated a two-fold industrialization project: (a) credit is extended through three specialized institutes in the South (ISVEIMER for Southern Italy, IRFIS for Sicily, and CIS for Sardinia); 8,224 loans of 3,108,866 million lire were approved; also, loans for a total amount of 3,586,911 million lire have been granted by other industrial credit banks. (b) Straight grants to enterprises of about 769,681 million lire. 124,441 grants valued at 56,697 million lire have been granted to the handicraft industries. Employment in southern manufacturing industries should increase to 865,000 workers by 1978.

Private Land Improvement: By the end of 1973 the Fund had approved the construction of: 11,990 km. of farm roads; 64,620 wells, tanks and reservoirs; 2,426 km. of transmission lines; 118 cheese factories; 507 olive oil mills; 606 wine factories. In addition, about 246,000 hectares have been prepared for farming and 429,000 hectares have been irrigated. A large portion of coastal population has been supported with 18,462 contributions totalling 76,434 million lire for the fishing industry.

Education: The Fund has completed 147 schools for industrial training and 21 agricultural schools with 120 branches have been opened. 921 kindergartens have been completed to a value of over 41,000 million lire. 7,711 loans for school buildings to a value of 9,592 million lire have been granted.

TRANSPORT

ATOMIC ENERGY

Comitato Nazionale per l'Energia Nucleare—CNEN (National Committee for Nuclear Energy): 00198 Rome, Via Regina Margherita 125; f. 1960; Pres. Gen. SILVIO GAVA; Vice-Pres. Prof. CARLO SALVETTI; publ. Notiziario (monthly).

The Committee supervises pure and applied research, and must also maintain technical control over industrial nuclear power plants. It promotes and encourages the development of industrial applications of nuclear energy, and co-operates internationally.

CNEN, which has a staff of about 3,500, owns the research centres of Frascati, Casaccia, Saluggia, Trisaia and Bologna. It prospects for uranium, undertakes research into the production of nuclear fuels and materials, constructs prototype power reactors, applies nuclear energy to agriculture and medicine, and trains personnel. Research is being carried out on fast breeder reactors and on the CIRENE project, a heavy water moderated reactor. Other projects include the ROVI 200 MW reactor for desalination, an 18,000-ton nuclear ship and two reprocessing plants at Trisaia.

CNEN advises the Foreign Ministry on matters related to the Italian partnership in the International Atomic Energy Agency, the European Nuclear Energy Agency and EURATOM.

Istituto Nazionale di Fisica Nucleare—INFN (National Institute of Nuclear Physics): Casella Postale 70, 00044 Frascati, Rome; f. 1951; promotes, co-ordinates and performs research in the field of fundamental nuclear physics; organized according to a decentralized structure, consisting of a Central Administration (Frascati), 14 Sections, 1 Group, 2 National Laboratories (Frascati and Legnaro) and a National Centre for Photogram Analysis (CNAF Bologna); the Sections are located at the Institutes of Physics of the Universities of Turin, Milan, Padua, Genoa, Trieste, Bologna, Pisa, Florence, Rome, Naples, Bari, Catania, Messina and at the Istituto Sanità di Rome; the Group is located at the Politecnico di Milan; Pres. Prof. CLAUDIO VILLI.

AGIP Nucleare S.p.A.: P.O.B. 1629, Milan; f. 1968; develops processes concerning nuclear fuel cycles and nuclear reactors, and operates on an industrial scale in the field of nuclear fuel cycles.

Associazione Nazionale di Ingegneria Nucleare (ANDIN): Piazza Sallustiana 24, Rome; studies problems in the engineering construction of nuclear installations; Pres. Prof. NOVERINO FALETTI.

Comitato Permanente per i Problemi dell'Impiego Pacifico dell'Energia Nucleare e per i Rapporti con EURATOM (Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy): Piazza Venezia 11, Rome; working groups which elaborate the Italian industrial point of view on nuclear problems which may arise in Italy or Europe; Pres. VITTORIO DE BIASI.

National Laboratory at Frascati: Casella Postale 70, Frascati, Rome; equipped with 1,100-MeV electron synchrotron, 450-MeV electron and positron linear accelerator and  $2 \times 1500$  MeV electron and positron storage ring ("Adone"); Dir. Prof. GIORGIO BELETTINI.

There are eleven other smaller accelerators elsewhere in Italy.

Casaccia Centre for Nuclear Studies: C.P. 2400, 00100 Rome, S. Maria di Galeria; Director: Prof. Ing. GIANCARLO SCHILEO.

The Centre, which is particularly concerned with nuclear applied research, is equipped with the following reactors:

A Triga Mark II reactor, whose original power was of 100 kW, has been modified for operation at 1 MW, and has operated at this power since 1967. Fuelled by 20 per cent enriched uranium, it is used for research and training.

The Rana reactor, a swimming-pool (graphite-reflected and natural/water cooled) reactor with an operating power of 10 kW, is particularly suited to neutron physics measurements.

The Rospo reactor, originally an organic reactor, is used, after modifications, as a light water reactor for the development of the core of the nuclear ship E. Fermi.

The Ritmo reactor, a swimming-pool, zero power experimental reactor, used within the framework of the neutron physics of water systems.

The Tapiro reactor, a U-235 fast neutron reactor reached maximum thermal power (5 kW) in December 1971. It is used for experimental purposes within the framework of the Italian fast-reactors programme.

The Centre also develops biological research—for which laboratories, a gamma-field and a gamma facility for high-dose irradiation of biological materials have been installed—concerned with animal radiobiology studies, health physics, applications of nuclear energy to agriculture.

At Casaccia there are also electronic laboratories planning the electronic instrumentation for experiments at the CNEN research centre and the Frascati National Laboratory, geominig analysis laboratories, chemistry and metallurgical facilities, hot cells for work on "hot" materials, and a waste disposal laboratory and plants.

Centro Informazioni Studi Esperienze (CISE) (Information, Study and Experimental Centre): Mailing address: Casella Postale 3986, 20100 Milan; location: Via Redecio 12, Segrate, Milan; f. 1946; Pres. Prof. ARNALDO M. ANGELINI; Man. Dir. Prof. CORRADO GENESIO; Gen. Man. Prof. ENRICO CERRAI; publ. Energia Nucleare (monthly). Sponsored by ENEL (Ente Nazionale per l'Energia Elettrica); devoted to research and development in physics, electronics, chemistry, engineering and technology.

Centro di Studi Nucleari "Enrico Fermi" (CESNEF) (Enrico Fermi Centre for Nuclear Studies): Polytechnic School, Via Ponzio 34/3, 20133 Milan; f. 1957; Dir. Prof. GIUSEPPE CAGLIOTI.

Equipped with a 50 kW research reactor.

Centro Siciliano di Fisica Nucleare e di Struttura della Materia (CSFN & SM) (Sicilian Centre of Nuclear Physics and Structure of Matter): 57 Corso Italia, 95129 Catania; f. 1955; equipped for experiments on nuclear spectroscopy, photonuclear reactions, nuclear fission and theoretical nuclear physics, positron annihilation, ion implantation and structure of matter; Pres. Prof. A. RUBBINO.

Ente Nazionale per l'Energia Elettrica (ENEL): Rome, Via G.B. Martini (Piazza Verdi); The Italian State Power Agency has nuclear stations in operation in the following areas:

Latina: a 210 MWe (gas-graphite) plant.

Garigliano: a 160 MWe (BWR) plant.

Trino Vercellese: a 272 MWe (PWR) plant.

LABEN: Via Bassini 15, 20133 Milan; a division of Montedel, S.p.A.; multi-channel analysers for nuclear spectrometry; analogue-to-digital converters and auxiliary units for use with multi-channel analysers; scalars, programmers, nuclear counting systems; industrial digital instrumentation; PCM telemetry for satellites; spaceborne instrumentation for space research; Dir. Dr. MARCO GEREVINI.

SNAM PROGETTI S.p.A.: P.O.B. 4169, S. Donato Milanese, Milan; f. 1956; designs chemical, petrochemical and nuclear plants, acts as contractor for drilling operations and conducts research in the chemical and petrochemical fields.

Società Ricerche Biomediche (SORIN): 13040 Saluggia, Vercelli; f. 1956; Dir. Prof. UMBERTO ROSA.

Production and development of radio-isotopes, labelled compounds, and radio-immunoassay kits; production and development in bio-engineering (pace-makers and devices for artificial kidneys).

LIECHTENSTEIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Liechtenstein is a principality on the upper Rhine between the Austrian province of Vorarlberg and the Swiss cantons of St. Gallen and Graubünden. It measures 24 km. from north to south and 9 km. from east to west. There is a narrow strip along the Rhine and a larger upland area to the east. The climate is mild. The official language is German, of which a dialect—Alemannish—is spoken. The population is predominantly Roman Catholic. The national flag (proportions five by three) consists of a royal blue and a red stripe horizontally divided, with a princely crown in the royal blue part. The capital is Vaduz.

Recent History

Liechtenstein has been an independent state since 1719, except while under Napoleon's domination. Switzerland took over the diplomatic representation for the Principality from Austria in 1919. A Postal Union with Switzerland was agreed upon in 1921 and in 1923 a treaty was made with Switzerland whereby Liechtenstein was incorporated in the Swiss Customs Union. Franz Josef II succeeded as ruling prince in 1938. Liechtenstein has not joined the United Nations, but she became a party to the International Court of Justice in December 1949. Liechtenstein is also a member of UPU, ITU, IAEA and UNCTAD.

After 42 years as dominant party in the Government, the Progressive Citizens' Party was ousted by the Fatherland Union in the General Elections of February 1970, but it regained its majority four years later. However, the two parties have formed a coalition government since the Second World War and this arrangement has been continued. The voting age was lowered to 20 in 1969, but a proposal to give women the vote, though approved by Parliament, was rejected by a small margin in a referendum in February 1971. In February 1973 another referendum was held on the proposal to give women the vote, which was this time rejected by a substantial majority.

Government

The constitution of the hereditary Principality provides for a unicameral parliament (Landtag), composed of 15 members, 9 from the Upper Country and 6 from the Lower Country, who are elected for four years on a system of proportional representation. The Government consists of the Chief of Government, the Deputy Chief of Government and three Councillors (elected for four years). Liechtenstein is united in a Customs Union with Switzerland, which also represents the principality abroad.

Defence

Although Liechtensteiners under the age of 60 are liable to military service in an emergency, there has been no standing army since 1868 and there is only a small police force of thirty-three men.

Economic Affairs

Industry has developed well recently and is now a very important part of the economy, the metal industry being by far the most prominent sector, employing 3,705 workers in 1970. The most important products are high frequency installations, boilers for central heating, hardware, small machinery, canned goods, furniture and upholstery, chemical and pharmaceutical goods, vacuum installations, optical and measuring instruments, toys, oil tanks, paints and varnishings and leather goods. Artificial teeth are made in Schaan and are now exported to 80 countries. The pottery and ceramic industry in Nendeln is the oldest in the Principality and art pottery is also produced in Schaan. The textile industry, mainly cotton, is based in Triesen and Vaduz. The building and hotel trades are also highly developed. There is no unemployment in Liechtenstein. One-third of the population are resident foreigners, many of whom provide the labour for industry. Only 6 per cent of the labour force is employed in agriculture, which is of relatively little importance.

With a very limited home market, exports have risen at a high rate; in 1950 they amounted to only 15 million Swiss francs, in 1960 to 83 million, and by 1970 they had reached 334 million. More than one third of the exports go to Switzerland, most of the rest going to the other EFTA members and to the EEC countries. Much foreign currency also comes in from tourists and from the sale of the finely engraved stamps to philatelists all over the world.

Between twenty and thirty thousand companies are registered in Liechtenstein, where they enjoy the advantages of paying no taxes on income, and only a one-thousandth property tax on assets, the minimum amount being about £80 a year. The maximum rate of income tax for Liechtensteiners is 24 per cent.

Transport and Communication

Good roads connect all the towns and villages and most transport is by road. A tunnel connecting the Rhine and Samina valleys was opened in 1947. There are 18.5 km. of railway track.

Social Welfare

Social welfare is organized on lines similar to Switzerland.

Education

Kindergarten schools have recently been introduced in Liechtenstein. The basic instruction is given at a Volkschule and after six years a pupil may stay at this school for a further two years or transfer to a Realschule for three years. Apart from the state schools there are also three private schools. There is no university in the Principality.

Tourism

Liechtenstein has a perfect Alpine setting in the Upper Rhine area. The princely residence, Schloss Vaduz, stands on a crag overlooking the city. There is a celebrated postal museum, a National Museum and the Prince's Art Gallery at Vaduz.

Visa requirements are the same as for Switzerland.

Public Holidays

1975: May 8th (Ascension), May 19th (Whit Monday), May 29th (Corpus Christi), August 15th (Feast of the Assumption), November 1st (All Saints' Day), December 25th (Christmas), December 26th (St. Stephen's Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), February 2nd (Candlemas), March 19th (St. Joseph's Day), March 25th (Lady Day), April 16th (Good Friday), April 19th (Easter Monday).

THE CONSTITUTION

By the Constitution of October 5th, 1921, the monarchy is hereditary in the male line. The reigning Prince exercises the legislative right jointly with a Diet of fifteen members elected for four years by general and secret ballot. All male citizens of over 20 years have been eligible to vote since the voting age was lowered by a year in October 1969. The voters participate directly in the legislation by means of the initiative and the referendum.

In the case of adjournment or dissolution, the Diet is replaced by a National Committee consisting of the President of the Diet and four Deputies. The members of the Government are nominated by the Prince on the proposition of the Diet for four years.

By a Treaty made with Switzerland in 1923 Liechtenstein is incorporated in Swiss Customs territory, and uses Swiss currency, customs and postal administration.

THE GOVERNMENT

HEAD OF THE STATE

Prince FRANZ JOSEF II, Prince of Liechtenstein, Duke of Troppau and of Jägerndorf, Count of Rietberg, succeeded July 21st, 1938.

GOVERNMENT

Chief of Government: Dr. WALTER KIEBER.

Vice-Chief of Government: HANS BRUNHART.

Members: Dr. GEORG MALIN, HANS GASSNER, Dr. WALTER OEHRY.

PARLIAMENT

President of the Diet: Dr. K. H. RITTER.

Vice-President of the Diet: Dr. h.c. A. FRICK.

GENERAL ELECTION

(February 1974)

PARTY	VOTES	SEATS
Progressive Citizens' Party . . . . .	17,332	8
Fatherland Union . . . . .	16,356	7
Christian Social Party . . . . .	992	0

POLITICAL PARTIES

Vaterländische Union (Fatherland Union): Vaduz; Chair. Dr. OTTO HASLER; Sec. WERNER NIGG; 7 seats in Diet.

Fortschrittliche Bürgerpartei (Progressive Citizens' Party): Lindenplatz 115, 9494 Schaan; Chair. Dr. PETER MARXER; Sec. CARL WALSER; 8 seats in Diet.

Christlich Soziale Partei (Christian Social Party): 9490 Vaduz; f. 1962; Chair. RUPERT WALSER.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION

Liechtenstein's foreign interests are represented by Swiss Embassies and Consulates abroad and through the Swiss Head of Foreign Affairs in Berne. Austria is the only country with full-time consular staff in Vaduz, although 25 consular representatives are accredited to Liechtenstein.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

COURTS

1. Civil:

(1) County Court (Landgericht); Court of First Instance; one presiding judge.

(2) Superior Court (Obergericht); Court of Second Instance; bench of five judges.

- (3) Supreme Court (Oberster Gerichtshof); Court of Third Instance; bench of five judges.

II. Criminal:

- (1) (a) Petty Sessions (Landgericht); for summary offences.
 (b) Court of Assizes (Schöffengericht-Vergehen); for minor misdemeanours; bench of five judges.
 (c) Criminal Court (Kriminalgericht); bench of five judges.
 (2) Superior Court (Obergericht); Court of Second Instance; bench of five judges.
 (3) Supreme Court (Oberster Gerichtshof); Court of Third Instance; bench of five judges.

III. Administrative:

- (1) Appeal against decrees and decisions of the Government may be made to the Administrative Court of Appeal (five members).
 (2) A State Court of five members exists for the protection of Public Law.

PRESIDING JUDGES

County Court: Dr. HERMANN RISCH (civil law); Dr. ARNOLD OEHRY (criminal law).

Court of Assizes: Dr. ARNOLD OEHRY.

Criminal Court: Dr. ARMIN WECHNER.

Superior Court: Dr. WALTER HILDEBRAND.

Supreme Court: Dr. HUGO DWORAK.

LUXEMBOURG

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg lies south-east of Belgium between France and Germany. The climate is temperate. French is the official language and is generally used for administrative purposes, while German is also used as a written language. The spoken language is Letzeburgish, a German-Moselle-Frankish dialect. Ninety-seven per cent of the population are Roman Catholic and just over 1 per cent Protestant. The national flag (proportions five by three) consists of three horizontal stripes—red, white and light blue. The capital is Luxembourg.

Recent History

There has been a customs union between Luxembourg and Belgium since 1921, except for the period 1940 to 1944 when the Grand Duchy was occupied by Germany. In 1944 Luxembourg and Belgium joined the Netherlands in the Benelux Economic Union which came into force in 1960. The Grand Duchy is a member of the European Economic Community and has played a full part in the post-war moves toward European integration. In November 1964, Grand Duchess Charlotte abdicated after a reign of 45 years, and was succeeded by her son, Prince Jean. After the fall of the Government in October 1968 Pierre Werner headed a coalition of the Social Christian and Liberal Parties from early 1969 until May 1974. Gaston Thorn succeeded him in June 1974 at the head of Luxembourg's first left-of-centre coalition of Socialists and Liberals. This government has pledged itself to tax and social security reforms and to the creation of an Ombudsman.

Government

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg is a constitutional hereditary monarchy. The Parliament comprises a Chamber of Deputies and a Council of State. The country is divided into 12 cantons.

Defence

Luxembourg is a member of the Western European Union and since 1954 of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Compulsory military service was abolished in 1967, but Luxembourg maintains an army of volunteers totalling 550. The defence budget for 1974 was 677 million francs.

Economic Affairs

The country enjoys great prosperity due to the iron and steel industry; and the inhabitants enjoy one of the highest levels of national income per head in the Common Market. There is full employment in the Grand Duchy. Large deposits of minette (iron ore) are found in the south-west. This ore, however, is insufficient to supply all the needs of industry and iron ore is also imported, as is the coal necessary for iron and steel manufacture. About 5.1 million tons of pig iron and about 5.9 million tons of crude steel were produced in 1973. Iron and steel comprise about two-thirds of the Duchy's exports. Policy since 1960 has been aimed at diversification, although the steel industry still provides around 25 per cent of G.N.P. The growth rate of the economy has been relatively slow owing to dependence upon the heavy steel and metallurgical industries. More dynamic factors, such as the chemical industry and finance, are assuming greater importance as the predominance of steel decreases. Luxembourg is a member of the European Economic Community, Benelux, the European Steel and Coal Community and EURATOM, and is the second capital of the Common Market.

Agriculture is a source of livelihood for 10 per cent of the population. Barley, oats and potatoes are grown in the north, and wheat, fruit and grapes for wine in the south. Cattle-raising is well-developed.

Luxembourg has adequate foreign investment and is now giving priority to the expansion of existing companies. Industrial relations are harmonious, with strikes rare and statutory minimum wages established. Although inflation increased from 2.3 per cent in 1969 to 10.6 per cent in late 1974 this is lower than in most other EEC countries, and Luxembourg enjoys relative economic stability with slow growth.

Transport and Communications

The railway system covers 271 km, of which 137 km. are electrified. The roads total almost 5,000 km., of which 25 km. were motorway and 865 km. main roads at the end of 1973. There is an airport at Luxembourg, served by Luxair, the national airline, and other international lines.

The canalization of the Moselle has given Luxembourg direct access to Rhine shipping through the port of Mervelt.

Social Welfare

Although virtually all types of employment are subject to compulsory social insurance, the Government does not itself operate the Social Services. They are administered by semi-public bodies, composed of Government representatives, and elected representatives of employers and employees. Social Service benefits are also guaranteed to foreigners in accordance with International Conventions signed with individual countries. Social insurance falls into four categories:

- (a) Accident Insurance is normally compulsory for all employers; contributions are paid by the employer. Benefits cover refund of the cost of medical treatment, compensation for loss of pay, widow and orphans' pension.
- (b) Health Insurance is compulsory for employees and the self-employed, and voluntary schemes cover most other categories of people. Employees pay two-thirds of the contribution and employers one-third. Benefits include refund of medical expenses in case of illness or maternity, and compensation amounting to 50 per cent of wages lost for a period of up to 6 months.
- (c) Invalid and Old Age Pensions: Contributions amount to 12 per cent of the salary shared equally by employer and employee. The self-employed also make compulsory contributions. The National Solidarity Fund provides a pension of at least 75,000 francs.
- (d) Family Allowances: Birth allowances of approximately 9,200 francs for the first child and 5,500 for each subsequent child are paid. There are also contributory allowances of approximately 800 francs per child under 19 (25 in the case of students).

LUXEMBOURG

Unemployment benefit amounting to 60 per cent of net wages is paid.

Education

Education in Luxembourg is compulsory from 6 to 15 years. German is the initial language of instruction at primary level. French is added to the programme in the second year and becomes increasingly important until it replaces German as the language of instruction at secondary level.

Pupils are selected for secondary school at the age of 12 on the basis of an entrance examination in French, German and arithmetic. The first year of secondary school is a general orientation course on comprehensive lines, which is then followed by a choice between two sections:

- (a) Classical Section, Latin is taught from the second year on, and English from the third year with an option in the fourth year between Greek and English. After the third year this section is again divided into Latin/Languages and Latin/Science sections.
- (b) Modern Section, with no Latin but compulsory English starting in the second year. After the third year pupils are divided into Modern Languages and Modern Languages/Science subsections.

The completed secondary course lasts seven years and leads to the Diplôme de Fin d'Etudes Secondaires which qualifies for University Entrance. For pupils who do not wish to attend Secondary School there are three-year supplementary intermediate courses leading to vocational or technical qualifications.

There is no university in Luxembourg (apart from the small Université Internationale de Sciences Comparées), so students attend foreign universities mainly in France, Germany, Belgium or Switzerland. In 1969 a Centre Universitaire was created offering:

- (a) Cours Universitaires corresponding to the first year of University and leading to the Certificat d'Études entitling the student to enter the second year of a foreign university.
- (b) Cours Complémentaires providing instruction in certain subjects specific to Luxembourg, e.g. Law, Teaching, etc.

Tourism

Luxembourg is famous for the beauty of its scenery. Many tourist resorts have grown up round the ruins of mediaeval castles such as Clerf, Esch/Sauer, Vianden and Wiltz. More tourists camp in Luxembourg than stay in hotels.

Sport

Football is the most popular game.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (Labour Day), May 8th (Ascension Day), May 19th (Whit Monday), June 23rd (National Day), August 15th (The Assumption), November 1st (All Saints' Day), December 25th (Christmas), December 26th (St. Stephen's Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), April 19th (Easter Monday).

Weights and Measures

The metric system is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 centimes = 1 Luxembourg franc (Belgian currency is also legal tender).

Exchange rates (December 1974):

1 Luxembourg franc = 1 Belgian franc;
£1 sterling = 86.50 francs;
U.S. $1 = 37.03 francs.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE Constitution now in force dates back to October 17th, 1868; but in 1919 a Constituent Assembly introduced into it some important changes, declaring that the sovereign power resided in the nation, that all secret treaties were denounced, and that deputies were to be elected, by Scrutin de liste, and by proportional representation, on the basis of complete universal suffrage. Electors must be citizens of Luxembourg, male or female, and must have attained eighteen years of age. Candidates for election must have attained twenty-one years of age. The Grand Duke chooses the Ministers, may intervene in legislative questions, and has certain judicial powers. There is a single-Chamber legislature, the Chamber of Deputies, with 59 members elected for five years. The number of deputies was enlarged to accord with the increase in population registered in the census of 1960. There are four electoral districts, the North, the Centre, the South and East. By the law of October 9th, 1956, the Constitution was further revised, by the following stipulation: "The exercise of prerogatives granted by the Constitution to the legislative, executive and judiciary powers, can, by treaty, be temporarily vested in institutions of international law." In addition to the Cabinet Luxembourg has a Council of State, which is the supreme administrative tribunal and also fulfils certain legislative functions, comprising 21 members nominated by the Sovereign.

As the result of negotiations concluded between Belgium and Luxembourg on December 22nd, 1921, economic union was established between the two countries. By the terms of this union the old customs barrier disappeared, and Belgian money became current in the Grand Duchy. The union, which was to last for fifty years, came into force on May 1st, 1922, and was renewed for a further decade in 1971.

Luxembourg's economic ties with Belgium and the Netherlands have become closer since the establishment of the "Benelux" economic union in September 1944, which was signed in 1958 and came into force in 1960 (see also Benelux chapter).

Luxembourg is a full member of all the major European organizations, such as the European Communities, OECD, NATO, WEU, UN, the Council of Europe and the European Monetary Fund.

In 1961, the Grand Duchess appointed her son, Prince Jean, to act as Lieutenant-Représentant and to exercise in her name "all the political and juridical prerogatives granted by the Constitution to the Sovereign of the State". Her action was in accordance with Article 42 of the Constitution. On November 12th, 1964, she abdicated in favour of Grand Duke Jean.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The lowest courts in Luxembourg are those of the Justices of the Peace, of which there are three. These are competent to deal with civil, commercial and criminal cases of minor importance. Above these are the two District Courts, Luxembourg being divided into two judicial districts. The highest court is the Superior Court of Justice, which acts both as a court of appeal, hearing decisions made by District Courts, and as a court de cassation. Very serious criminal cases are heard by the Court of Assizes. Special tribunals exist to adjudicate upon various matters of social administration such as social insurance. The Department of the Attorney-General is responsible for the administration of the judiciary and the supervision of judicial police investigations.

Judges are appointed for life by the Grand Duke, and are not removable except by judicial sentence. The judicial system of the Grand Duchy does not employ the jury system: Capital punishment exists technically but is no longer used in practice.

MALTA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The island of Malta, with the smaller islands of Gozo and Comino, is situated in the central Mediterranean 60 miles south of Sicily and 200 miles north of the African coast. Climate is warm; winter temperatures do not fall below 40°F (4.4°C); summer temperatures rise to 98°F (36.6°C). English and Maltese are the official languages though Italian is widely spoken. The state religion is Roman Catholicism. The national flag (proportions 3 by 2) consists of two vertical bands of white and red, the white band bearing the George Cross in the top-left corner. The capital is Valletta.

Recent History

After radical constitutional changes in 1947 and 1961, with an intervening period of internal restlessness, Malta passed from the almost total self-government she had obtained to the status of an independent sovereign state within the Commonwealth in September 1964. Malta joined the UN later that year and in 1965 was admitted to the Council of Europe.

In June 1971 a Labour Government under Dom Mintoff came to power with socialist and nationalist aims, notably to consolidate Malta's independence and national sovereignty, to improve social conditions and to achieve economic viability. The first Maltese-born Governor-General was appointed in July. Pursuing a policy of non-alignment, the Government has made friendly overtures to a number of countries. It has concluded agreements for cultural, economic and commercial co-operation with several East European countries, Italy, Libya, Tunisia, U.S.S.R., U.S.A., China and others, and has received technical assistance notably from Libya. It has affirmed, however, that none of Malta's port facilities will be made available to any of the Warsaw Pact countries or to the U.S. Sixth Fleet.

On taking office the Labour Government declared invalid the 1970 agreement with the United Kingdom, which had resolved the question of aid to Malta. Mintoff proposed a new agreement which would safeguard Malta's sovereignty and ensure that the economy benefited from the foreign base. After a misunderstanding over the terms of a temporary compromise made in September 1971, which led to partial withdrawal by British forces from Malta, a new agreement was signed in March 1972, under which Malta receives £14 million in rent annually until 1979, a further sum of £7 million, part grant part soft loan, from the NATO countries, and £2.5 million aid from Italy. In addition, to compensate for sterling devaluation, a sum of £800,000 was contributed by the five NATO countries excluding the United Kingdom. The size of the base and the freedom of movement allowed to Forces shipping have been reduced, and the agreement includes provisions that the base is to be used only by the United Kingdom for purposes of defence of the United Kingdom and NATO, that it will never be used against an Arab country and that any redundancies among Maltese civilian employees must be agreed with the Malta Government.

The present government's guiding policy is embodied in its Seven-Year Development Plan, outlined in 1973, whereby industry and the exploitation of natural resources are to be expanded considerably with a view to generating enough foreign trade to offset the losses incurred by the phasing-out of British military presence on the island.

Malta's foreign policy is aimed at improvement of the country's standard of living within the framework of full independence. To this end Malta became a Republic in December 1974. Sir Anthony Mamo, until then Governor-General, became President and Head of State.

Government

The Constitution of 1964 provided for Malta to have complete independence within the Commonwealth. The President is head of state. The House of Representatives is elected by proportional representation. In 1970 the number of members was increased by the Constitution of Malta (Amendment) Act from fifty to fifty-five. Government is by a Cabinet, which is responsible to the House.

Defence

Malta has no armed forces of her own, apart from the recently formed para-military Pioneer Corps of some 3,500, but has signed a defence agreement with the United Kingdom, and has received military aid from Libya. Malta's position in the Central Mediterranean has made it a useful part of the strategic defence of Britain and NATO. Part of Valletta harbour is used as NATO naval headquarters in the Mediterranean. The Royal Air Force has airfields at Ta'Qali and Hal Far and also uses the civil airport at Luqa, where it operates flight control.

Economic Affairs

During Malta's long association with the British military presence in the Mediterranean, much economic activity was generated by the expenditure of British military personnel stationed on the island and by the supply of services to the defence establishments. However, the subsequent rundown of these forces due to a cut-back in United Kingdom military expenditure caused large reductions in their contribution to the Maltese economy and redundancies among the Maltese personnel they had employed. After 1959 the Maltese economy had to be rebuilt, and a development programme was formulated which aimed to establish export-orientated manufacturing industries and to promote the Maltese Islands as a tourist resort. Local products being exported now include textiles, footwear, chemicals and plastics; and tourism is of major importance, growing annually, except for a set-back in 1970. New industries and building for the tourist trade have been encouraged by the Malta Development Corporation. Ship-repairing at Malta drydocks is another important activity, since Malta is ideally situated in the centre of the Mediterranean. Since June 1971 the drydocks have been re-organized extensively and have received a large number of orders for repairs and shipbuilding. Expansion is envisaged, including an increase in facilities for shipbuilding and the production of non-maritime heavy industrial equipment. Agricultural exports include potatoes, onions, tomatoes and flowers.

The Labour administration which assumed office in June 1971 took steps to revitalize the island's economic structure. Despite development planning the national debt had reached £M43 million by that time and the boom in foreign investment in real estate had come almost to a halt. The Government put a check on public borrowing, attempted to eradicate abuses in the public sector and introduced wages and prices controls. By 1973 the G.N.P. at factor cost stood at £M108.3 million, an increase of 10 per cent over 1972. The balance of payments remained strong and exports rose by about 14 per cent and imports by some 32 per cent over 1972, thus narrowing the visible trade gap. In March 1972 a Pioneer Corps was established to counter the unemployment problem and reduce emigration.

The new agreement with the United Kingdom and other agreements with various countries for loans and aid, in particular a six-year interest-free loan from China of £Stg. 16.93 million from May 1972, have secured at least in the short-term additional resources for the implementation of a new economic development plan, of which the objective is economic viability by 1979 and freedom from dependence on earnings derived from the foreign military base. Malta's total investment needs over the plan period have been assessed at around £M213 million, of which £M94 million will be invested by the Government on infrastructure and social capital projects, as well as on direct productive activities. The terms of Malta's association agreement with the European Community, which dates from April 1971, are being reviewed.

Transport and Communications

There are 1,224 km. (765 miles) of roads. The international airport is at Luqa. The main harbour, Valletta, is used annually by over 3,000 vessels.

Social Welfare

Social Security is provided under the National Insurance Act, 1956, the National Assistance Act, 1956, and the Old Age Pensions Act, 1948. The National Insurance Act provides for a comprehensive scheme of Social Insurance.

Other Social Welfare programmes include social work with families, care and protection of children and a probation service. These services are provided under different statutes and subsidiary legislation.

Education

Education is compulsory between 6 and 16, and is free in government schools and the university. Secondary education begins at the age of eleven, lasts five years and leads to the Ordinary Level of the General Certificate of Education. However, at 14, students can opt for craft courses of three or four years' duration in technical institutes and trade schools with a view to gaining City and Guilds of London qualifications. Upper Secondary education provides two-year courses leading to the Advanced Level of the G.C.E. Further education is available at the Royal University of Malta, the Malta College of Art, Science and Technology, and the Malta College of Education. There are also evening classes for adults, various technical and art courses and crash courses at government industrial training centres. Special schools exist for the handicapped. Under an education project inaugurated in 1974 there are to be established new kindergarten (for children under 6) and schools of music, electronics and navigation.

Tourism

The island has climatic, scenic and historical assets. Excavations indicate the existence of an advanced culture dating from 2000 B.C. There are fine beaches. Tourism continues to be a major source of Malta's income. Tourists come mainly from Great Britain, Italy, Germany and Sweden, and efforts are being made to advertise more widely and to attract more visitors in winter. In the first nine months of 1974 239,148 tourists visited Malta.

Sport

Football is the most popular game.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (St. Joseph the Worker), May 8th (Ascension Day), May 11th (Carnival), May 29th (Corpus Christi), June 29th (St. Peter and St. Paul), August 15th (Assumption of Our Lady), September 8th (National Day), November 1st (All Saints' Day), December 8th (Immaculate Conception of Our Lady), December 25th (Christmas Day).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 6th (Epiphany), February 10th (Shipwreck of St. Paul), March 19th (St. Joseph), April 16th (Good Friday).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of weights and measures is in force (See under Great Britain), but the Metric System is also widely used.

Currency and Exchange Rates

1,000 mils = 100 cents = 1 Maltese pound (£M).

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 88.79 Maltese cents;

U.S. $1 = 38.02 Maltese cents.

THE CONSTITUTION

Malta became a republic in December 1974. Details of the new draft republican constitution were not available early in 1975.

The Independence Constitution was presented in draft form to the Legislative Assembly on the 31st March, 1964, and put to a referendum in May, where it was approved by 54.5 per cent of votes cast (representing 40.3 per cent of the electorate). The result of the poll was 65,714 "yes" and 54,919 "no" with 9,016 invalid votes. It was accepted with minor amendments by the United Kingdom Government, and the Malta Independence Act received the Royal Assent on 31st July, 1964.

The Malta Independence Constitution adopts a monarchical system with a Governor-General representing Her Majesty The Queen. Maltese citizens are also citizens of the Commonwealth. The Constitution includes provisions that:

The national language and the language of the courts is Maltese but both Maltese and English are official languages.

The religion of the Maltese people is recognized to be the Roman Catholic Apostolic Religion and the State guarantees to the Roman Catholic Apostolic Church the right freely to express its proper spiritual and ecclesiastical functions and duties and to manage its own affairs.

An independent Public Services Commission consisting of three to five members is appointed by the Governor-General on the advice of the Prime Minister to make recommendations to the Prime Minister concerning appointments to public office and the dismissal and disciplinary control of persons holding public office.

The Judicature is independent.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES

The Constitution upholds the right to work and to reasonable hours of work, the safe-guarding of rights of women workers, the encouragement of private economic enterprise, the encouragement of co-operatives, the provision of free and compulsory primary education, and the provision of social assistance and insurance.

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS OF THE INDIVIDUAL

The Constitution provides for the protection of the right to life, freedom from arbitrary arrest or detention, protection of freedom of conscience, protection from discrimination on the grounds of race, etc.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL

The Governor-General normally exercises the executive authority on behalf of Her Majesty the Queen but, except in certain specified cases, is required to act in accordance with the advice of the Cabinet. He appoints the Prime Minister, choosing the Member of the House of Representatives whom he judges to be able to command the confidence of a majority of the Members, and on the advice of the Prime Minister he appoints the other Ministers, the Chief Justice, the Judges and the Crown Advocate General.

THE CABINET

The Cabinet consists of the Prime Minister and such number of other Ministers as recommended by the Prime Minister.

PARLIAMENT

The normal life of the 55-member House of Representatives is five years, after which a general election is held.

Election is by universal adult suffrage on the principle of proportional representation. The age of majority is twenty-one years.

DEFENCE

The Defence Agreement and the Financial Agreement concluded between the Maltese and United Kingdom Governments in 1964 were renegotiated during 1971, and a new settlement was reached on March 26th, 1972.

MONACO

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Principality of Monaco occupies  $1\frac{1}{2}$  square kilometres on France's south-eastern Mediterranean coast. The climate is fine and warm with very mild winters. The languages are French and Monégasque (a mixture of French and Italian). Most of the population are Roman Catholics. The national flag (proportions officially 5 by 4) has two horizontal stripes of red and white. The capital is Monaco-Ville.

Recent History

In 1962 a new Constitution was introduced granting more power to the elected National Council. Also in 1962 the French Government set up a customs barrier outside the Principality to exercise stricter control on the movement of goods between the two countries. In May 1963 the barrier was lifted and a new Convention was signed bringing many French companies established in Monaco under the fiscal authority of France.

Government

Legislative power is exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which consists of eighteen members elected for a term of five years by universal suffrage. Executive power is vested in the hereditary Prince and the Ministers of State assisted by four Government Councillors. The Prince represents the principality in its relations with foreign powers, and signs and ratifies treaties.

Economic Affairs

Revenue is derived mainly from transactional laws, the sale of tobacco, postage stamps and tourism. Nationals of Monaco do not pay taxes. In 1972 France paid the Principality an indemnity of 12.3 million Francs in lieu of Monégasque customs rights.

Tourism

The pleasant climate and the amenities of Monte Carlo, including the world famous Casino, have made Monaco a leading centre for tourism both in summer and winter. In 1972, 137,094 tourists visited Monaco.

Public Holidays

1975: May 19th (Whit Monday), August 15th (The Assumption), November 19th (National Day), December 25th, 26th (Christmas).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 27th (St. Devote, Patron Saint of the Principality), April 19th (Easter Monday).

Weights and Measures

The metric system is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

French currency: 100 centimes = 1 franc.

Exchange rates (December 1974):

£1 sterling = 10.63 francs;

U.S. $1 = 4.55 francs.

THE CONSTITUTION

This small Principality has been in existence since about A.D. 968. It was abolished under the French Revolution and First Empire, but it was re-established in 1814; and in 1815 was placed under the protection of the Kingdom of Sardinia by the Treaty of Vienna. In 1848 Mentone and Roccabruna asserted their independence, and in 1861 Charles III ceded his rights over the two towns to France. With the concurrent withdrawal of the Sardinian garrison, Monaco ceased to be a Sardinian protectorate and became an enclave of France. On January 7th, 1911, Prince Albert, great-grandfather of the reigning sovereign, Prince Rainier III, promulgated a Constitution (modified November 18th, 1917), which provided for a National Council elected by a panel of 30 members composed of delegates of the municipality, and 21 electors appointed by universal suffrage. The legislative power was exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which contained 18 members elected for five years. The executive government was exercised, under the authority of the Sovereign, by the Minister of State, assisted by the three members of the Council of Government.

On December 17th, 1962, a new Constitution was promulgated by Prince Rainier. Any future amendments to this may be made only with the approval of the elected National Council. The text maintains the traditional hereditary monarchy though the principle of divine right is renounced. The right of association, trade union freedom and the right to strike are guaranteed. The Supreme Tribunal safeguards fundamental liberties. The Constitution also bestows the franchise on women.

THE NETHERLANDS

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Kingdom of the Netherlands is situated in Western Europe, bounded to the east by the Federal Republic of Germany and to the south by Belgium. Its northern and western shores are washed by the North Sea. Much of the land lies below sea level. Climate is temperate. Apart from Malta and Monaco, the Netherlands is the most densely populated country in Europe. The language is Dutch. About 30 per cent of the population is Protestant, 40 per cent is Roman Catholic and 26 per cent does not profess any religion. The national flag (proportions three by two) carries three horizontal bands of red, white and blue. The capital is Amsterdam but the seat of government is The Hague, the third largest city.

Recent History

The Netherlands was occupied by Germany during the Second World War. Following her liberation in 1945 she chose to abandon a traditional policy of neutrality, subsequently becoming a member of WEU and NATO. In 1944 the governments-in-exile of the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg chose to join together in the Benelux Economic Union. The Dutch are among the strongest supporters of European integration, and the Netherlands is a founder member of EEC. Indonesian forces in the Dutch East Indies opposed the return of the administration in 1945 and in 1949 independence was granted to the archipelago which became known as the Republic of Indonesia. In 1962 Indonesia laid claim to Dutch New Guinea and responsibility for the colony was handed over by the Netherlands in April 1963.

The country was ruled by Catholic/Socialist coalition governments from 1945 to 1959, by a Catholic/Protestant coalition from 1959 to 1965, and by a general coalition in the years 1965 and 1966. Piet de Jong's Catholic/Protestant/Liberal coalition Government took office in April 1967, and despite the various religious and political views reflected in its composition maintained a stability beneficial to the country's economy. After the general election in April 1971, which produced a swing to the left, the new Socialist party joined the coalition Government formed in July by Barend Biesheuvel. The five-party coalition broke down in July 1972 after two ministers, members of the DS'70 Democratic Socialist Party, resigned in protest against planned budget economies to curb inflation, leaving the Government without a workable majority in the Second Chamber. Premature elections held on November 29th were dominated entirely by the inflation issue. The results marked a major setback for the "confessional" parties, reducing their combined number of seats in the new Lower House from 58 to 48. It was not until May 11th, 1973, that the two formateurs appointed by the Queen to form a new government were able to do so. All the while, amid considerable industrial unrest, the Biesheuvel administration had remained in power in a caretaker capacity. The new Government was a left-of-centre coalition of three "progressive" parties (the Labour Party, the Radical Political Party and the Democrats '66) and two "confessional" parties (the Catholic People's Party and the Anti-Revolutionary Party) under Joop den Uyl, chairman of the Labour Party parliamentary group in the Second Chamber.

This administration has made progress towards its principal aim of redistribution of wealth by modifying the fiscal structure and by guaranteeing minimum wage levels for all adult workers. It has also taken a cooler attitude to the EEC's Regional Fund policy and has cut back on projected defence expenditure with a view to tackling more immediate domestic problems.

Government

The Netherlands is a constitutional monarchy. Parliament is bicameral, consisting of the Lower Chamber or Second House elected by all citizens over 18 years of age voting on a basis of proportional representation, and the First Chamber or Upper House, which is elected by Provincial Representatives' Councils. The Cabinet holds executive power. The Upper Chamber can accept or reject legislation but only the Lower Chamber can amend it. The Sovereign must give assent to all Bills.

Defence

The Netherlands is a member of NATO. Military service is compulsory between the ages of 20 and 35 for a period of between 16 and 21 months. Total strength of the armed forces is 131,500, comprising army 77,000, navy 27,000, air force 24,000 and military police 3,500. Defence estimates for 1975 total 7,164 million guilders.

Economic Affairs

Since the war the Netherlands has industrialized rapidly and agriculture has been mechanized and developed. The agricultural labour force has dropped from 20 to 7 per cent of the total labour force since 1947. Despite high population density there is a surplus of agricultural produce made possible by land reclamation, intensive scientific cultivation and co-operative crop distribution. Seed crops, bulbs, horticultural and dairy products account for one-quarter of exports. About 37 per cent of the working population is in industry which, because of the shortage of home-produced raw materials, is mainly processive. The Netherlands' three most rapidly expanding industries are oil-refining, chemicals, and metallurgy. Industrial output includes steel, metals, transport equipment, chemicals, oil, radios, textiles and ships. Chocolate, biscuits, margarine and other foodstuffs are also important. The Netherlands has always been a major trading country and its principal exports are foodstuffs, machinery and chemicals. Major trading partners are Federal Germany, France, Belgium/Luxembourg and the U.K., whilst American, Japanese and British investment, especially in banking and technical fields, is strong and on the increase. Amsterdam is the centre for the trade in tobacco, diamonds, precious metals and art treasures. Oil and natural gas fields under territorial waters are being explored, while reserves of an estimated 2,400,000 million cubic metres of natural gas are already being exploited.

In common with other western European countries, the Netherlands has been experiencing inflation. The average annual increase in consumer prices over the period 1971-73 was 8 per cent, rising to around 10 per cent in 1974, still a comparatively low figure by current EEC standards. The Arab oil embargo, imposed in late 1973, did less damage than expected but, even so, the balance of payments surplus of that year declined considerably in 1974 while the trade balance deficit more than trebled. Increasing natural gas sales helped to offset these difficulties, however, and overall growth in G.N.P. of at least 2 per cent was provisionally predicted for 1974.

Transport and Communications

A third of all freight is carried on inland waterways, of which there are 5,587 km. There are 2,832 km. of state-operated railways providing mainly passenger services. The Netherlands is one of the world's leading shipping countries. In 1974 the merchant marine numbered 5 passenger ships, 324 freighters, 295 coasters and 78 tankers. The Rotterdam complex, incorporating the Europoort for mammoth tankers, is the main port of the EEC, and also the busiest port in the world. It handled some 300 million tons of traffic in 1973, and further development is planned. Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM) is the world's oldest commercial airline and has services to all parts of the world. Schiphol, Amsterdam's airport, handles about 300,000 tons of freight and 8 million passengers a year. There are 82,488 km. of roads in the Netherlands, of which some 1,400 km. are motorways.

Social Welfare

The Netherlands' first Social Insurance Act was passed in 1901. Since that time, and particularly since the Second World War, numerous advances have been made in making coverage more comprehensive. The 1967 Health Insurance Act now covers incapacity to work for up to one year, regardless of cause. After this time, compensation is paid (at 80 per cent of the previous income) according to the Working Incapacity Act of 1967. Health insurance is compulsory for wage earners, and voluntary for non-wage earners whose incomes are less than fl.23,000. Contributions are made jointly by employer and employee. There are four general National Insurance acts covering Old Age Pensions, Widows' and Orphans' Pensions, Children's Allowances, and Special Sickness Expenses. A further four acts, applicable specifically to workers, cover Health Insurance, Working Incapacity Insurance, Unemployment Benefits, and Family Allowances.

Education

There are two types of school in the Netherlands: (1) public schools maintained sometimes by the state, but more frequently by municipalities and attended by about 30 per cent of all school children; (2) private schools which are for the most part denominational and are attended by 70 per cent of the school-going population; they are subsidized by the State often up to 100 per cent. Schools are administered by school boards, responsible to the local authorities or to the private organizations that run them, thus providing teachers with considerable freedom. The Minister of Education and Science is responsible for educational legislation and its enforcement. In matters of general education he is advised by an Education Council made up of university representatives.

Education is compulsory in the Netherlands from 7 to 15. The primary school course lasts six years and is followed by various types of secondary education. (1) Pre-University Schools provide various six-year courses that prepare pupils for university education: (a) The Gymnasium teaches Latin and Greek. In their final two years pupils are divided into A classes specializing in Classics and B classes specializing in Mathematics and Science; (b) The Athenaeum does not teach classics. In their final three years pupils are divided into A sections specializing in economic and social sciences and B sections specializing in mathematics and science; (c) The Lyceum combines the above two types of school on comprehensive lines. (2) General Secondary Education comprises higher, middle and lower secondary schools, providing 5, 3-4 and 2-year courses respectively. It does not prepare for university, though middle and higher secondary schools may be followed by section courses at pre-university schools. Lower secondary schools are replacing the two-year continued primary schools and are now generally being incorporated into lower vocational training schools. (3) Vocational Schools are run on similar lines to the general secondary schools and provide courses in all aspects of secondary and higher technological education. There are seven universities, three technical universities and four other colleges of university standing.

Tourism

The chief attractions are the out-lying islands; the old towns, the canals, the cultivated fields of spring flowers, the art galleries and modern architecture. In 1973 nearly 2,600,000 tourists visited the Netherlands.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom.

Sport

Football is the most popular sport, closely followed by gymnastics and skating.

Public Holidays

1975: May 5th (Liberation Day), May 8th (Ascension Day), May 19th (Whit Monday), December 25th and 26th (Christmas).

1976: January 1st (New Year's Day), April 16th (Good Friday), April 19th (Easter Monday), April 30th (Queen's Birthday).

Weights and Measures

THE NETHERLANDS KINGDOM

Under the Constitution the State (the Kingdom) of the Netherlands consists of territories in Europe (the Realm in Europe of the Netherlands) and those overseas: Surinam (Dutch Guiana) and the Netherlands Antilles. Under the Statute of the Realm signed by Queen Juliana in 1945, the Netherlands Surinam and the Netherlands Antilles were constituted as a single realm under the House of Orange, thereby ending the former colonial status of Surinam and the Netherlands Antilles.

THE MONARCHY

The Netherlands is a kingdom with responsible and popular government. The Constitution regulates the succession and regency in great detail. When no heir exists, the last Sovereign and a Joint Assembly of the States-General (of a size augmented to double the usual numbers) shall designate the successor, and the Joint Assembly shall act of itself if the Sovereign previously dies. The Council of State shall assume the powers of the Sovereign until such time as an heir shall have been appointed. Normally the succession is in the direct male line or, failing a male, in direct female line. The age of majority of the Sovereign is 18.

ELECTORAL SYSTEM

All citizens over 21 are eligible to vote.

The Parliamentary Assemblies are called the States-General and consist of two Chambers, a First and a Second Chamber. The Second Chamber is composed of 150 members, and is elected for four years on a system of Proportional Representation. The First Chamber is composed of 75 members, elected, since 1848, by the Provincial Councils for a term of six years, one-half retiring every three years. All Netherlands who have reached the age of 25 are eligible for election to the States-General.

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

For all the political actions of the King the ministers are responsible to the States-General. Consequently the power of the Crown (i.e. the King and ministers) to dissolve either or both Chambers is ultimately subject to the judgment of public opinion as interpreted by the States-General and the Cabinet itself. A revision of the Constitution in 1922 made the right of the King to declare war and conclude international agreements (treaties, etc.), dependent upon prior parliamentary sanction. New clauses laying down the conditions under which sovereign powers may be transferred to international organizations, and acknowledging the supremacy of international law, have recently been included in the Constitution.

The Constitution says nothing about a Prime Minister or a Cabinet: it merely declares that the King establishes ministerial departments, and appoints and dismisses the ministers. Democratic development has enforced upon the Crown the principle that the King shall appoint a Cabinet through the choice of a Cabinet-former, who usually, though not necessarily, will have a majority in Parliament.

Ministers have the right to speak in both Chambers, but not to vote. They are submitted to the questioning and criticism customary in democratic legislatures. The States-General has one ordinary session annually, which normally lasts the whole year, and the King, through the Cabinet, can call others. Legislative power is in the joint authority of the States-General and the Crown (i.e. King and Ministers). The two Chambers must agree on legislation, but while the First Chamber has a power of acceptance or rejection, only the Second Chamber has the power of amendment. The budget, like all common laws, is first presented in the Second Chamber. Revision of the Constitution is possible after two readings in Parliament, and a two-thirds majority on the second reading.

THE COUNCIL OF STATE

There is a Council of State, presided over and appointed by the Sovereign, usually from notable personages, and the Cabinet and King consult this body on legislative and administrative policy, and upon the issue of decrees. The Council is also the highest Court of Appeal in administrative disputes.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The Netherlands consists of eleven provinces. The administrative organs are the Provincial States, the "Deputy States" and the Governor of the province. The Provincial States—directly elected, as is the Second Chamber, on a basis of proportional representation—form as it were the Parliament of the provinces. From its members each elects a college of Deputy States to act as Executive Committee of the province. The Governor is the representative of the Crown in the province and is appointed, as well as discharged by the Crown. He is Chairman of the Provincial and Deputy States. By virtue of the Constitution, the Provincial States have the right of making their own decisions on measures in the interest of the province.

The municipalities (about one thousand in number)—each governed by a burgomaster (also appointed by the Crown), assisted by aldermen (chosen from and by the Council) and the Council elected by the local inhabitants—have the right to make local regulations.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

- De Hoge Raad der Nederlanden (The Supreme Court of the Netherlands): The Hague; f. 1838. For appeals in cassation against decisions of courts of lower jurisdiction. As a court of first instance the Supreme Court tries offences committed in their official capacity by members of the States-General, Ministers and some other high officers. Dealing with appeals in cassation a court is composed of five justices (raadsheer). Pres. Supreme Court G. J. WIARDA; Vice-Pres. C. W. DUBBINK, P. EIJSSEN; Procurator-Gen. M. S. VAN OOSTEN; Attorneys-Gen. W. J. M. BERGER, J. REMMELINK, F. C. KIST, Th. B. ten KATE, J. VAN SOEST; Sec. of the Court M. J. C. REYERS.
- Gerechtshoven (Courts of Appeal): 5 courts: Amsterdam, Arnhem, 's-Hertogenbosch, Leeuwarden, The Hague. A court is composed of three judges (raadsheer); appeal is from decisions of the District Courts of Justice. Fiscal Divisions (Belastingkamers) of the Courts of Appeal deal with appeals against decisions relating to the enforcement of the fiscal laws (administrative jurisdiction). The court at Arnhem has a Tenancy Division (Pachtkamer) composed of three judges and two assessors (a tenant and a landlord); this division hears appeals from decisions of all Canton Tenancy Divisions. A Companies Division (Ondernemingskamer) is attached to the court at Amsterdam, consisting of three judges and two experts as assessors.
- Arrondissementsrechtbanken (District Courts of Justice): 19 courts for important civil and penal cases and for appeals from decisions of the Canton Judges. A court is composed of three judges (rechter); no jury; summary jurisdiction in civil cases by the President of the Court; simple penal cases, including economic offences, generally by a single judge (Politierechter). Offences committed by juveniles are (with certain exceptions) tried by a specialized judge (Kinderrechter), who is also competent to take certain legal steps when the upbringing of a juvenile is endangered.

Kantongerechten (Canton Courts): 62 courts for civil and penal cases of minor importance. A court consists of a single judge, the Canton Judge (Kantonrechter). Each Canton Court has a Tenancy Division (Pachtkamer), presided by the Canton Judge who is assisted by two assessors (a landlord and a tenant).

Justices and judges must have graduated in law at a Dutch university, and are nominated for life by the Crown. The justices of the Supreme Court are nominated from a list of three compiled by the Second Chamber of the States-General.

ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTION

Ambtenarengerechten (Civil Service Courts): 10 courts for civil service arbitration. The Civil Service Court at The Hague also acts as Military Service Court for military service arbitration, and hears appeals against decisions on persons for ex-civil and military servants.

Centrale Raad van Beroep (Central Appeal Council): Utrecht; tries in supreme instance appeals against decisions of the Appeal Councils and the Civil Service Courts; Pres. C. J. A. KONING; Sec. Jhr. A. BAUD.

College van Beroep voor het bedrijfsleven (Board of Appeal for Trade and Industry): Hears in first and last instances appeals against decisions enforcing social-economic legislation.

Raden van Beroep (Appeal Councils): 10 courts to hear appeals against decisions enforcing social insurance legislation.

THE PRESS

Newspapers appeared in the Netherlands as early as 1618 in Amsterdam and they soon flourished there and spread to other cities. The first constitution in 1796 declared that "the freedom of the press is sacred" but Napoleon prevented this from being put into practice. However, in 1848 article seven was inserted in the constitution, which stated: "No person shall require previous permission to publish ideas or sentiments by means of the press, without prejudice to every person's responsibility before the law." This article still guarantees the freedom of the press, but Netherlands law does not recognize the right to reply nor the right of a journalist to protect his source of information. However, the growth of the press was still hindered after 1848 by the oppressive newspaper duty. When this was removed the press developed rapidly and when the first socialist newspaper appeared in 1900 every important political and religious group in the country had its own newspaper. The freedom of the press was temporarily curbed by the German occupation in 1940, but a large "underground press" quickly grew and soon became stronger than the "official" press. Several of the papers which started at that time still survive.

There are nine dailies which circulate throughout the country and over 100 provincial newspapers. A few papers appear in several different regional versions. A distinguishing feature of the Dutch press is that it is aimed at the family and most of the papers are read in the home. Most of the papers appear only in the evening, though the trend towards morning editions is growing, and some 96 per cent of the total circulation is sold by subscription. As street sales are negligible there is practically no sensational press. Although 60 per cent of the papers are officially independent, most have some definite political bias.

In spite of the large circulation much important revenue from advertising has been lost since 1968 to radio and television and many papers have been in financial difficulties. There have been several mergers and liquidations in recent years and in August 1971 the Government announced that they would allot ten million guilders to help the press out of its difficulties and to preserve the traditional diversity of the press which is regarded as essential for a democratic state. The subsidy was increased to thirty million guilders in June 1972, and negotiations are currently in progress on the revision of the conditions governing subsidies. The programme of subsidies has not been a success, however, and the Catholic daily, De Tijd, was the first major casualty when, in late 1974, it changed to a weekly rather than fold.
